The new house built last summer and fall is planted with sweet peas. Florence Denzer, a standard white for winter blooming, constitutes about twenty-five per cent of the stock; Christmas Pink, about sixty per cent, and Wallacea, the catchy name given to that sterling lavender, Mrs. Alexander Wallace, about fifteen per cent. Some idea can be formed of the sweet peas from the size of the house, 64 x 250, a vast affair, seemingly none too high for the vigorous, long-legged peas that are climbing skyward so rapidly.

New Carnations

Wodenethe, the perfect white. This variety is delightfully fragrant and will average in size larger than any other Carnation in cultivation. Stem stiff and the calyx positively will not split. Every bloom is a high grade flower. Look over your whites and notice the percentage of splits during the month of December and then figure that WODENETHE in the same bench would not split at all. Immediate delivery.

Step in and see it growing and judge for yourself.

Brooklyn, Weber's new pink seedling. Freer than any other Carnation I have ever handled. You will buy this flower eventually; why not buy it now?

Prices on these two Carnations, $12.00 per hundred; $100.00 per thousand.

THE NEW YELLOW FORCING ROSE SUNBURST

This magnificent, giant yellow rose has been tested for three years in our benches; it stands head and shoulders above all other sorts of its color and will rank with American Beauty and the Killarneys in value and grandeur—because

It has a long, pointed bud, which can be cut tight for market. It is pre-eminently a long-stemmed rose. The stem is always stiff. It is free in bottom breaks. Is extraordinarily vigorous and healthy. Belongs in the class of Big Roses. Its keeping qualities rank with the best. Buds shipped from Richmond last December opened up perfectly in both Philadelphia and New York, where it scored 90 before the Florists' Club.

The color is orange-copper or golden orange and golden yellow, all intense shades, extremely brilliant in effect.

Come and see it growing; we have 8,000 of it benched.

Does splendidly out of doors; will rank high as a bedder. At the Chicago show, 1910, it was awarded the silver cup for the best new rose never before exhibited, and the judges unanimously gave it honorable mention additional. Has created a sensation wherever shown.

Raised by M. Pernet-Ducher, from whom we bought the American rights.

We have divided our stock with Mr. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., to give eastern growers a chance to see it growing. Will be distributed March 1 in America by C. H. Totty and The E. G. Hill Co. Mr. Pernet will distribute same date in Europe.

The American price is $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000 (own roots); $5.00 per 100 additional for grafts the older houses. Mr. Harvey thought that the strain grown by Ernst F. Hoehl was superior to his own; he has therefore sown Mr. Hoehl's seed throughout, reserving only a few of his own for comparison. The mignonette is grown for a winter crop, from Thanksgiving until January, when it is replaced by young stock from the carnation propagating house.

The entire place looked well. The two modern houses form an interesting comparison with the older houses; the stock in the newer houses did not appear to be any better than in the old-style houses adjoining, but the newer houses are undoubtedly more easily heated and more economically operated. It is probable that a comparison made in the end of February would not be so favorable for the old-timers as today.

DANVILLE, ILL.

Frank B. Smith & Sons report increased sales for Thanksgiving. Pot plants sold well. They had a fine lot of cyclamens, poinsettias and Begonia Glory of Cincinnati. Chrysanthemums were all cleaned up. American Beauties were short. Violets and valley sold well. They have a seedling carnation of Lawson color that is decidedly promising. They are raising a number of seedlings with a view to getting a strain especially adapted to their soil.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

A man about 40 or 45 years old, weighing about 180 pounds, and well dressed, who was identified by letters as E. A. Presley, of Baltimore, Md., was killed by L. & N. passenger train No. 39, near Robinson, Harrison county The body was found a few minutes after by the crew of a local freight train. It was badly mangled and the clothes torn. One of the letters on the unfortunate man was a letter of recommendation from E. G. Hill Co., which recommended Presley highly and indicated that he was a florist.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

Growers of the dahlia and gladiolus in the middle west, specially in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan and contiguous territory, do not want to miss the bulb show to be held under the auspices of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, in Chicago, December 15 and 16. Through the courtesy of the A. L. Randall Co., 66 Randolph street, the association has been given free of charge all the room needed for the display of stock. So come, everyone interested, and see what kind of stocks are and can be raised in the west. Everybody invited, all members of the trade and the amateur. Florists would do well to take a few hours off and come to the show for general information as to varieties, etc. Those who grow but a few dahlias or gladioli for their own trade are cordially invited to come. A few hours spent in getting acquainted with the newer varieties may be of value when you come to select from the seedsmen's catalogues what you may need.

Exhibits should be sent, all express charges prepaid, to the A. L. Randall Co., 66 Randolph street, owner's care, if you intend to come personally and look after the unpacking and placing. Or they may be placed in care of the secretary, who will be on the ground the forenoon of December 14 to look after any that may be so ordered. Proper tags will be placed on every exhibit, with the owner's description, etc. Come and bring the best you have if you are growing, and attend the evening meeting at the Sherman House if possible.

The evening meeting will be held at the Sherman House at 7:30. The program will be as follows:

"The Dahlia and Its Future," by W. K. Fletcher, Des Moines, Ia.
"The Gladiolus and Its Future," by A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.
"Hybridizing and Culture," by H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, Wis.
"The Association and Its Membership," by E. T. Barnes, Spencer, Ind.
"American Bulbs," by E. S. Thompson, Benton Harbor, Mich.

Short discussions will follow each paper and all are invited to take part.

E. S. Thompson, Sec'y.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business is reported good by all dealers and growers. Chrysanthemums were in great demand and had a good lead on all other stock; carnations were second. Violets and roses sold well. Chrysanthemums have been rather scarce the last few days. All good stock was sold, however, at an advance in price over last week. There is a demand for a good medium grade, something that would sell for $6 to $8 per hundred, there being a good demand for such stock in the stores. Additions to the whites last week were Jeanne Nonin and Helen Frick, which always are in demand.

Carnations are not at all plentiful and all good flowers appear to move off at good prices. Good crops are now looked for, with prospects of an exceptionally heavy crop for the holidays. Violets are good and prices quite satisfactory to the growers, a great many more being grown than usual. Never has the preference for single violets been more prominent than it has been this fall.

Various Notes.

The Maryland State Horticultural Society will hold its annual show in the Fifth Regiment armory December 5 to 8. Although the armory is commodious, its capacity will be taxed to the utmost to take care of the exhibits.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that F. H. De Witt, of Wooster, O., offers for registration the geraniums described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

General Wayne—Seedling of S. A. Nutt crossed with Jean Oberle; large, semi-double flowers, borne in large trusses; color, rich carmine; foliage small; habit and foliage like Jean Oberle.

Aviator Rodgers—Seedling of Mme. L. Bisquit; large clusters of semi-double flowers; color, bright salmon; bushy habit.

Daybreak—Seedling of L'Aube crossed with Jean Oberle; double florets; small foliage; color, darker pink than Oberle.

Aviator Atwood—Seedling of S. A. Nutt crossed with Jean Viaud; semi-double florets; large trusses; medium sized foliage; growth like Jean Viaud.

Public notice is hereby given that the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa., offers for registration the cannas described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Conowingo—The color of this flower is an intense, fiery scarlet. Its foliage is an unusually beautiful plum color at the base, shading to rich olive green at the tip. The stately flowers are freely produced and stand well above the foliage, thus showing themselves off to good advantage. Height, four to five feet.

Splendour—The most impressive quality in this canna is the firm, well spread out formation of the flowers, which are an intense scarlet color and very large. It makes two or three bloom heads on each stalk, insuring flowers practically all the time, as new blooms are constantly appearing before the older flowers fade. Splendour is a fitting name for such a magnificent canna. Green foliage. Height, three to three and one-half feet.

Wabash—The bronze-leaved Rosea gigantea. Flower is unusually large, petals broad and borne in great abundance, well above the magnificent foliage of deep purple brown, striped bronze green. Height, four feet.

Beacon—Because of its abundance of bloom, this canna is notably effective. The moderate-sized flowers are borne in great, impressive heads of rich cardinal red. When seen in a row or bed the flowers show a mass of bloom that for color effect we think is unparalleled.

Kate F. Deemer—The grand flowers open a rich, oriole yellow, which gradually gives place to turkey red in the center and throat of the flower, in striking contrast with the rest of the blossom, which turns almost white. The rich yellow buds on reddish brown stems combine with the yellow and white flowers, surmounting rich green foliage, to make a fascinating combination that always looks fresh and attractive. Height, three to four feet.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business was good last week and the supply of flowers has shortened somewhat, and mums will soon be gone. All the florists report a good Thanksgiving trade. Cut flowers sold well and evergreen wreaths for the cemeteries were in fair demand. Carnations retailed at from 60 to 75 cents per dozen; roses, $1.50 to $2; violets, $1.50 per hundred; Paper Whites, 50 to 60 cents per dozen. Plants are selling well, ferns being in most demand. Stevia is in full crop and there is some candytuft to help out.

Funeral work is good. We are having excellent weather now, with the nights just below freezing and plenty of sunshine during the days.

Various Notes.

E. Y. Peirce is cutting nice Killarneys, both white and pink, and his carnations are looking good.

R. H. Woodhouse had some nice mums for Thanksgiving.

A. B. Hathaway is cutting some fine Paper Whites.

S. S. Peckham, of Fairhaven, is sending in nice carnations. W. L.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The Saltford Flower Shop reports excellent business. Mums went well. My Maryland is proving a most satisfactory rose, grown in solid beds at the warmer end of the house. Stock planted in August is yielding a heavy crop. The seedling fancy carnation, Vassar, is giving an excellent account of itself and is popular with the best trade. A house of poinsettias in solid beds, for cutting, is a picture; they have stems of extraordinary length, with immense heads of bloom. The double variety is also grown; while stronger, it is later than the single. These are grown for special customers. The house of orchids is one of the best investments made. A big crop of lælias is in sight; the flowers are used as fast as they appear.

Murphy & Schaumburg report the biggest bulb season on record. They force possibly the largest number used by any retailer in the Hudson valley.

Conrad C. Gindra notes an increasing call for plants and will devote more space to this branch. He reports the best season in mums ever experienced and has a batch of Jeanne Nonin that is as fine as one could wish to see.

PREPARE FOR THE HOLIDAYS!

A house full of Godfrey Aschmann's Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in bloom and bud for Christmas, ready for shipment.

Leader in Azalea Indica, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Palms, Etc. Lead you into wealth.

Cheap, Good, Reliable. Don't be deceived—be on the lookout! Buy only from the man who is well known to be in a position to give you Good Bargains and Good Stock. Can handle largest order on short notice.

AZALEA INDICA.

In bloom for Christmas.
One of our specialties.

Already forced for Christmas, showing color, with pretty open flowers, stored away in cold houses, ready for shipment. Deutsche Perle, double white; only large sizes of this variety are offered at $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Vervaeneana, double rose variegated; only large sizes can be offered at $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Simon Mardner, double pink, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Mme. Petrick, pink, double, one of the earliest, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Pharailde Mathilde, white striped Vervaeneana, some people call it White Vervaeneana, new variety, very handsome, very rare, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Remember that only the best, healthy plants must be selected for Xmas; poor, small, weak azaleas won't force successfully for Xmas.

Azaleas for Easter, all the leading varieties, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Leader in Ferns—Scottii, Scholzeli, Whitmani and Boston. 6 houses stocked with them; 10,000 in all sizes and varieties now ready, never before better than this year; 5, 5½ in., 25c, 35c; 6 in., only 50c, 75c to $1.00. Scottii, Whitmani, Scholzeli, 4-in., 15c to 20c; fine to grow on. Giatrasii, 4-in., 20c; 5-in., 25c and 30c. Boston, Whitmani, and Scholzeli, 7-in. pots, as large as a bushel basket, 75c to $1.00. Our ferns are all pot-grown—not lifted from benches.

Ferns. Cordata Compacta, 4-in., 15c to 20c.

Ferns for dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, $4.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Wilsoni Ferns, 3 plants in a 6-inch pan, very bushy, 25c to 35c per pan.

Asparagus Plumosus, 2½-in., 3c; 3-in., 5c; 4-in., 10c and 15c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, large, 4-in. pots, 15c; medium, 4-in., 10c; 2½-in., $3.00 per 100.

Adiantum Hybridum, the new improved beautiful maidenhair fern. Large 4-in., 15c; medium 4-in., 10c, large 3-in., 8c.

Ficus Elastica (Rubber Plant), 5¼-in., 25c; 5½ to 6-in., 20, 25 to 30-in. high, 35c, 40c, 50c; 7-in., all staked up, 35 to 40 in. high, 75c to $1.00. We have the finest rubbers in the country.

Cyclamen Grandiflorum, 4-in. pots, 25c; 5¼-in., 35c.

Cineraria Hybrida, Aschmann's well-known strain, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

This is one of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2,000 to 3,000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were crackerjacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 3-in., 12c to 15c. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine Betty Anderson, a new, fine begonia. Have only large plants in 7-in. pots at $1.50 per plant.

Begonia Erfordii, our newest improved strain, pink and brigha red flowers. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, 20c; 5¼-in., 25c to 30c.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, 4-in. pots, 35c and 40c; 5½ to 6 and 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

Just Arrived with the azaleas a fine consignment of Latania Borbonica, in first-class condition. Perfect foliage, 8 good leaves—height given in consular invoice, 35 to 40 inches, fit for 7 and 8-in. pots, $1.50 to $2.00. Combination Latania Borbonica (3 plants), 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 in. high, forming a bush of about 14 leaves, which give them an attractive appearance, $1.00 to $1.25.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4. 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50; 4-in., 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, which came on the same steamer as azaleas, are potted off combination plants (made up with 3 plants), 22 to 25 inches high, having 12, 13 to 15 leaves to a pot (in 6-in. pots), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00, according to height; still larger sizes, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; single plants, 5 leaves, 22 to 25 in. high, stocky 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, only 50c, worth 75c.

Cocos Weddelliana, made up of 3 plants, 4 to 5-in. pots, 30c, 40c to 50c; 3-in., single, 15c; 4-in., single, 25c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, suitable for fern dishes, 16, 18, 20 to 25 in. high, 20c to 25c; 5¼-in. pots, 24-in., 35c.

Sago palms, 5-in. pots, small leaves, 2, 3, 4, 5 leaves to a plant, 20c, 25c, 30c and 35c per plant.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c; 7-in., 50c. Only pot-grown, will force successfully for Easter.

Solanum or Jerusalem Cherries, our well-known prize strain, the multiflorum, 6-in., 25c, 35c, 40c to 50c. Never were so fine as this year, just right for Xmas; big plants, full of ripe red berries and with green berries ripening on.

Primula Obconica, 5½-in., in bloom, 25c.

Primula Chinensis, John Rupp's best strain, 4-in., 10c; 5-in., 20c.

Shasta Daisies, pure white, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; seedlings, $1.00 100.

Poinsettias in prime condition for Xmas, in bloom; 3-in., short, stocky, suitable for filling pans, 15c; 4-in., also suitable for filling pans, 25c; 5½ to 6-in. pots, all pot grown, single or branched plants, medium height, 35c, 40c and 50c per plant; 8-in. pans, 3 plants in center and border of Asparagus plumosus around, only 75c per pan —suitable for basket work or to cut.

ARAUCARIA EXCELSA

With Xmas approaching there is always a big demand for Araucaria Excelsa. What looks nicer at Xmas time than an Araucaria properly dressed up with a nice pink, red or lavender ribbon, tied around the plant about half way up? It is a good keeper and keeps its beautiful evergreen foliage (tiers) green and perfect for years; when all other plants are withered, the Araucaria is in full glory, admired by all in the family. We are well prepared for the Araucaria orders and are the leaders, as we have always been for the last 25 years. 6000 can be seen in our greenhouses, all sizes and prices. 5½-in., 3-year-old, 15 to 20 in. high, 3 to 4 tiers, only 50c; 6-in., 4-year-old, 20, 22, 25 to 30 in. and over in height, 4, 5 and

Araucarias Our Specialty

No Arguments Needed

6 tiers, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; specimen plants, 7-in., 30, 35 to 40 in. high, 5 to 6-year-old, 6, 7 to 8 tiers, green from bottom up, at a bargain price seldom offered; just look, only $1.50 to $2.00. Worth double. Will you let such a bargain pass unnoticed?

We also have the stock—the best obtainable in Belgium—of Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca; short, bushy jewels—none better in the world. 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

All plants 25 at 100 rate. Cash with order, please. All plants must travel at risk of purchaser only.

WHOLESALE GROWER, IMPORTER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was a decided improvement over other years. Roses, carnations and mums were in demand, mums especially, and these were plentiful. Roses were off crop, but carnations were more plentiful. Business for November in general was greater than last year and the weather has been favorable for growing. The month was unusually cold, but the sun was much in evidence. Chrysanthemums are about gone, but there will be a few coming in for a week or two.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons enjoyed a large November trade. The funeral work was not so heavy, but they had about forty decorations during the month and this, with their other work, kept them on the go. The mums are about gone, but the carnations are full of buds and look fine for Christmas. Not many flowers were seen, but the fact that they are cut so closely to supply the demand explains this. The roses also look good for a Christmas crop, the two Killarneys especially being full of buds, but Emil Niednagel says he doesn't care much whether the crop is on for Christmas or not, as they will have enough to do anyhow and the roses are always in demand at other times.

The Blackman Floral Co. looks for a heavy crop of carnations for Christmas. They will have an abundance of seasonable plants also, but the crop of roses will not be so heavy. More mums will be planted next year, as they did not have nearly enough of their own this season and had to buy large quantities. This firm will build two new houses soon; the material is being gathered together now. George Blackman says he had a chance to get a lot of glass at a bargain and took advantage of it and bought. Frank Woelz has taken charge of the roses in place of Harry Wallis, who left a few weeks ago.

J. C. Elsperman reports a fine trade for Thanksgiving, it being much better than last year. He had lots of mums and about cleaned them out, but will have a few for a week or more.

Mrs. Seymour has so far regained her strength as to be up and about the house. She is improving steadily.

Miss Nellie Goodge is gaining and is looking much better.

T. L. Metcalfe, of Hopkinsville, Ky., who opened a store at 210 West Fifth street, didn't last long and gave up the store the day after Thanksgiving.

PANSIES.

HOME OF PANSIES.

Our strain of pansies is unsurpased. We have scores of testimonials. Here is what a few of my customers say—Audubon Park Association, New Orleans, La., writes: "Pansies received in good order. Thanks." J. M. Breckenridge, Savannah, Ga., sends us an order and says: "I bought plants from you last year and found them very satisfactory." The Pansy Floral Co., De Land, Fla., sends us an order and says: "Plants we got from you last year were fine." Industrial School and Gardens, Mobile, Ala., says: "The pansies you sent were in good shape when received and are doing nicely." They sent us another order. We have a large stock of Our Own Specials, Masterpiece, Perret, Trimardeau, black, yellow, blood red, etc., all kinds mixed, $2.50 per 1000. 5000 for $10.00.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, OLEAN, N. Y.

Pansy Park Perfection is the best strain of giant show and fancy pansies, largest in size and of the greatest variety of rich and rare colors, the reds and bronzes in large proportion. The growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years. Over 75 varieties mixed. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5,000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Special attention to southern orders and delivery in good condition guaranteed. Cash with order.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

Think of the strain of pansies containing light, dark, lavender, violet, blue, bronze, royal purple, red, cerise, salmon, mahogany, yellow and red and gold shades, a dozen or more varieties in each shade, of immense size with great form and substance. They are MASTODON PANSIES. It has cost us hundreds of dollars and eighteen years' time to upbuild this strain and it is worth all it cost. We guarantee perfect order delivery everywhere and we guarantee satisfaction. Plants, 50c 100; $3.00 1000; $12.50 5000, prepaid.
Steele's Mastodon Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore.

Matamoras, Pa.—Colonel Quick has two houses planted with carnations that are unusually interesting to members of the craft who visit here, on account of the fact that there is no top ventilation, all the air considered necessary being conveyed through the open doors. How this plan will succeed during the severe weather is what puzzles the boys, but the Colonel, who has been in the business many years with success, says it can be done. The result is awaited with interest.

THE EASTERN FUEL MARKET.

Conditions in the anthracite trade have not changed to any appreciable extent since our last report, excepting that the demand for all sizes of anthracite coal has increased and the prices for steam sizes have advanced, which condition is likely to prevail from now on.

The opinion throughout the anthracite coal region is that there will be labor trouble April 1, and it seems to us that it is advisable for every consumer of coal to provide himself with a reasonable amount of stock.

As to the bituminous coal market, conditions have improved considerably during the last month, the demand being better and prices higher. This applies to all grades. This condition, in our judgment, is a natural one at this time of the year, but is also affected by the prospect of labor trouble in the bituminous coal fields April 1 next.

STEAM FROM ENGINE BOILER.

I have a forty horse-power boiler, now used for steam and attached to an engine. Can I disconnect it from the engine and connect the whistle pipe to the steam pipe to give me more steam? The steam pipe is 2½-inch. How many returns would this require, or can I run steam the same as hot water? The highest point in the greenhouse is about six feet higher than the top of the boiler. Is there some way of doing what I propose, or will it be necessary to change the heating system to hot water? The house is 20x150 feet. I am located in northwestern Oregon.

J. H. N.

With a boiler of the size mentioned, it would probably be possible to get more steam from it by using an opening larger than two and one-half inches in diameter, and if the whistle pipe is as large as one and one-fourth inches it would be of some assistance if the two could be connected. However, it would give about the same results if the steam pipe were enlarged to three inches close to the boiler. This should also be done if the whistle pipe is connected. In case, however, there is only one house, 20x150 feet, to be heated, a 2½-inch steam pipe will be amply large; in fact, a 2-inch flow would answer for most parts of Oregon, unless more than 50 degrees is desired.

For 60 degrees in zero weather, run a 2½-inch flow two feet under the ridge, with a slight fall, and at the farther end of the house connect it with eight 1¼-inch returns. These can be on the walls, or from two to four could be under the benches. If the boiler is so high that the lower part of the returns will not be two feet above the water level, a steam trap or pump should be put in, to return the

KROESCHELL BOILER FACTS

Kroeschell Boiler Saves 35 Tons Coal

"I bought a No. 7 boiler in 1901. It takes care of 10,500 sq. feet of glass and could take care of 5,000 more. Must state that I am in business for 25 years and have attended to many boilers, but I must say for your boiler that it has given better satisfaction than any other, being easier to fire up, and it is easier to keep the temperature with your boiler in our houses than it is with any other.

"I used 35 tons of coal less than I did with the boilers I had before. I can keep the temperature to 75 to 80 degrees during the severest weather, if it is necessary to do so."

DETROIT.

The Market.

The last week was good for everybody and Thanksgiving business was excellent, cleaning up all the mums, roses, carnations and other good stock. The Monday and Tuesday preceding Thanksgiving found a large supply of chrysanthemums coming into the market, so that the wholesalers were thinking that they were to be flooded, but the market took a turn, as it always does for this holiday, and at the last minute it was a hard tussle to get enough good stock to fill all the orders. Large mums were scarce Thanksgiving eve. Roses sold well and there was a shortage of the pink and red, so that a good many orders for these colors had to be canceled. Violets sold well and there was no surplus. Pompon mums sold out nicely, but at medium prices. The new pompon, Helen H. Newberry, was in good demand. The wholesaler handling this stock reports sending out over 600 bunches of it. This pompon is still coming into the market and the report from the growers is that it can be held as late as Christmas. Of valley there was just enough to meet all demands. Carnations were fine and sold out well, the top price on these being $4 per hundred. This market is being well taken care of in this line. Paper Whites and Romans were to be had, but there was no rush to get this stock. Potted mum plants were to be had, but did not sell so well as the growers expected. Stevia is to be had and has sold well to date. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and the supply of fancy ferns and galax is equal to all demands.

Various Notes.

Thomas F. Browne has been a heavy shipper to this market, bringing in a load of from 500 to 1,000 mums every day since the season opened. He also has had some fine pompon plants, which met with ready sale.

Chas. Plumb is busy these days getting ready for Christmas and has his new packing shed about ready. He has a fine lot of poinsettias in pans.

Albert Stahelin, of Redford, has his carnations looking fine and will have a big cut for Christmas. The stock and less water space than is contained in any other boiler. (Note the many flues set close together.) This is one reason why the users of the

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was all that could be desired and stock in general was cleaned up nicely. Roses were in good demand, with the supply just about equal. Carnations were not overplentiful and were all cleaned up. Mums were in great demand and all the good ones went out early. There were large quantities on the market, but the greater part of them were overripe and the poor stock was not cleaned up. Sweet peas were a trifle scarce and were all cleaned up early. Violets proved good sellers and also disappeared in good season.

The mum season is about over here, there being only a few stragglers here and there. Everybody in the trade seems glad they are gone. Carnations, roses, narcissi, Romans, etc., will have to take the place of mums now. This line of stock is on the increase and will be coming in heavily in the next few weeks, as several of the growers have been planning to have heavy crops right after mums are gone and it looks as though a few were going to hit it about right.

LORD & BURNHAM COMPANY'S NEW PHILADELPHIA MANAGER.

On Nov. 10, 1911, D. T. Connor, who has been associated with Lord & Burnham Company's Philadelphia office for the past few years, resigned his position.

As we announced in these columns a month or so ago, Mr. Montague C. Wright, who for the past seven years has been associated with Lord & Burnham Company's New York office, was at that time made manager of the Philadelphia office and southern territory. Mr. Wright, as an old Philadelphia boy, was for several years in the employ of Frederick H. O'Neill, who was then sales agent in that section for Hitchings & Company's greenhouses. Mr. Wright is a man of broad greenhouse experience, having handled some of the largest contracts of the firm in both the commercial and private field. Having started in the business by doing the practical sides of the work, he has the advantage of a thorough understanding of its every detail. In planning and designing various lay-outs he has been particularly successful.

Associated with Mr. Wright will be Mr. Woodward, who, in his recent position as manager of the pipe frame construction department at the Company's Irvington factory, has had exceptional opportunities for acquiring experience in both the manufacturing and selling phases of the greenhouse business. With such a combination of sales ability the Company's friends in the Philadelphia section and the great south will certainly be well taken care of.

Thinking perhaps you didn't see this important news note about our Philadelphia office when it appeared in a recent number of one of the florist papers, we reproduce it here.

Some Convincing Evidence

FIGURES state facts, and when we say we have sold 217 houses in the Philadelphia and the southern territory in the last year or so, it sounds decidedly convincing to you.

It's a lot more interesting and convincing than that old moth-eaten statement, "We build houses from Maine to California." One in Maine, one in Chicago and one in California could answer to that claim.

But still you say, "Anyone can give figure facts; what we want to know is who these 217 are."

And that's exactly what we want you to know.

Call at our Philadelphia office and we will show you their names and tell you just the kind and size of houses they built.

If you haven't the time to do this just now, then let us send you the names of some of these customers that are in your particular territory who have houses—houses that it will pay you to go and see before you decide who is to build your next house.

If we can do satisfactory work at a satisfactory price for these 217 in this territory, for example, we can do it for you, no matter in what territory of the United States or Canada you are.

Come and see us if you can.

If you can't, then be sure to write us.

BASKETS OF PLANTS.

Nowadays no flower store can get through a Christmas without a lot of baskets of plants—as well try to get along without cut flowers. When the plant basket came, it came to stay. In its original form it was a comparatively simple affair, but it made a hit. The hit was as much with the retail florists as it was with the flower buying public, for the florist had found it difficult to get as many cut flowers as he needed for his holiday trade and he welcomed all additions to the supply. The public was, of course, more or less tired of the regular items of cut flower stock and gladly bought the plant arrangements. The plants cost hardly so much as the cut flowers, so there was room for the florist to exercise his dexterity in building large and complicated baskets and hampers of them. Of course they went to extremes—when any new thing makes a hit the natural tendency is to run it into the ground. But the basket of plants is so good a thing that it can't be killed—overdoing wouldn't extinguish the plant basket, as it does the things that have no real merit back of them.

Naturally there was a reaction—there always is where anything is carried too far. But the reaction did not drive the plant basket off the scene of the Christmas scramble; not a bit of it. Indeed, probably a good many florists would say there had been no reaction, and perhaps they are right so far as their own cases or localities are concerned. The plant basket was more or less slow to make its way into the smaller cities. Florists there at first thought that their trade would not take to them, and they did not need the addition to the supply of stock so badly as the city florists needed it. It was in New York that these baskets had their first popularity and it was there that they were developed into huge affairs that sold at prices that couldn't last. Better taste came to prevail, and now the plant arrangements seen in the stores patronized by even the wealthiest people usually are comparatively modest affairs. They are not the miscellaneous mixtures of other days, but are put together with as much skill and artistic appreciation of form and color values as are shown in the best of cut flower designing.

With comparative simplicity in the baskets of plants there has come a much wider sale for them. In almost every town throughout the length and breadth of the land the flower stores show plants more or less in holiday attire. In the first place little thought was given to natural arrangement. Now many plants are sold in the pot in which they were grown, only the pot is put into some fancy receptacle; or the plant is shifted to a basket, or an appropriate piece of pottery—something in which its individuality will be given expression rather than be smothered in a mass of foliage and bloom. The change in style has been of advantage to everyone; it has let everybody into the game—sellers and buyers; it has increased the supply and variety of stock and added immensely to the number of sales.

CHRISTMAS CUT FLOWERS.

In the last few years we have heard a great deal about the sale of plants at the holidays, and after each one of these festivals we are told that it was a "plant Christmas," or a "plant Easter." But the fact remains that cut flowers still constitute the best selling part of the stock. Not only do customers enjoy sending boxes of flowers to their friends, but they really prefer, if the truth were told, to buy cut flowers for their own holiday uses. Many a free spender who wants to remember his friends for Christmas sends each a box containing a dozen Beauties. Metropolitan florists frequently have a number of such customers; men who simply hand out the addresses of those to whom the gifts are to be sent, and after having left quite an order such a customer almost invariably calls up later to add a few names at first overlooked.

A good many retail florists have pushed the plant end of the business at Christmas simply because cut flowers have been high and the opportunity for profit, even at the high retail prices, less than the opportunity to make money on the plants. Another thing which has been in favor of the plants was that the stock is less perishable; orders can be put up in advance and delivered the day before Christmas, while with cut flowers it usually is a case of putting up orders in the early hours of Christmas morning and making immediate delivery.

Inexpensive Arrangements of Plants and Greens, Such as These, Are Great Sellers at Christmas.

A Good Example of the Mixed Basket of Plants.

The changing times rather remove the objection of inadequate supply of cut flowers. Of recent years there have been enough, or nearly enough, and with the great increase in glass the chances of any extreme shortage are reduced to the minimum. In these modern times there seldom is a holiday when stock is not to be had in the big wholesale markets. Furthermore, prices are not so high as they once were. Perhaps one pays as much for a rose, but he gets a much better rose, and the same is true of practically all other cut stock. A good many florists who once put most of their energy into pushing plant arrangements are now turning once more to cut blooms. This is especially true of those high class stores which want to do just a little differently from what is done by their less pretentious competitors.

CENTERPIECE OF POINSETTIAS.

The illustration on this page is an interesting example of what the camera sometimes does to a really attractive arrangement of plants or cut flowers. The subject was a table centerpiece of poinsettias and in the original it was ideal for the purpose. But the picture fails to show the proportions. To begin at the beginning, the basket was one of those Japanese affairs that have had so good a run the last year or so. It was dark red, or reddish brown, in color and not over four inches deep. With a pan to confine the moisture and planted full of poinsettias only a few inches high, with a dwarf araucaria in the center, it made a distinctly all right centerpiece for a Christmas table. The color combination was excellent, the color of the basket going well with the red of the poinsettia bracts as well as with the foliage, and the araucaria helped out, for it broke the flatness of the arrangement as well as working into the color scheme. But the camera, which of course could not catch the colors, failed to carry a correct idea of the form of the arrangement. It was low and wide, for a large round table. Because a view straight from the side gave no suggestion of the attractiveness of the top view, the photographer tipped the basket a bit, to get a little of the effect of the view from above, with the result that the finished picture greatly increased the apparent height of both basket and plants. It looks as though it was as high as it was wide, though in reality the height was not much more than half the width.

TELLING THE STORY.

One of the places at which the flower trade is weak is in telling the true story of the merchandise to prospective customers. How many salesmen know the history of the goods they offer? Quite a few, undoubtedly, but it is a commonplace with them. How many of them make use of the story in interesting their customers? Hardly any.

The big city department stores make a study of the science of selling. The department managers study their lines; they pick out the interesting points, and sales people and advertising staff are instructed. It's always a big help. And sometimes it results in a story like this in a Chicago daily:

"There is hardly a family in all Chicago that won't want a real live Christmas tree in the house Christmas morning, so the store has secured 30,000 of them. They are the genuine Norway spruce, the most popular of all evergreens for Christmas trees. They are 5 years old, twenty-four inches in height, carefully grown nursery stock, imported from France when 3 years old and transplanted in Miami valley, Ohio, for the last two years. Nursery stock was chosen because it is hardier and more uniform in shape than the wild or natural trees."

These are the now popular table trees. Of course the grown-in-France business is the merest commonplace of the nursery trade in evergreen seedlings, but it was the point that caught the newspaper's attention, as it would the attention of many others.

Centerpiece for a Christmas Table.

A Basket of Christmas Greens—a Study in Color Harmony.

BASKETS OF GREENS.

A flower store is to sell flowers, isn't it? But how often have you seen a customer come in, look around, walk up and down, hesitate, and come completely to a standstill because the stock in trade this Christmas was exactly the stock in trade last Christmas! There are not many ways a retail florist can diversify his offerings for gift purposes, but one of the ways is to think up different arrangements for the staples of his stock.

The illustration on this page shows an arrangement of Christmas greens that has made a hit. It does not appeal to the customer who wants something big and showy, but rather to the person of finer taste, to whom the spirit and not the substance is the thing that counts. This was one of those inexpensive Japanese baskets, reddish brown in color. It was low, with a big, strong handle, for show, because the weight of the basket was trifling. In the basket were all the Christmas greens—the very best quality, you may be sure. There was hemlock, holly, mistletoe and California red berries, arranged with the deftness that marks the man designed by nature for this calling. The handle carried a big bow of No. 80 satin ribbon of just the shade of the red berries, and the basket, with its perfect color harmony, was as effective a gift as one of discriminating taste could imagine.

TEMPERATURE FOR STORES.

I should like to learn what is considered the best temperature for a flower store. T. S. C.

A flower store should not be kept too warm. An average temperature of 60 degrees is about right. The room should also be as light as possible and should be properly ventilated. In such a store the stock will keep well and give good satisfaction. H. S.

THE CHRISTMAS GREENS.

How to Keep Them in Condition.

A leading feature of the Christmas trade in many flower stores is the greens business. In even the highest class stores holly and other wreaths are indispensable and, with the average store, the trade in greens has grown till it takes up a great deal of time. We must either make up these wreaths and garlands ourselves or buy them. Some can be bought to advantage, while others are difficult to get in the right quality for a particular trade. Having these wreaths and wreathing in sufficient quantity, ready in advance of the demand, and kept so that they will be in good order for Christmas eve, will require no little thought and management. If you make up your own greens you can not put it off till the last day, when everybody is on the jump with other work, but must make them up several days before sale. Then it is that how to keep them right will be worth knowing. A good many don't know how and sometimes find their Christmas stock, after all the work and worry, is not green but lemon yellow.

Holly and Holly Wreaths.

Without doubt holly is the most important article in this line. It should not be exposed to severe weather. The cases should be stored in a cool shed. Either heat or dryness will shrivel it up. A cool, rather moist cellar would be the ideal place. It is desirable to sort it over on arrival or while your workers are making it up. Use the short stuff for making wreaths and the good, heavily berried branches and sprays for selling loose, as there is a great demand for nice stock that way.

If you do not have the cool, moist cellar for storing the loose branches, and more particularly the wreaths when they are made up, perhaps a week ahead of time, they keep well beneath a bench in a cool greenhouse, laying coarse paper on the ground, to keep the wreaths clean, and newspaper over them, to keep the light away. The light hurts, even if the place itself is cold and damp; so shut out the light. Do not put down more than two layers of the wreaths, or the weight will flatten out the lower ones. Some florists make their holly wreaths double and some make the back of lycopodium.

If you are like most of us there is a grocery on the corner that will sell holly wreaths for 15 cents. You can meet the price, if you want to, for you can buy wreaths such as the grocer sells for $90 per thousand, but your trade will not want that kind. Just have a few to show—they cost only 12½ cents by the dozen—it will help the sale of better wreaths.

If the florist has a sale for light wreaths he hardly can make them as cheaply as he can buy them. Of course there is no great quantity of holly used on single wreaths and, if one works in red winter berries in place of the natural holly berries, a low grade of holly will do. Still, the average florist will find he can not make his cheap wreaths so economically as he can buy them. The big dealers in the city, who employ hundreds of "girls," have wreath making down to a fine point. They pay only about 2 cents for making a wreath of the lightest kind and the women are so expert that they put them up far faster than a green hand can do. Consequently one gets the same wreath cheaper than he can make it, or he gets a better wreath for the same money.

But when it comes to fine wreaths, then the florist has to make them himself. First of all he must get good holly, then he must use a lot of it, and he must take the same pains he would with a wreath of flowers. A cheap wreath is on a wire ring, but a good one is on rattan; also, it has a piece of good ribbon on it. Fine wreaths can not be made up much in advance unless you have a special place to store them in. You can't lay a big, full wreath down or its weight will crush it. Hang them up in the cool, moist cellar. If you can do that you can make in advance all you need and have them ready when wanted for sale or delivery.

Evergreen Wreathing.

Evergreen wreathing once was the item of second importance in Christmas greens, or perhaps even first, but it isn't so any more. Some florists still handle it in quantity, but it is scarcely sold at all in the high class city stores. Its principal use is in exterior decorations. It browns up quickly in a warm room. Even while in crates, unpacked, some cloth or covering should be thrown over it to keep the exposed outsides from losing the fresh green color. To dip the bunches in water for a minute or two will make the sprays pliable and easier to work, but if overwet it will all the quicker turn brown or black after being made up.

The wreathing that is made up by tens of thousands of yards and sold to the florists for them to retail is apt to be thin, because competition and the rising price of the raw material, bouquet green, has brought the price down too low for the manufacturers to turn out a really good article; you can't get something for nothing at Christmas any more than at any other time. Consequently many florists prefer to make their own wreathing and then store it away in a frame or cool shed, but always covered, so that the light and air will be excluded as much as possible. If you use only a moderate quantity of light wreathing you probably can not make it as cheaply as you can buy it; it only pays to go into making it if you want a specially heavy article or if you want the usual grade in considerable quantity. The big dealers in wreathing keep the cost of labor lower than the average florist can get it. They pay only about 65 cents per 100 yards for making the wreathing sold at about 3 cents per yard. Hire inexperienced women, none too strong at that, and they will not make living wages at that rate, nor will they turn out so good an article of wreathing. Besides, you have the bother to figure on.

Miscellaneous Greens.

For indoor decorations wild smilax is the space coverer; nothing to beat it, but keep it cool while you hold it. For fine wreaths, balls and bells, boxwood sprays have come into great popularity. For good decorations in or on large buildings, laurel wreathing is a fine article. It is a pretty green, clean, does not drop and has not the cheap look of the evergreen wreathing. Use it where you can. It is perhaps double the cost of the evergreen wreathing, but it looks it and is worth it. You can buy by the yard, made up, cheaper than you can buy the sprays and make it up yourself. You can get it in any grade your trade calls for. No amount of frost hurts it. A coldframe, with the light excluded, is a good place for it, but don't make too great a thickness of it, for it flattens out and then is anything but ornamental. That is the only trouble with the wreathing you buy; it needs to be ruffled up and shaken out.

There are any number of other Christmas greens, some of them quite important in certain localities, but those mentioned are the ones in general use practically everywhere.

Mistletoe.

Of course you must have mistletoe, but you should not count your profit on it before you have the cash in the register. Mistletoe profits are much like those counted on unhatched chickens. A few people will say there are no "privileges" allowed with the native species and will have nothing but the imported article, but the great majority do not know the difference. It is not of record that the mistletoe, which has such charming associations, lends extra bliss to the exercise under the bough when well berried, but certain it is that it often reaches the florist quite berryless. The berries are in the bottom of the case. If you buy ten dollars' worth of mistletoe, you will, perhaps, get your money back, but you won't do that if you leave it in the case and let every clerk maul it over when wanting to select a 50-cent spray. Unpack and sort it and put a price on each group, so that each salesman can readily pick up what his customer wants. Handling will ruin it.

Christmas Trees.

Don't keep the Christmas trees indoors, or they will drop their needles.

The downtown stores in the cities no longer handle Christmas trees, but the florists in the outlying districts sometimes meet the grocer and the tree peddler on their own ground and hold their own. Some who still push the Christmas tree business keep a list of those who have bought in other years and go after the orders several days ahead of the appearance of the trees at the corner grocery. They call up on the telephone, or send a salesman, or mail a reply postal card; at least they put the tree question to every customer who comes to the store. In those ways it is possible to round up a good bunch of orders ahead of delivery time. Of course, if you get up any Christmas greens literature, it should be mailed to all the well-to-do people in your neighborhood. The florist ought to make an effort to have a little better grade of greens than can be bought of the provision stores or street salesmen with whom he comes in competition, and the same way with trees. A lot of people know a good, shapely tree when they see it. You can sell a lot of these if you have the stock and facilities.

Table trees still are new in many localities. These are little fellows, not over two feet high, and are sold with some sort of base to hold them upright. A piece of tree four to six inches in diameter, sawed into disks an inch or two thick, makes a good support. If the trees, as you buy them, are not already fitted out, bore a hole in the center of the disk, sharpen the end of the little Christmas tree, drive it into the hole, and there you are, all ready for the decorator. You can sell a lot of these, either in the altogether, as the painters say, or dressed. There is scarcely any limit to the elaborateness of the trimming. Florists who have wealthy trade have put the trees in handsome baskets and rigged them up with electric lights, etc., to the point where the selling price was that of a good basket of blooming plants.

THE STORE WINDOW.

There are two distinct types of windows, not to take into consideration the windows that are intended to illustrate some special event. So many department stores have Santa Claus in the window the week before Christmas that the florist around the corner usually prefers to leave that sort of thing alone at the holidays and stick to the straight flower display. Then he has the two choices: He may either crowd it full of stock, or he may put in only a little. There seems to be no middle ground; either the window must be simple in the extreme or it must be so full that it strikes the eye as a riot of color.

The simple window is a difficult proposition, for it takes a real artist to so arrange one that it does not look bare rather than attractive. Also, there is the somewhat general belief that the simple window does not sell goods the way the well filled one does. For these reasons the average florist fills his window as full as it well can be filled. He crowds it. This is specially true of the downtown stores, where many people pass. They usually have a good share of the stock-in-trade in the windows, and quite a few have the windows fitted up for refrigeration, using them just as the ice-box is used. The managers of these stores are thoroughly convinced of the truth of the saying that in this business you can not sell what you haven't got, and they aim to show the people that they have got the goods. This class of window could not be any fuller at Christmas than it is at other times—the chances are that it is not so full, for some of the cut flowers probably have been removed to make way for the display of Christmas specialties, bright and gay. There are bells and more bells, wreaths and more wreaths, balls and ribbons and mats—and don't forget the lights! It takes a good eye to fill up a window and avoid a clash of colors, but at Christmas everything is so red that the danger is reduced to a minimum.

VAPOR ON STORE WINDOWS.

Please learn for us if you can, through your columns, how the florists in the north build their store windows so that sweat and frost will not form on the glass. T. S. C.

Nothing is more discouraging to the window trimmer in a retail flower store than to find that all his efforts are obscured by a coating of moisture or frost on the plate glass. In almost every line of business this same trouble is experienced, but we florists get the worst of it, on account of the presence of so much moisture in the air. The trouble, however, can be prevented to a certain extent. I say, to a certain extent, for it is practically impossible to prevent steaming of windows on some days.

A circulation of air on the inside of the glass is one of the best remedies. In order to obtain this, various methods of construction are in use. In the first place, the air must have some means of entering just below the glass, either through holes in the sashes, or by means of ventilators, or sashes specially constructed for this purpose. The cool air, on entering, becomes warm and rises, passing out through an outlet above the show window, and thus a continuous flow of air is produced. The opening above is usually in the form of a transom, built into the prism glass now used so extensively. In extremely cold weather, however, there is danger of freezing your window display, especially during the cold nights; this danger necessitates the checking of the current of cold air, and there is a subsequent steaming of the glass.

Some flower stores have a 1-inch or 2-inch opening between the floor of the window and the sill, so that the warm air arising from a steam or hot water pipe may prevent the moisture from freezing or entirely obscuring the view. Double glass, I believe, has been used to prevent steaming, but this I do not think practical.

The firm with which I am connected opened a new, modern store November 1, and the show windows are built as I first suggested, so that air enters through specially constructed sashes and also through two ventilators. We have already had outside temperatures as low as 15 degrees above zero and have experienced no trouble. A large conservatory adjoining the store is well ventilated; so, also, are the store and workroom.

Some firms resort to the use of electric fans, from which air currents are directed diagonally against the glass, but this is costly and you know what this strong current of air will do to flowers in your window.

A liquid composed of two-thirds alcohol and one-third glycerine, applied lightly to the glass, will keep the moisture from freezing, but this solution is itself a nuisance, as it gives the glass a dull, smoky appearance.

A remedy which costs nothing, and is always effective, is the flowing of cold water down on the inside of the window. Take a watering can and pour some water against the glass as high as you can reach, thus washing off all the steam, and you will probably not be troubled again that day. If no drainage is provided in the front of your window, then use a sponge and cold water. H. S.

CHRISTMAS CEMETERY WREATHS.

A Neglected Department.

Christmas is a season at which the average florist completely ignores the cemetery trade. Possibly it will be argued that people are too busy buying gifts for the living to remember the dead at Christmas, or that it is not the time for reminding customers of the memorial uses of flowers, but the fact remains that many people do wish to signify, at Christmas, their remembrance of those who sleep in the silent cities. Of course it is more or less true that the better class stores are the ones that get the calls for memorial wreaths at the holidays, but all florists can do a profitable and easy Christmas business in this line if they give it a little attention. It will be found that customers, far from finding the suggestion unwelcome, if not put forward too boldly, will welcome and adopt it. It will be noted in the course of time that those who are away from home, or whose loved ones lie at a distance, will find it appropriate at Christmas to send a wreath of green, and here is where the telegraph delivery facilities will come into play. Every florist should cultivate the exchange-of-orders business—establish connections as widely as possible and never let an opportunity pass to acquaint the public with the fact that such facilities exist.

Christmas Cemetery Wreath of Magnolia Leaves.

Some Examples of Wreaths.

The illustrations on pages 34 and 35 are reproductions of photographs made last Christmas at a first-class store that has found it good business to show at Christmas a line of samples of cemetery wreaths. These were in the display last year. In many cases customers asked what could be done in the way of sending flowers to the cemetery in cold weather, and these wreaths lay at the clerk's hand to provide the answer. Others, seeing the wreaths, asked their purpose, and, being told that they were to go to the cemeteries on Christmas morning, commented on the appropriateness of the custom and left one or more orders.

One of these wreaths was made of the now omnipresent boxwood sprays. Boxwood has become one of the Christmas indispensables. Useful at other times, it comes in handiest at the holidays and is worked up in great quantities. People are tired of the same thing year after year, so that there always is a warm welcome for anything new in the way of a Christmas wreath, whatever its purpose, and since the grocery stores have come to handle the cheap holly wreaths at prices almost as small as the quantity of holly used in the making, patrons of flower stores have been ready to buy something else. That partly accounts for the way boxwood wreaths have sprung into favor. The boxwood wreath for the window is made on a rattan ring, just as the holly wreath is, but these cemetery wreaths are made as any funeral design would be, on wire frames that have been mossed. Two or three things are thereby accomplished: An elegance is attained that is not possible with a thinner wreath; a lasting quality is imparted, and weight is given that serves to keep the wreath where it is put.

The other wreath was of the prepared magnolia leaves that now are carried in stock by practically every retail florist—they have become one of the staples of the trade and have done not a little toward making galax a less essential article than it was a few years ago. These magnolia leaves are about the handiest thing that is to be found in the average store. They keep indefinitely and, no matter how scarce stock may be, with these on hand the retailer always has the means of making up a first-class design.

California red berries were used for the touch of color that is needed on these wreaths, but holly with its berries would have done as well, or the ilex that goes under the name of Christmas red berries.

Any florist who cares to do so can devise a dozen different combinations of seasonable green and red that will do equally well and which will serve to lend variety to his work, should he have considerable going to the same cemetery.

Crosses of various sizes are used for the same purpose. The widow of a certain millionaire sends an order to her florist every year to put a cross of boxwood and red berries, an elaborate affair that is six feet long, on the grave of the dead money-maker on Christmas morning, and flower stores that enjoy a considerable Catholic trade have found it pays to show a variety of flat cemetery crosses as a part of the holiday display.

STORAGE OF FERNS.

Will you inform me how to care for and store the fancy and dagger ferns so that they will keep in good condition throughout the winter? L. J. B.

Hardy fern fronds are usually kept in cool storage for winter use, but if the stems of the bunches are kept covered with damp moss and the ferns are laid away in a cool cellar they will keep for a long time. W. H. T.

DONT'S FOR FLORISTS.

Don't smoke in the store.

Don't accept checks if cash change is to be given.

Don't bill your customers for "lillies" or "boquets."

Don't get along without printed letter-heads; it's unbusinesslike.

Don't expect to get the best stock when you take the cheapest offer.

Don't try to undersell your competitor; chances are you'll cut your throat if you do his prices.

Don't write the shipper that he is a liar, a thief and a robber, because stock arrives in poor condition; it hardly adds to his desire to give invariable satisfaction.

CATCHING THE ATTENTION.

A publication that specializes on merchandising and advertising suggests that attention can be fixed on a commonplace advertisement by introducing it with a joke, citing the following example:

FLOWERS.

"Why are you breaking up housekeeping?" "My wife's florist says she'll have to take the rubber plant to a different climate."—Pittsburgh Post.

Our flowers are strictly fresh, deliveries prompt and prices right. Telephone orders given prompt attention.—Rocklin & Lehman, Sioux City, Ia.

NOVELTIES NOW WANTED.

It once was the complaint that the average retail florist was slow to take up any article outside the staples, and that he did not care to diversify his stock. S. B. Wertheimer says all this has changed. "In our experience," he says, "florists are more receptive than ever in the matter of novelties in ribbons and chiffons. The day of a few plain weaves in satin ribbons and taffeta ribbons and plain chiffons is past. The average florist now demands changes in styles just as pronounced as does his dry goods neighbor. This is attributable, no doubt, to the fact that the florist wishes to have a stock entirely different and show styles which will not appear to be the creation of a millinery or dress goods designer."

PREPARING CUT POINSETTIAS.

What is the best way to keep poinsettias from bleeding or from wilting after cutting them? O. Q.

Proper treatment always is necessary or poinsettias bleed profusely when cut, and placing them in cold water right away does not help them. As soon as you cut your stems, have a can or tub of water of a temperature of 125 to 150 degrees and stand the stems in it for five minutes. Place them in this water at once and do not leave them lying around until finishing your cut. The hot water stops the bleeding, and by standing them in cold water later they will hold up well. The leaves on cut poinsettias always fade before the flowers. The bracts are generally good when the foliage has all fallen. The hot water plan materially lengthens the duration of the foliage.

There are many other ways more or less used. Last season a reader of The Review reported on this point and I clipped the paragraph but have not yet tried his plan, which was as follows: "I have learned so much from the experience of others, as told in The Review, that I should like to add my mite, if I can. So I offer my experience with poinsettias. When I cut them for sale I dipped the stems, as I cut them, in hot water, and let them stand until all were cut. Then I got some paraffine wax and dipped the stems, fresh from the water, in the wax. My customers told me they kept finely for four to five weeks."

Christmas Cemetery Wreath of Boxwood.

WILTING OF CUT POINSETTIAS.

Can you tell us what might be the trouble with the keeping qualities of our poinsettias? We have them well grown and fully developed, and have been running them on the dry side for nearly three weeks. We cut some for Thanksgiving orders and we found that even in our own cellar they would wither down quickly, and we have had some complaints from customers to whom we delivered them. We had some such trouble at Christmas last year. The stock seems perfectly healthy and free from any disease or insects. We shall appreciate any suggestion you may make toward a remedy. B. F. C.

It is a good plan to lower the temperature of the house gradually 5 to 10 degrees before starting to cut the bracts. They keep rather poorly when the bracts are not fully developed, as would probably be the case at Thanksgiving. Immediately after cutting the poinsettias, dip the bottom of the stems in water which is boiling, or as near boiling as possible, to stop the bleeding. Searing the bottoms with a hot iron will answer equally well. Stems which are not treated in this way are pretty sure to have wilted bracts. After dipping or searing the ends, wrap the bracts each in oil paper or tissue paper and stand them in deep jars of water in a temperature of about 45 degrees. The ordinary ice chest is too cool for them. Treated as described, you should have but little trouble in keeping your bracts fresh. Keep them out of water as short a time as possible after they are cut.

One prominent grower, whose cut is all used at Christmas, runs his plants at 60 to 65 degrees at night while developing; two nights before cutting he drops the temperature down to 50 degrees and finds that the sudden, sharp drop makes them keep much better. The warmer the plants are being grown when cut, the poorer will they keep, but scalding or searing will keep them stiff. C. W.

TO DESTROY MOLES.

What can I use to get rid of moles in my greenhouses? J. H.

Trapping is the best way to destroy moles. The Reddick mole trap is an excellent one. Another one in common use has a coil spring, with three teeth on each side. All traps should be set across the moles' runs. In setting the coil spring variety, dig out a little below the catch, so that it can work. As the moles are constantly running backward and forward in their runs, traps properly set rarely fail to catch them. Some people claim that they can poison the moles by using shelled corn boiled in white arsenic until the corn is soft. Others have had some success in suffocating them with carbon bisulphide, but I have found traps the most effectual. C. W.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Will you kindly give publicity to the fact that the committee is now working on the preliminary plant schedule for 1913? Strong representations have been made me that any firms who desire to contribute special prizes in the plant classes should be given due credit for the same and their names placed in this preliminary list, to insure for them the widest publicity possible. The committee feels that it cannot get in touch personally with all who may be desirous of contributing in this manner, and therefore asks that they write on or before January 1, 1912, stating their wishes in this matter.

THE COMING DETROIT SHOW.

A good deal of adverse criticism has been going around regarding the earliness of the rose show. The executive board of the American Rose Society thought it best to stretch a point and get together with the Carnation Society as an experiment. Many rose growers grow carnations too. They would like to go to both conventions, but to spare the time is often not possible, besides the extra cost of fare. By having these two conventions together, I think both societies will strengthen their membership, in this way: A grower whose interest is weakest, say, in roses, and is a member of the Carnation Society, would possibly, if able to attend both meetings, join the Rose Society, as he is most likely interested in roses also, but not caring to spend the time and money for both meetings, goes to the one which takes care of his greatest interest. So, being able to kill two birds with one stone, he goes to the joint meeting. As this works both ways, both societies will be gainers. Besides, the exhibition of the two societies together should be so great an attraction to the public that a good attendance seems assured, which is a great factor toward the success of the show. The Rose Society has always suffered from lack of attendance. If the show was just held of roses alone, it was too small an affair and the general public did not get to know of it. Advertisements cost a lot of money. If held in conjunction with some horticultural society we had the attendance, but we could not always arrange such conditions, so we are trying this combination. I feel sure it will be a great success. The hall is ideal, light and with plenty of ventilation, and the Detroit Florists' Club is going to do its best to make us all feel at home. Every member of it is working for the success of it, and everyone seems to feel as if the success of the show and meeting depended on just his share of the work. This makes the officers and executive boards of both societies feel assured of one of the greatest meetings and exhibitions ever held by either society.

So, my dear friend, drop your growling, if you are one of the growlers, and make up your mind to come, and you will never regret it. The exhibition of roses alone will surpass your expectations. Many new varieties will be there, not by the dozen, but by big fifty bunches, and if they are not there you can form your own conclusion why. If you have any good roses look over the premium list and see if there is not one class where you can come in. I know there is. All varieties and all classes are taken care of by some $1,700 for cash prizes, and the society's gold, silver and bronze medals. Enough, for everybody who is keen and alert knows that to have good roses at that time of the year, so they can come in competition with the best and possibly carry away the first prizes, is a glory, besides being a good advertisement. Money is not everything in this life. To show your skill and good judgment, your fine points of cultivation and care, and then to triumph over your competitors, is the great glory in our profession. Not to have felt that way is to have missed the best in your work, and those who lost will strive to do better, in the hope of taking the blue ribbon some other day, and that is just one of the results of exhibitions.

To get improvements in methods of cultivation, to keep one's eyes and ears wide open, going to these meetings and exhibitions is very important. You may not get great, big chunks of information every time you go, but, as the saying is, "every little bit helps." Competition is strong, so one has to be posted all along the line. Everyone needs that to keep abreast of the times. There are lots of men crying that there is no more money in it, as there was twenty to twenty-five years ago; the little men are getting crowded out. That's all nonsense. There is just as much money in it as ever, and more, and the small grower has just as good a chance as ever. Of course the old ways of doing things will not answer any more; new ways and means have to be adapted and lived up to and success is assured, as ever.

STORING DAHLIA ROOTS.

Has anything been published at any time concerning the construction of cellars for the storage of dahlia tubers? If you have not published anything in regard to this, can you advise me of any literature containing information on this subject? M. W. H.

I do not know of any literature bearing on this subject, or any special article dealing with the winter storage of dahlia roots. Storage is usually briefly dismissed in catalogues and cultural articles, but it is the stumbling block over which many cultivators fall, and heavy losses in storage have so disgusted some growers that they have dropped dahlia culture entirely.

Dahlia roots should be thoroughly dried in the sun after lifting, before being stored away. Even a little moist earth will sometimes cause whole tubers to turn moldy. They require a dry, cool cellar, and where fire heat is not used, except it may be in cases of specially severe weather, and then only for as brief a period as possible. A cellar which will keep common potatoes and gladioli satisfactorily will be equally good for dahlias. It should not be constructed, as I have occasionally seen them, of concrete walls with only one ventilator. Provide an abundance of ventilation, as if mold starts there is nothing like pure, fresh, dry air to check it.

Earth or cinders will do for the floor; I prefer the latter. Do not lay any tubers on the floor, no matter how dry it may seem; always lay some boards down first. Tiers of shelves can be built of boards, with air spaces of three-fourths of an inch to one inch between them, and made of any convenient width, also as high as head room will allow. On these lay the tubers close together, but never pile on top of each other. If you don't want to build shelves, you can, to utilize boxes or barrels, first lay in some dry sand or sawdust, then a layer of tubers, then more sawdust, and so on until the barrel is full. Packed thus they will keep capitally, and, even if the cellar is not frost-proof, tubers thus packed will take no harm. I prefer sawdust to sand, as it is lighter to handle, but sand answers equally well. I have had excellent results from laying sawdust on the shelves, when they were made of matched boards, before placing the tubers on them. Look over the tubers at least once in ten days all winter and remove any moldy tubers, and the milder the weather, the more ventilation should be given. C. W.

ANOTHER CONCRETE BENCH.

I have been reading the article on "That Thin Concrete Bench," by Loyd C. Bunch, in The Review of November 9, and should like to give my experience with benches of concrete construction. I have found that concrete benches are not only more durable than wooden benches, but they are also a better protection against fungi.

Last season I built new benches in my rose house. The middle benches are low, with concrete walls, three inches thick, but it was necessary to have raised side benches, on account of the heating system. These raised benches are connected on one side to the concrete wall, while the front side rests on posts made from 2-inch pipe, three feet high and standing on brick, to prevent them from sinking into the ground. The posts are set eight feet apart. On top of these I fastened, with clamps made of ½-inch iron rod, a 2-inch pipe, running lengthways. Every four feet I laid ¾-inch iron bars crossways, setting the inside end two inches in to the concrete wall and flattening the other end so it would rest better on the pipe running lengthways. Over this was laid a wire netting which had been used previously for a hog fence.

To hold the concrete in its place, I made a temporary bench of common pine lumber, 1x12 inches. The bottom of this bench was wedged into its place by pieces of wood laid on the heating pipes. The front wall was held in place by temporary posts. The bottom is made two inches thick, with holes eighteen inches apart each way for drainage. The side is two inches thick at the top and two and one-half inches at the bottom.

The concrete was in the proportions of one to five; that is, it consisted of two parts sifted coal ashes, two parts used propagating sand and one part cement. The work was done by two men in one day. The bench is 100 feet long and forty-one inches wide. Six days after finishing it I put in the soil, leaving the temporary bench under it three weeks longer. The bench has been standing four months and is planted with Rhea Reid roses, which are doing splendidly.

For a bench that is to stand free from the wall, I would suggest the use of concrete posts, four inches thick at the top and six inches at the bottom, which would give plenty of stability. I have free-standing benches that rest on pipe and are of the same construction as the side bench I have described, and it stands the wheeling in of soil on a wheelbarrow when a plank is laid lengthwise to protect the bottom. I have several more wooden benches which I will replace with concrete ones. In the long run the latter are cheaper and it is easier to keep out sowbugs, white ants and fungi.

Geraniums

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Bedding Plants.

If the fall propagated cuttings are in 2-inch pots they will now be abundantly rooted. With chrysanthemums out of the way, it is now possible to spread them out a little more, at the same time removing dead and decaying leaves, any weeds in the pots and picking off any flower trusses that may be showing. It is better to keep the plants somewhat on the dry side, for if kept persistently moist they will make too rank a growth. Before they become too matted with roots give a shift into 3-inch pots, using a little fine bone with the loam, also some fine cow manure or spent mushroom manure. Press the soil firmly in the pots. When loosely potted, the plants are prone to make softer growth.

There are many good growers who prefer to keep their fall cuttings in flats of sand until the middle or end of January. This plan allows the cuttings to be tucked away on shelves when bench space is valuable. If kept somewhat dry, few cuttings will damp off, and when taken out, all live cuttings, which should number ninety to ninety-five per cent of the number inserted, will have a perfect network of fine fibrous roots. They will grow apace when put in small pots.

Where stock plants are grown in beds or benches, they will now yield a fine crop of cuttings. The wood on indoor grown cuttings is always firmer and shorter jointed than those obtained in the fall outdoors and the liability of loss by damping off is greatly reduced. These cuttings are best put singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam, placed where they can get a little bottom heat and given the full sun. Water well at the start, then sparingly until the cuttings are rooted. A night temperature of 50 degrees is ample for rooting geraniums. Where a large rooted cuttings business is done, regular propagating benches are, of course, best used. If last year's sand is still in them, better change it and not run any liability of fungus, which is often exceedingly destructive.

Winter-flowering Geraniums.

Geraniums grown for winter flowering should now be making a brave show. They are not yet half appreciated in winter, especially as Christmas plants. The average grower, whose conception of geraniums is the ordinary bedding sort as grown and retailed in 4-inch pots, can have but little conception of the beauty of many of the newer varieties from French and English hybridizers, both in the singles and doubles. With the plants now flowering freely, preserve a tolerably dry atmosphere in the house. Avoid damping the floors at all on dull days and even on mild but dark days. Always keep some heat in the pipes, to prevent damping of the petals. Look over the plants each day and remove any yellow leaves or damping flower trusses. Feed the plants well, giving the preference to a chemical top-dressing rather than too much liquid manure, as the latter tends to promote a soft growth which flowers sparsely.

Ivy-leaved Geraniums.

Ivy-leaved geraniums are little grown in America, although in Europe they are immensely popular, both for bedding outdoors and for pots and baskets indoors. Any of these make charming plants for spring sales. They are particularly well adapted for use in piazza boxes, window boxes and vases, where they flower the summer long with wonderful freedom. A few specially fine varieties are Souvenir de Charles Turner, bright pink, still hard to beat; Achievement, salmon pink, a stocky grower; Alliance, delicate blue feathered crimson rose. These two latter varieties have zonale blood in them, are semi-double and grand acquisitions. Other good sorts are: Cæsar Franck, rich crimson; Rycroft Surprise, soft pink; Dina Scalarandis, double white tinged with lilac; Col. Baden-Powell, soft blush with dark blotches on the upper petals. These all are extra fine.

If plants are now in 2-inch pots they will make splendid stock in 5-inch before May and should net prices considerably above those usually obtained for the bedding zonales.

Scented-leaved Geraniums.

About everyone possessing a small garden and who annually buys a few bedding plants, wants to get one or two scented geraniums. These and scented verbenas are never-dying favorites. There is, in addition to the plants themselves, some sale for the shoots, which of late years have been offered in a moderate way in several of the large markets. Bowls of the shoots of these spicy scented geraniums are as acceptable as flowers to many, and the demand is limited merely because the geraniums are so seldom procurable at the stores. Then again, it has hardly occurred to any plantsman that nice, bushy little plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots of the oak-leaved, lemon, balm or rose-scented geraniums would be in demand. Speaking of these scented geraniums, the popular rose-scented form has been in commerce for 221 years and shows no wane in popularity. There is also a good call for leaves of these scented geraniums for finger bowls, while with a flower added to them they make ideal boutonnieres.

Cuttings of any of the scented geraniums, taken now, will root within four weeks and make good plants in 4-inch pots for spring sales.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

Any poinsettias the bracts of which are not yet well developed should be given more heat; 65 degrees at night will not be too warm. Plants forced thus hard will have softer bracts than those which opened earlier, but every effort should be made to have them fully expanded for Christmas, as they are hard to move when the holidays are over. Any which are made up in pans or grown singly in pots should, if possible, be given a lower temperature for a day or two before sending them out. The minimum temperature should not go below 50 degrees or a loss of leaves may ensue, and this will tend to render the plants unsalable. Avoid sharp changes of temperature, as these, together with overfeeding, overwatering and dryness at the root, will each one cause the foliage to turn yellow.

Many inquiries are received each year during the poinsettia season asking how best to keep the bracts fresh in water. Early in the morning or towards evening is the time to cut them. Jars to contain them should be deep. The usual flower room in which roses and carnations keep well is rather cool for poinsettias. It has been found that they keep plumper in a room kept at 45 degrees to 48 degrees. It is no use cutting them and placing in water without first cauterizing the bottom of the stems in some way, either by dipping for a few seconds in boiling or very hot water, or by burning the ends with a hot iron, or, as is quite often done, by using a shovel of hot coals and searing the ends over them. It is a benefit to wrap some soft paper around the bracts and upper foliage, and always leave cut poinsettias out of the water as short a time as possible.

Lorraine Begonias.

Christmas is the season par excellence for those floriferous and ever popular plants, the Lorraine type of begonias. A few people may, perhaps, be tiring of them because they are becoming "too common"; others object to them as being poor house plants, and, indeed, this is true, for in a house with steam heat or hot air even the most skillfully grown specimens sometimes are denuded of flowers inside of a week. There is, however, steady increase in the sale of them. The coming Christmas will see an enormous increase in the number of Glory of Cincinnati, which many good judges think will, to quite a considerable degree, usurp the place of Gloire de Lorraine. Cincinnati has heavier foliage and the flowers are less densly produced on the plants. It is a much more enduring house plant. We need a scarlet Christmas begonia, such as Messrs. Veitch's new hybrids between the tuberous-rooted begonias and B. Socotrana, several times referred to in The Review of late.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine does well in shade or sunshine, and in a cool store window lasts surprisingly well. It needs fresh air, something sadly lacking in many dwellings, and here lies the principal cause of its persistent dropping.

Be sure, when selling these begonias, not to run your stock so low that sufficient propagating material is not left, for remember that propagation by means of leaf cuttings will soon be in order.

For several years there have been shortages in the small sizes of Lorraine. Little plants in 2½-inch and 3-inch pots, or shallow 4-inch and 5-inch pans, which were propagated late, have sold extra well.

Spiræa Japonica.

The roots of the herbaceous spiræas or astilbes are now at hand. These should always be well soaked in a tub of water on arrival, then stood in a coldframe, where they can get a few good freezings before they are potted. It does not pay to start any of them this early; better defer that until the early part of January, for the plants will break erratically if forced too soon after arrival. Some plants in flower are annually seen at Christmas, but not so many here as in Europe. These, however, are from cold storage clumps. While the old S. Japonica is still much grown, it is so inferior to such varieties as Gladstone, compacta grandiflora and astilboides that it is a wonder so many still persist in buying it. These improved sorts cost little more than the old Japonica, and as pot plants there is simply no comparison between them. Do not overlook the rather new and extremely beautiful pink varieties, such as Queen Alexandra and Peach Blossom. Do not try to flower these latter as early as the white ones, however. They are at their best from Easter until Memorial day. At the latter holiday they easily realize over double the prices of the white varieties when cut.

Rambler Roses.

It is, of course, too early to start any of the ramblers for Easter, but there is a good demand for them before that time and, in the case of plants pot-grown through the summer or potted up early in the fall, the wood is now hard and well ripened and, where kept outdoors and on the dry side, it is now in an excellent condition for forcing. Cut out any weak or dead wood and bend the canes around some short stakes, so that they will break better. Do not give too much heat for a start; a temperature of 45 degrees to 50 degrees is ample. Syringe freely, but do not water too much until the plants break, after which they can have 5 degrees to 10 degrees more heat in a sunny house. For early forcing use Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha and the various baby ramblers. The old Crimson Rambler, once so popular, is a good grower, but is now little seen in pots or tubs.

Euphorbia Jacquiniæflora.

That old-time favorite, Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, is coming back into favor again. Its brilliant sprays of flowers are a welcome addition to our list of Christmas flowers. It likes treatment similar to the poinsettia, which is also really a euphorbia, and, while it will grow and flower well in quite a cool greenhouse, it is much better in a temperature of 60 degrees at night. Cuttings rooted in spring and grown five or six in a 6-inch pot or pan make salable plants, but older plants give the finest sprays, and these are especially good when there are opportunities to plant them out in a bench.

Ten Weeks' Stocks.

Stocks for cutting are not popular in winter and it is doubtful if there is any money in them unless, perchance, in the case of country florists who can use up the flowers at hand. From Easter until Memorial day they are at their best, the latter holiday being the time par excellence for them. Sown now, in flats of light and sandy soil, plants will be produced which should flower well by the middle of March, especially if the regular forcing varieties are used, such as white and pink Column, Beauty of Nice and the early forcing varieties of ten weeks' stocks. Do not grow mixtures, and use only one or two colors. Those selling best are white, pink and lavender. Few of the other colors are wanted, unless it may be at Memorial day, when practically anything with color will sell. Keep the flats of seed in a temperature of 60 degrees for a start. When well germinated, give a cooler house. Pot off singly when of sufficient size and plant in benches before they get too pot-bound. They like a house with a night temperature of 45 degrees to 48 degrees to grow and flower in.

Dutch Hyacinths.

Some of the Dutch hyacinths will now be well started. If they have sprouts a couple of inches long, a batch can be housed. Do not give them any bottom heat, but if they can be stood in a dark and moderately warm case for a few days, it will assist in drawing up the stems. If placed directly in the light this early the flower spikes will come short and squatty. Where only a few are wanted a smaller pot can be inverted over the growth, plugging up the hole in the bottom of the pot with putty. Do not, when watering, lift the pots and pour water over the tops of the plants, or many of the flower buds will rot.

Ixias.

Those charming little bulbous flowers, the ixias, are eagerly looked for each winter by the up-to-date flower stores. There always are critical buyers looking for just such dainty flowers. They should now be nicely rooted and have shoots well above the ground, if they have been kept in a coldframe or pit. Give them a cool, light and airy house, kept as near 45 degrees at night as possible. Avoid too much water; in fact, they are better run a little on the dry side. Similar treatment suits babianas, sparaxis and tritonias, of which latter crocata is popular. Never attempt to force any of these bulbs or you will ruin them. They all want a cool greenhouse, and in such they are always seen at their best.

Protecting Bulb Beds.

Bulb beds are better not covered until the ground is hard frozen. If a heavy mulch is applied when the ground is soft the bulbs will push their growths up into the mulch and many are broken when removing it. Leaves, straw or coarse litter all make good mulching mediums. Lay some pine boughs, corn stalks and light boards over them to keep the mulch from blowing away.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

Please inform me whether I can pot giganteum lilies now and have them in bloom for Easter. If not, is there any other white lily that will force any sooner? Is there any difference in the forcing quality of cold storage giganteums and the new bulbs?

G. E. K.

It is getting late now to pot any lilies for Easter. Either L. longiflorum giganteum or L. multiflorum could be used. The latter comes in a little earlier than giganteum, but has a smaller flower. There would be little gained by using cold storage bulbs; the fresh bulbs would start just as quickly and more strongly. Pot in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, according to the size of the bulbs. Leave a good margin for top-dressing. Place the pots in a shed, or under a bench in a house kept at 55 to 60 degrees. Scatter some fine ashes or moss over them. As soon as they are started and rooted nicely, give them a night temperature of 65 degrees right along, in order to get them ready in time. Easter in 1912 will be earlier than usual, April 7, and in order to flower lilies then the buds must be showing by the last part of February. C. W.

Scatter Tall Baskets Among the Wide Ones.

RHODODENDRONS.

Rhododendrons, to be successfully wintered outdoors, must be thoroughly damp at the roots when the ground freezes up. Failing the necessary moisture from the skies, it is better to soak them thoroughly before applying a heavy winter mulch of leaves. If this is given early in the autumn it keeps the late fall and early winter rains from reaching the roots. The scorching or dying out so common in the spring, and which is constantly blamed to the frost, is due rather to the dry condition of the roots, as the thick mulch prevents any winter rain or melting snow from doing the plants any good. During the present month is a suitable time to protect any varieties of doubtful hardiness with evergreen boughs and burlap. Don't lace the plants up too closely, but give a chance for plenty of air to reach them. The real damage is not done now, but in late winter and early spring. The inadequacy of moisture at the roots annually kills or severely cripples more evergreens of all kinds than the winter's cold.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

This pest is an increasing menace to fruit growers and no orchardist, to be successful, can afford to neglect spraying for it. Were its ravages confined to fruit trees we could more readily control it, but it attacks many shrubs and some trees, including lilacs, malus, cydonias, cercidiphyllum, cratægus, poplars, willows, chestnuts, the evergreen Euonymus radicans, and others, including such roses as setigera and rugosa; in fact, nearly all the species are subject to attack. Among fruit trees and shrubs, currants often are dead before anyone knows what is the trouble with them. Gooseberries, plums, apples, peas and peaches are all attacked, and cherries to a less extent. Now, when the foliage has fallen, is the time to attack and destroy the pest. There are two principal remedies, the lime-sulphur spray or one of the soluble oils. The former is best where there is a large orchard to cover, but it is disagreeable to apply and the small grower, with a few dozens of shrubs and trees to treat, had better use a soluble oil, such as Scalecide, in the proportion of fifteen to one. Use a fine, misty spray. Choose a clear day without wind for the operation and be sure to dampen every portion of the wood. To make doubly sure, give another spraying before growth starts in the spring. The spraying is good insurance and even if you have few or no scale it will pay you to do it.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUM MRS. HARRY TURNER.

It is difficult to reproduce a crimson variety, according to the photographer. Certain it is that the picture of Mum Mrs. Harry Turner is a miserable attempt to do justice to a beautiful flower. The color is the same shade of crimson seen in the old Black Hawk, which is one of the finest colored varieties we have. Mrs. Harry Turner comes much larger and every petal on the late bud reflexes to show the lovely color. This will, I am certain, be a popular variety when it is well known. It is named for the recently acquired wife of an ex-president of the New York Florists' Club, Harry Turner, now gardener at Samuel Untermyer's place, Greystone, at Yonkers, N. Y.

COMMERCIAL MUMS.

Early Varieties.

In my last article, under the head of "Exhibition Mums," I said I would give a review of the commercial varieties in a later issue.

The following list is what my experience suggests as being first-class varieties to grow, since they have sold much better than the average varieties and the net returns per square foot have been more generally satisfactory. I do not presume to say that this list would be equally satisfactory in every market or that the same varieties would do equally well anywhere else, but, speaking in a general way, they will be found quite reliable.

Early kinds—Smith's Advance, Golden Glow, Polly Rose, Yellow October Frost, Monrovia and Rosiere.

Of the foregoing, Yellow October Frost turned in for us the largest returns per square foot. One must get an early bud for this variety in order to get the heavy flower, and if this is done Yellow October Frost will certainly pay its way.

Smith's Advance is a new-comer in this list and it paid its own way nicely. We had no white coming in so early and this is a splendid combination for Golden Glow.

Monrovia sold much better than Golden Glow this year with those growers who had it in shape to cut from September 20 to 25. It is a better color and it makes a heavier flower, with a nicer stem.

All the early varieties, in our experience, sold much better than the midseason ones.

Second Early List.

The second early list—that is, varieties that can be cut from October 5 to 20—would include Beatrice May, Mrs. Wm. Arnold and Mrs. David Syme, in whites; Gloria and Pacific Supreme, in pink; Comoleta, in yellow, and Mrs. O. H. Kahn, in bronze.

Beatrice May, as put on the market by some growers, is a beautiful chrysanthemum, though the foliage is somewhat poor. Mrs. Wm. Arnold produces some splendid flowers and sold in a more satisfactory manner.

A yellow that probably will be considered a feature in this section next year is Chrysolora, which has been grown by widely separated growers this year with good results.

Mrs. David Syme reached high-water mark in this section, bringing as high as $9 per dozen wholesale in some cases.

Mum Mrs. Harry Turner.

Midseason Sorts.

Among the best midseason varieties are Elise Papworth, Major Bonnaffon, Patty, Lynnwood Hall, Pockett's Crimson, T. Eaton and Yellow Eaton.

Midseason varieties had a bad slump in New York and it was largely a question of get what one could, without any consideration of what the stock was worth. The unavoidable slump comes every year, but this year it seemed more pronounced than ever. None of the varieties mentioned above are particularly new; therefore they do not call for any special comment.

Bonnaffon is still grown in large quantities by some growers, but I am afraid the returns can not be considered entirely satisfactory.

Late Varieties.

In late varieties, Pockett's Surprise, Chadwick Supreme, W. H. Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Nagoya and W. R. Brock seem the most satisfactory.

Pockett's Surprise was the peer in this particular section. One grower of my acquaintance received $9 per dozen wholesale for his flowers of this variety.

The three Chadwicks, white, yellow and pink, sold well and seemed to be in good demand.

The returns on the late varieties will be found considerably more satisfactory than on the midseason kinds.

I have not included Jeanne Nonin in the list of late varieties, for the reason that in altogether too many cases the foliage is wretchedly poor, and it can not, generally speaking, be called a profitable variety to grow. There is still considerable of it around the market at this date, December 9. After Thanksgiving the New York market is willing to forget all about mums. W. R. Brock can be kept in splendid shape for Christmas if necessary, and as a late mum will sell much more readily at that season than Nonin, since no one wants white flowers at Christmas if he can get anything else.

The Bronzes.

New York is different from other markets of the country, in that it will take almost unlimited quantities of bronze, provided they are of exhibition size and finish, and will pay a good price for them. I have not included them in this list to any extent, because a grower shipping to another market might not find the expected call for bronzes, and if he grew a great many in that shade of color he might have cause to regret it.

Among the bronze varieties that are profitable in the New York market, if grown right, are C. H. Totty, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Mary Mason, Glenview, Pockett's Surprise and Rose Pockett. Grown as the average commercial grower grows his plants, planted from the middle of June to the middle of July and not fed much, these will probably not return as much as some other staple variety.

Care of Stock.

After the stock is cut it is the greatest mistake in the world to lift the stock plants and deposit them under the benches because you are crowded for room and want to plant something else there. The lightest place in the house is not any too light for the stock plants of mums.

If one has a violet bed it will answer the purpose well, or the cold end of a carnation house will do, as the stock plants do not need a temperature of over 45 degrees or so. In such a temperature they will pass through the winter nicely and be in condition to furnish, in the new year, quantities of good, healthy cuttings.

Too many florists are prone to forget the chrysanthemums until they wake up with a start some day to discover that they have no stock propagated and the stock plants are not in shape to produce cuttings. True, there are specialists from whom he can procure stock at a reasonable figure, but every florist has his own pets, and he can not always procure them when he wants them, so it is always best to propagate his own varieties where possible.

Chas. H. Totty.

PLANT PAPWORTH EARLY.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nursery, New Orleans, says that he has heard so many complaints from florists who have had trouble growing Chrysanthemum Elise Papworth that he wants to put them on the right track. "We also had trouble with it," he writes, "until we learned that it wants to be planted early, so that they are strong plants when hot weather sets in." With this early planting "Elise Papworth has proven to be a fine commercial variety and better than Eaton; a pure white flower with better foliage." Mr. Papworth sprays the cuttings and plants three or four times a season with Fungine and takes occasion to speak a good word for the article. "We find it indispensable," he writes. "We use it on our cutting bench all the time, especially for chrysanthemums, and thereby can use the sand over and over again."

TWELVE GOOD SINGLES.

Will you kindly let me know what are the best twelve single chrysanthemums for pot culture, to be used for decorative purposes? Please mention six early and six late varieties.

W. B.

My selection of the best twelve singles for pot culture would be about as follows:

Early—Annie Stevens and Marvel, pink; Irene Cragg, white; Ethel Beer, bronze; Kittie Bourne, yellow, and Katie Covell, crimson maroon.

Late flowering — Mary A. Keys, white; Lorna Dando and J. T. Angus, pink; Golden Star and Margaret Totty, yellow, and Hilda Wells, a reddish crimson.

In the latter list, Margaret Totty and Lorna Dando are rather tall growing, but they are so beautiful in their respective colors that they are well worthy of a place in the list of plants to be used as decorative subjects.

C. H. T.

Poinsettias, Cyclamens, Farleyense, Dracaenas.

Savanna, Ill.—J. W. Dunn, who recently came here from Des Plaines, Ill., is making steady progress. He is preparing to move his store into the room next to the First National Bank, where he will have a much better location and much larger quarters.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

I wish to give you my experience with hydrocyanic acid gas, which I used as per formula of C. W. in The Review of November 16. I have three connected houses, each 21 x 145 feet, average height six feet, ground or solid beds, giving about 18,000 cubic feet of air space in each house. I used two 2-gallon earthen crocks in each house, in the middle walks. In each crock I put of water and sulphuric acid fifty-four ounces each (three pints, six ounces). Then I dropped in each crock, wrapped in paper, one pound two ounces, avoirdupois, of cyanide of potash, best grade, and left the house tightly closed till next morning early, when I opened the ventilators and syringed everything well.

I had a bad dose of red spider on the carnations. I have always been able until this fall to keep them in check with water, but they were gaining on me, so I decided, to my sorrow, to give them a dose of gas. In one respect it was a success, as it about fixed Mr. Spider—only a few are left alive—but it cooked a bed of lettuce 3 x 120 feet, almost ready to cut, next to the gutter, practically ruining it. The carnations for about eight feet on each side of the crocks were badly scorched. It also scorched smilax tips, plumosus and Sprengeri, also geraniums and the foliage on a few mums. I have 2,000 vincas in 4-inch pots and 2,000 Dracæna indivisa in 6-inch pots which were not harmed at all. The soil in the beds was on the dry side.

I would like to hear the opinion and experience of other growers who have used the gas, so that I may learn where I erred. How strong do they use the gas? Hope this article will be of some benefit to a brother florist who is thinking of using the gas for the first time, and be the means of a thorough discussion of the best way to fight our insect pests.

A. L. Merrill.

Here are the original instructions as given for fumigating orange trees in tubs:

"The surest method of extermination is hydrocyanic acid gas. This is especially necessary if you have the San Jose scale. This is a most deadly gas and must be used with the greatest of care, as its effects are quickly fatal on human beings as well as plant pests. Many articles have appeared on this gas in past numbers of The Review, but we would advise you to use the following formula, which we have proved effective. For each thousand cubic feet of air space, use two ounces of cyanide of potassium, best grade procurable, and six ounces each of water and sulphuric acid. To find cubic area of your shed or house, multiply length by breadth and this by average height; thus, a house 50 x 12 x 8 would contain 4,800 cubic feet and would need approximately five times the amount given for 1,000 feet. Use earthenware jars. Just pour in the acid; then add the water, after which drop in the cyanide wrapped in oil paper and get out of the house as fast as possible. Lock the door and be sure that no one is allowed to enter again that night. See that ventilators are tightly closed. Choose a cold night for the operation. In the morning open the doors and ventilators wide. Syringe well. All bugs and scales should be deceased. If any show signs of life, apply a second dose a few weeks later. Don't trust the fumigation to assistants. Do it yourself and keep any cyanide securely locked up.''

C. B., whose trouble was with orange trees badly infested with scale and mealy bug, asked how he could rid his trees of these pests and I advised the use of the gas with an all-night exposure. At the strength recommended, no harm could come to the orange trees. In California they are frequently fumigated with much heavier doses for San Jose scale without any injury resulting, the exposure, however, being of short duration. I would have hesitated seriously about advising any all-night exposures for a mixed assortment of plants such as Mr. Merrill grew, without considerably reducing the dose.

The general plan when using hydrocyanic acid gas among mixed plants, or those which are naturally somewhat tender, is to give an exposure of only twenty or thirty minutes, after which the ventilators are opened from outdoors. Dangers of injury are then greatly minimized. The colder the house the less danger there is of injury. On carnations gas usually takes the color out of the flowers and is liable to scorch the tips of the young shoots.

For keeping spider in check on carnations spraying with salt and water is an excellent thing to use. Once a month use a 3-inch pot of salt to five gallons of water.

Such plants as smilax, Sprengeri, plumosus, geraniums, especially the scented-leaved ones; snapdragons, freesias, mignonette, palms, ferns and all orchids are comparatively delicate and I would not advise the use of gas among them except in extreme cases and then only in cool weather and by experienced hands. Lettuce, cucumbers, tomatoes and other forcing vegetables are delicate and gas should never be used for them.

In using gas again, if you have facilities for opening your ventilators from outdoors, give twenty to thirty minutes exposure only.

The proper use of gas is not yet well understood. That it is a valuable fumigant none can deny. The views of other Review readers on this subject who are using gas would be of great interest and benefit to a large circle of readers, and I hope we may hear from them.

REAPPRAISEMENTS.

The Board of General Appraisers has published the following reappraisements of interest to the trade:

Orchids.—From Carrillo & Baldwin and Boulton & Co., Porto Cabello. Exported August 28 and October 24, 1911, entered at New York. File Nos 61594 and 62024. Invoice Nos. 6627 and 4809. Hay, G. A.—Entered at 0.20, advanced to 0.25 United States dollar each.

Orchids.—From Carrillo & Baldwin, Maracaibo. Exported September 11, 1911, entered at New York. File No. 61595. Invoice No. 25311. Hay, G. A.—Wild orchids, entered at 1.04 bols, advanced to 0.25 United States dollar each.

Geneva, N. Y.—W. & T. Cass report a satisfactory season in their nursery department. They have several houses of cyclamens and lilies in fine shape.

THE HANNAH STORE.

In a recent issue of The Review there appeared a reproduction of a photograph of an excellent wedding decoration by Hannah & Son, of Sherman, Tex. The decoration was so well executed that it lends additional interest to the accompanying pictures, which show the store of the Hannahs. One of the views is that of the person who passes on the street, the other being the scene as it unfolds itself to one accepting the invitation offered by the sign in the window: "Come in." Incidentally, this sign is customary in the south. It appears in nearly all the store windows, as though those who are on buying bent might feel, without this assurance, that there might be some question of their welcome.

Exterior View of Store of H. O. Hannah & Son, Sherman, Texas.

One of the points that may appear odd to northern eyes is the fan over the door in the exterior view; not many northern merchants fan the street. But at Sherman there are more or less flies all the year around, and Texas flies are like other flies in that they like to congregate in a quiet entrance and are a general nuisance to business men. Therefore many storekeepers have fans in the entrance to make the flies uncomfortable and thus keep them from congregating there, ready to buzz inside with every customer. That no fans show in the interior view is due to these being on the desks and walls instead of on the ceiling.

The Hannahs do all the making up and packing in the workroom at the rear of the store, so that the interior view shows only the salesroom. A curiosity in store arrangement is the railing which runs the entire length on each side of the store, in direct contrast to the general tendency to clear the modern flower store of all counters and such straight-lined tables as once were everywhere and still are used in groceries and dry goods stores, though merchants in nearly all lines now are removing the barriers wherever possible and arranging the stores as differently as may be from the former fashion. The Hannahs say the railing "leaves an aisle through the store and keeps the trade from getting in our way when very busy; we have gates opening along the railing to enter." The store makes a sufficiently attractive appearance so arranged, but it might almost as well be the picture of a bank on its opening day, with flower decorations, as what it is. Is there any other store in the trade that has a fence in front of the display refrigerators? It is an idea that must work well in the present instance, for the Hannahs have a fine trade, but it is not one that many will care to adopt.

For the undoubted success which H. O. Hannah & Son have made of the business much credit is given to Mrs. H. O. Hannah, who gives her special attention to the making up. The Hannahs have about 20,000 feet of glass, growing a general stock, but not enough of it to meet their needs, so that the place will be enlarged next season.

PRIMULA KEWENSIS.

The history of the acquisition of fertility on the part of this hybrid is extraordinarily interesting. Raised at Kew in 1899 from a chance seedling found among a batch of Primula floribunda, P. Kewensis, which is a hybrid between P. floribunda and P. verticillata, was at first, and remained for some years, absolutely sterile. The sterile plants occurred in one form only, named thrum-eyed or short styled. After some years, however, a single pin-eyed plant was discovered in Messrs. Veitch's nurseries. This plant was, as we learn from Messrs. Veitch, remarkable in several ways. In the first place, its main inflorescence bore pin-eyed or long styled flowers. In the second place, though the style of these flowers was long, the stamens were in the position which they occupy in thrum-eyed flowers. In other words, these flowers, though pin-eyed, as judged by their styles, were thrum-eyed, so far as their stamens were concerned. In the third place, other inflorescences which developed on this long-styled plant bore ordinary thrum-eyed flowers. Self pollination of the pin-eyed flowers resulted in the production of good seed, from which has been raised all the fertile plants of P. Kewensis now in cultivation.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

THE WHITE DELPHINIUM.

Kelway & Son, Langport, England, sent out the first cream or creamy-white varieties of delphinium, now generally known under the names of Beauty of Langport and Primrose. Charles Irvine, Jedburgh, next introduced the variety Albion, a semi-double variety, but with a bluish shade, which turns to nearly white when the flowers are fully expanded in the sun. The French nurserymen, M. Lemoine and M. Gerbeaux, introduced several novelties, including Mont Blanc and Sceptre Blanc, which, however, are not so white as their names would suggest; also Polar Star, which has creamy-white flowers, with a sulphur-yellow eye. This variety produces strong, erect spikes, and grows taller than the others.

The following varieties may be mentioned: Jeannette, Fröken Scheltema, Progression and Nulli Secundus, all having a more or less creamy color, the last named with a dark brown eye, which gives the spikes a striking appearance. Nulli Secundus was introduced by R. Wallace & Co., and received an award of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society in July, 1909.

For about twenty years I have been interested in white delphiniums and have purchased all the light-colored novelties which I could obtain, with a view to crossing them with large-flowered, light blue varieties of strong constitution. Thousands of seedlings proved worthless, but at last I was successful. Some years ago, in the month of July, I found in a bunch of seedlings one plant with six spikes. Of these, three spikes bore pure white flowers, two bore blue flowers and the remaining spike bore some light blue and some parti-colored—half blue, half white—flowers. Next year, when the five divided plants flowered, I noticed that two only had white flowers, two only blue flowers, and one plant had some flowers white and others blue, while still others were half white and half blue. I succeeded in almost fixing the pure white variety, not more than one or one and one-half per cent coming blue.

Delphinium Moerheimi has a healthy growth, which is not subject to mildew. The dark green leaves are finely cut, and the stems attain to a height of five feet, producing many side spikes, which prolong the plant's flowering throughout the whole summer. The large, single blossoms are of the purest white, and the spikes have a loose and elegant appearance. The first flowers appeared this year June 20, and a field in full flower could be seen at Dedemsvaart on July 24.

The blue variety, which may be regarded as the companion of Moerheimi, I have named Capri. It is in every respect a counterpart of the white sort, having the same habit, size of flowers and freeness of flowering. The color is sky-blue, of a finer shade than Persimmon and others of the Belladonna type.

IN MOUNTAIN'S SHADOW.

Charles F. Fawcett is a young florist with an eastern training who is enjoying life in Colorado, where, at Boulder, he has pitched his camp veritably in the shadow of the Rockies—in taking the picture on this page the mountain was in view over the greenhouses. Mr. Fawcett attributes a large part of the undoubted success he has made since locating at Boulder to the fact that he has kept his place looking well—a sort of pattern for his neighbors. The picture shows the bedding on the lawn between the sidewalk and the south end of the greenhouses. The large office building, the west side of which appears in the illustration, runs out to the corner, and a part of the equipment is as handsome a delivery outfit as one can find in town.

NAME OF VIOLET.

I am sending to you by separate mail a package of violets and leaves. Please tell me the name of this variety. I have bought 1,000 of them under the name of Princess of Wales, but they seem to be some other variety. Also tell me the proper day and night temperature for this variety. J. G.

Both foliage and flowers were so completely withered that identification was impossible. The leaves do not, however, look like those of Princess of Wales. Probably it is Governor Herrick. If you will send flowers and foliage with the stems packed in damp moss or cotton-wool, they will arrive in good condition. Princess of Wales succeeds best in a night temperature of 40 degrees in winter, with a rise of 5 to 8 degrees on cloudy days and 10 to 15 degrees on clear days. Governor Herrick I have not grown in sufficient numbers to test it properly, but some growers find it does better if grown 5 degrees or more warmer than Princess. The latter is a vastly superior violet.

SWAN'S PLACE.

The accompanying illustration gives a street view of the greenhouses and grounds of the Swan Floral Co., Lima, O. The Swan concern has a downtown store at 115 West Market street, with greenhouses on Bellefontaine avenue, opposite the Lima Driving Park and on a well traveled car line, where so many people pass that it is worth while setting an example in the matter of well kept grounds.

Montreal, Can.—At the annual meetings of the Montreal and Provincial branches of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, a complaint from local florists was received to the effect that certain druggists were taking advantage of their Sunday privileges to sell flowers as well as drugs and surgical appliances. The secretary, the Rev. George W. Mingie said he had already taken the matter up with the chief of police.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleya Labiata.

The flowering season for Cattleya labiata being now over, the plants should be given the cooler end of the cattleya house, plenty of sunlight and a much reduced water supply. Any necessary repotting can be attended to now, if time permits, or a few weeks later. It is well to overhaul all the plants. Some may not need repotting, and it may suffice to remove some of the compost nearest the surface and replace it with fresh pieces of chopped fern root. Where roots are running over the sides of the pots or pans, it is best to take out such plants and get the roots in the compost. Some there are, whose orchid knowledge is somewhat limited, who like to see cattleya and lælia roots running over the pots or out into the atmosphere. Such plants will always be found to have weaker and more shriveled bulbs than those having their roots inside the pots. When cattleyas are sending out such quantities of these so-called aërial roots, either the compost in the pots is not to their liking, or more probably the house is kept too moist and stuffy. Cattleyas do not want any such conditions, but must have air on every possible opportunity. In fact, there are few days in the year when the ventilators can not be opened to some extent.

In potting cattleyas, or, for that matter, any other orchids, always see to it that the plants are thoroughly firmed. Loosely potted orchids are not more likely to thrive than similarly planted trees and shrubs. Always use a potting stick with a sharp point to firm the compost thoroughly. This must be of some hard wood, such as teak or oak.

Reference was made in a recent number of The Review to the advance in the price of C. labiata. Not long ago $40 to $50 would have secured a good case; now $65 to $70 is needed and the plants are dwindling in size as the price per case advances. Unless new locations, where C. labiata abounds, are found, and this is not probable, the time is not far distant when this beautiful fall-flowering orchid will be as expensive as Schroederæ and Dowiana. In fact, many good judges are of the opinion that it will in five years be the highest priced cattleya in commerce. If the forest supply is to be soon practically exhausted, it behooves specialists to raise seedlings from good types. Of course, it will take four to six years for these to reach flowering size, but such plants will have more vitality than the forest plants, need little rest and will in all probability give two crops of flowers a year, as do many of our hybrids today.

Shading.

There should now be no shading on the cattleya houses. The sun may still shine on some few days with genial warmth, but for a couple of months, at least, all cattleyas, lælias and lælio-cattleyas will be benefited by all they can get of it. Of course, any in flower should be slightly shaded or moved to the cool end of the house, where they can be protected from the sun's rays. The plants, when "well sunned," to use a grower's phrase, will take on more of a yellowish hue, but will become harder, break better, flower better and be less liable to attacks of that bane of cattleya cultivators, the cattleya fly.

Dendrobium Nobile.

The earliest ripened bulbs of nobile and many of its hybrids, Wardianum and some others of the dendrobe family are now pushing out their nodes. The water supply at the root must be given in sparing quantities, or these nodes, instead of carrying flowers, will develop into growths. Occasional light syringings usually suffice to keep the pseudo-bulbs sufficiently plump. It is better to keep them in a cool, sunny house, in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, until all the nodes have appeared; then give them a temperature 15 degrees higher if they are wanted in bloom in January; if not, they are easily retarded for a few weeks. It pays to get a number of these dendrobes open in January, as there is generally an overplus of them at their natural blooming time, which is March and early April.

Calanthes.

What truly superb orchids the calanthes are in midwinter! For decorative effects on dining tables, mantels, etc., they are among the most graceful and beautiful of all flowers. Cattleyas for these purposes are painfully heavy and clumsy looking; they have no grace, like calanthes, which, when well grown, have arching spikes, three to four feet long, of pink, white, or pink and white flowers. Veitchii and its several forms, of a delightful pink color, are the finest for decorative effects, although the old vestita and its forms are not to be despised. There are also some beautiful hybrids now in cultivation. The wonder is that these beautiful orchids are not more appreciated commercially. They last well when cut, and every critical customer who once has a decoration of them will want them again. The calanthes are now in flower or soon will be. They are deciduous when flowering and the water supply should be considerably reduced. Give the pots or pans a mulch of fresh sphagnum, to prevent the surface soil from drying out so much. To open calanthes well, give them a night temperature of 65 degrees. When well expanded they can stand 10 degrees less.

Cypripedium Insigne.

The old but valuable lady's slipper, Cypripedium insigne, has been flowering for some time. No other variety has yet approached it in popularity and general usefulness. It grows well in either a cool or warm house and never fails to give a liberal crop of flowers, and if there is no sale for them one week, they can easily be kept fresh on the plant two weeks, or two months if necessary. Where only one orchid is to be grown, and it is likely to be subjected to rather hard treatment, no other variety will give as satisfactory returns as C. insigne. The various yellow forms of C. insigne are becoming more abundant each year and will in a few years be sufficiently numerous to offer as cut flowers or blooming plants commercially. Of the large number of yellow forms there is as yet nothing to beat the original C. insigne Sanderæ. It has been increased considerably of late years by self-fertilization. Some seedlings surpassed the parent, but others showed considerable variation in form, although all were yellow. Laura Kimball is perhaps, next to Sanderæ, the finest of these forms. The plant has more vigor than Sanderæ. Hybrids between these two are now on the market. Ernestii is a vigorous growing yellow form, heavily blotched on the dorsal sepal. Sanderianum is a uniform yellow throughout, except for a few brown lines at the base of the petals. I have grown a number of the yellow forms, including Brightness, citrinum, Golden Ring and others, and, while all are beautiful, they are not equal to Sanderæ, Sanderianum and Laura Kimball. Some day these varieties, increased by self-fertilization, will be popular market plants, and anyone picking them up now from time to time will find it to be money well invested.

CARNATION BONFIRE.

When the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., put out a red carnation last year, to compete with such widely grown and generally satisfactory sorts as Victory and Beacon, the wise ones knew that in Bonfire the disseminators had a variety in which they had the utmost confidence. Under the circumstances which existed it was no more than what was expected that orders averaged small, but Bonfire has given so good an account of itself thus far that it will be planted in much larger quantity for next season. Those who bought it last winter are busy propagating, but not much stock is likely to be for sale until another year, for the man who tried 500 plants will not have many cuttings to spare. Incidentally, also, if the variety has any weakness it will not develop until next season, for after its satisfactory performance thus far this year most of the plants will be kept cut back for cuttings until well along toward the end of the winter.

BLASTING BUDS.

I would be pleased to have you give me a little information in regard to my carnations. I have a house of Enchantress and White Perfection. While the plants seem to be in good health, a great many of the buds get blasted and turn brown. This has been going on now for about two weeks; also, the plants do not start new breaks as they should after cutting the bloom. The growth on the Enchantress appears a little soft. Can you suggest a remedy? I have had a little trouble with red spider and used tobacco extract as a spray. Do you suppose this may have started the trouble? There are also quite a number of dead leaves on some of the plants. H. E. H.

Sometimes it is difficult to determine what is the cause of buds blasting on carnations. There seems to have been an unusual amount of it this season, due perhaps to the unusually dry season and the prevalence of red spider. If the plants were set in the benches late in the fall the trouble would be worse than where normal conditions existed. As the plants become established the trouble would gradually disappear. I am assuming that your buds are blasting while quite small, not larger than a pea. If they grow larger, there is something else wrong. Send in a few stems with the blasted buds on them for examination. A. F. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week we had regular spring weather. It was just the thing necessary to hurry the carnations and get them in right for Christmas. It also helped the roses. The early part of this week there was nothing but a fine, warm, continuous drizzle for three days. Naturally, there came an oversupply of stock of almost all kinds. The buyers were again given the upper hand for a time. The demand was good, but not sufficient to take up the offerings. Some of the stock that arrived, especially that from a distance, was a little soft. Beyond that, however, the same good quality that has been apparent in the past has kept up.

The prospects are good for a supply that will easily take care of all requests in the near future. With the superfluity now, and the natural, normal increase in supply, even though adverse weather should cut down the size of the shipments temporarily, there ought to be enough to take care of everyone between now and the holidays.

Carnation Bonfire.

The green goods market is enjoying a rushing business. The boxwood, which is extra good this year, the holly, which is also excellent, and laurel are selling well. Quite a call for artificial Christmas novelties is apparent.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting with President Gus Adrian in the chair. Geo. S. Bartlett was elected to honorary membership. Ed. Schumann, of Schumann & Wahlers, of Newport, Ky., showed a plant of their new begonia. It is a sport of Lorraine. The blooms are about the size of Cincinnati, while the leaf is about the size of the Lorraine leaf, but much stronger. The plant created quite a favorable impression. J. A. Peterson showed two specimen plants of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati that were exceedingly fine.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports a splendid demand for boxwood. It might be added, incidentally, that this green this year is the best ever offered in this market.

Miss Mae Carroll has severed her connection with the business of D. Rusconi.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co., at Lockland, has one of the best looking greenhouse plants in this vicinity. Every bit of stock on the place is clean and absolutely free from disease. A most gratifying quantity of buds, that bespeak a heavy cut for Christmas, are apparent. A house of poinsettias has mostly all choice blooms. The whole plant is a credit to the untiring efforts of Wm. Sunderbruch, the manager.

J. A. Peterson has sold and delivered all his cyclamens. His begonias also are moving rapidly.

C. E. Critchell has accepted the appointment as vice-president for Ohio, south, by President-Elect R. Vincent, Jr., of the S. A. F.

L. H. Kyrk has been getting in some fine Jardine roses and baby primroses.

Visitors: Lewis P. Lord, of the Lord Plant Box Co., Minneapolis; Frank Farney, of M. Rice & Co.; Paul M. Halbrooks, of the Columbus Floral Co., Columbus; John A. Keller, Lexington, Ky.; John A. Mulford, Lebanon, O., and Gustave Reiniger, of Dayton.

CHICAGO CLUB MEETING.

There was an unusually large attendance at the Chicago club December 7, seventy-five being present. On the exhibition table were two fine vases of carnations, St. Nicholas, from Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, and The Herald, from Chicago Carnation Co. A committee consisting of Harry Nicholson, John Then and C. W. Johnson scored St. Nicholas eighty-seven points, entitling it to the club's certificate. The Herald had previously been certificated. Visitors included Joe Hill and J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, and several others. Messrs. Baur and Evans each gave short talks.

On convention matters, George Asmus, president of the S. A. F., stated that he had appointed August Poehlmann, J. C. Vaughan and W. N. Rudd a committee to see what can be done about a hall for next August. On motion, President Philpott was instructed to appoint a committee representing the club to coöperate with the S. A. F. committee.

It was nomination night and for president H. N. Bruns nominated H. E. Philpott, W. N. Rudd nominating P. J. Foley. Several were named for vice-president but declined, the nominees standing Carl Cropp and D. A. Robertson. A. T. Pyfer was the only nominee for secretary and E. F. Winterson for treasurer. For trustees H. N. Bruns, E. C. Amling and Walter Scott were named and for sergeant-at-arms Messrs. Fink, Goebel and Grim.

It was voted to suspend fifty-three members who are in arrears for dues, but the loss was more than made up, as thirteen new members were elected and forty-four applications were received, to be voted on in time to give them the voting privilege at the election in January.

Those elected were:

Charles Erne, 162 N. Michigan avenue.
Edward H. Gale, 108 East Delaware place.
William F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
A Van der Pohl, 3811 Harrison street.

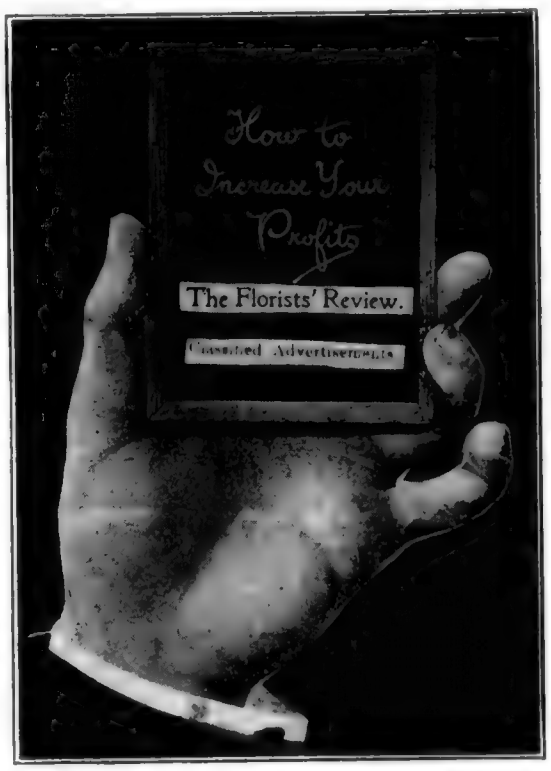
MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The market is in much the same condition as reported in last week's Review; there is really too much white stock, with no funeral work to speak of. It's probably the lull before the storm.



With a prospect of no Beauties for Christmas, the demand for red roses and red carnations will undoubtedly be extra heavy.

Club Meeting.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club meeting Thursday, December 7, was exceptionally well attended and by far the most spirited held for some time. The election of officers for 1912 no doubt brought the boys around and this point of business was transacted in double quick time for the secretary was instructed to cast one vote in each case, there being only one candidate for each office, with the exception of trustee for three years. This speaks well for the following, who were reëlected: President, H. V. Hunkel; vice-president, Arthur Leidiger; treasurer, John G. Heitmann; secretary, Gustav Mueller; trustee for three years, Gus. Pohl. James Livingston, private gardener for Fred Vogel, Jr., was unanimously elected a new member.

Those present did not lose any courage or good spirits when they heard the report of the executive committee of the recent flower show, which showed that owing to the small attendance the debit side of the ledger won out. It was generally agreed that the show in itself came up to expectations; in fact, the quality of stock was better than in previous years.

Owing to the fact that the display facilities and poor inducements at the Wisconsin state fairs are usually inadequate, the chair, upon motion by the club, appointed the following committee to coöperate with the proper authorities: Roy Currie, C. C. Pollworth and C. Dallwig, with the latter as chairman. The ivory gavel, donated by the Chicago florists, was used to advantage and recalled only pleasant thoughts to most of us.

Various Notes.

Sigmund Kaufmann, at one time associated with Wm. Eschrich at North Milwaukee, but recently of Chicago, has again gone into business here. Last week he purchased the John Burmeister establishment at Tippecanoe, which comprises three greenhouses, 27 x 200, two acres of land and a good sized dwelling house, all in good condition.

A. W. Wonasek, who had the flower stand at the Boston Store, has vacated the stand and gone on an extended trip west. The Boston Store now conducts the stand. Unlike other department store flower managers, Mr. Wonasek ran his business in such a way that it was more of a credit than a detriment to our profession, and in him we miss a good man.

At the A. F. Kellner Co. the decorating branch of the business has again gained the pace of the good old times and things look good for the remainder of this year.

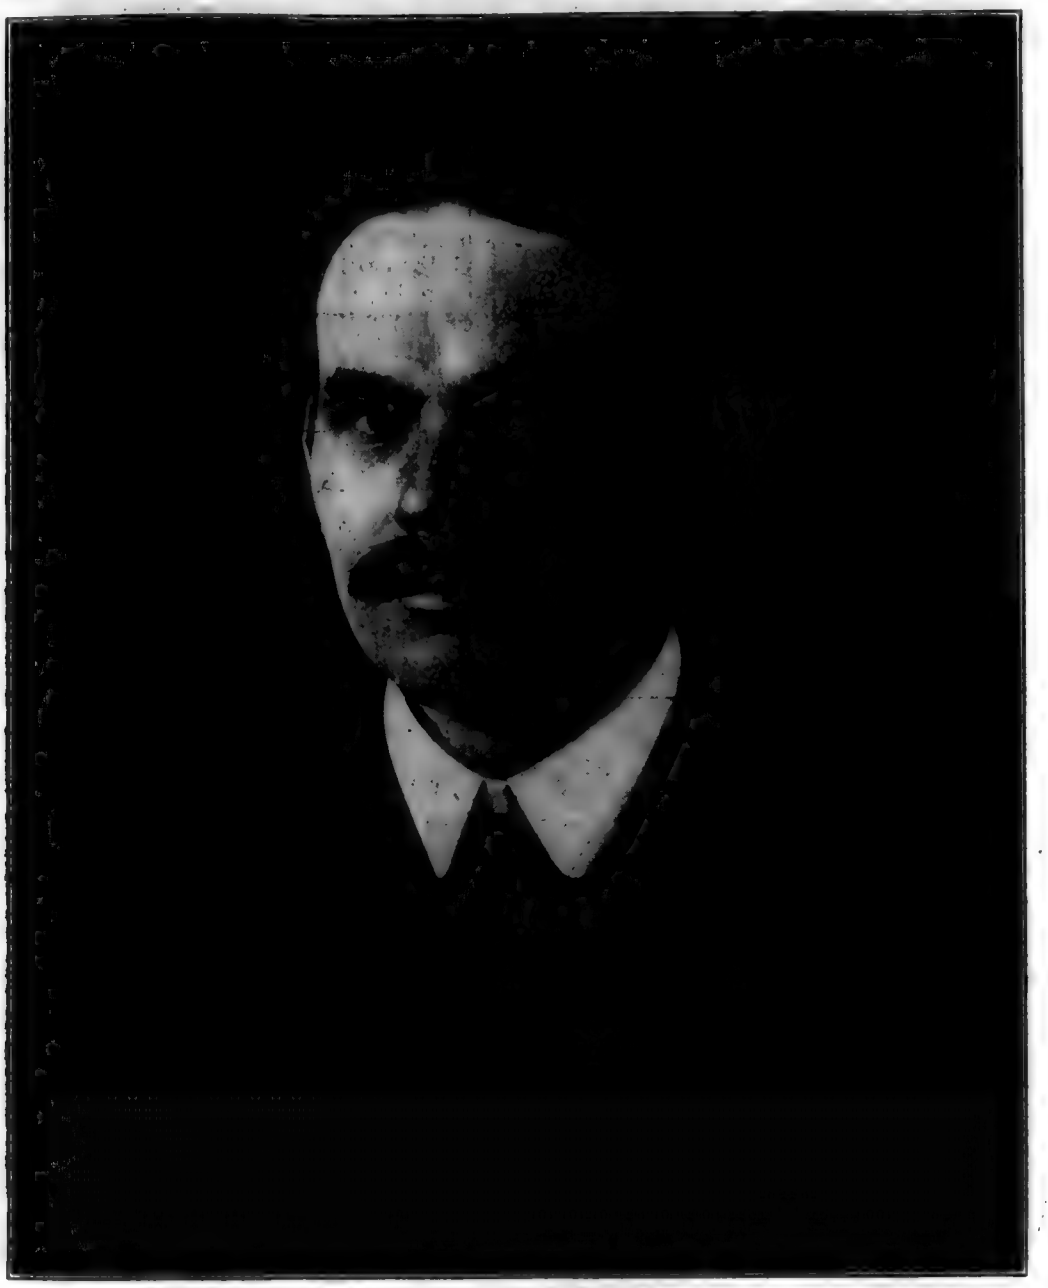
At the J. M. Fox & Son store there was unusual activity last Sunday forenoon, for a force of help was busy putting up the Christmas decorations. Wild smilax was used profusely and to good advantage.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. has a splendid lot of poinsettias and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine at their Humboldt avenue greenhouses, while out at Brown Deer their crop of pink and white Killarney roses will hold out through the holidays. Advance shipping orders are coming in freely.

While things were not anything to brag about last week, Gus Rusch & Co. are looking forward to a busy holiday trade.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports a good supply in all lines, with a steady demand. They say they will be well supplied in roses, carnations, violets, Paper Whites and Romans, but they anticipate a shortage in the supply of American Beauties, for they have been a scarce article of late. In potted plants they have a large stock in prime condition.

J. H. Criddle, Stoughton, Wis., was a recent visitor. E. O.



Fred B. Davis, proprietor of the M. A. McKenney Co., has purchased the property known as the Goll homestead, at 581 to 583 Jackson street. The property includes a lot 60½ x 127 feet and a double three-story brick dwelling house, at one time considered the most handsome residence on the east side. The building will be remodeled and used as new headquarters for the McKenney Co. The price paid was approximately $25,000.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was a disappointment in the cut flower market. The big snow storm was simply the harbinger of another mild spell. Unless the change to seasonable weather comes quickly there will be a large addition to the shipments, with a consequent scarcity and higher prices for Christmas.

The excellent values of Thanksgiving lasted until Tuesday of the following week. Before the week was over the average had declined from twenty to thirty per cent. However, this is almost the invariable rule after Thanksgiving, and until a few days before the holidays. American Beauties dropped to 50 cents and under for the best, and all other roses, except the novelties, fell to a lower level. Carnations did not fall below 2 cents, while the select stock sold at 4 cents and up to 6 cents for the novelties. Chrysanthemums have had their day. While a few are assured even beyond Christmas, the receipts now are light and decreasing daily. Some fine stock of the late varieties commands $3 a dozen. Orchids hold at 60 cents to 75 cents for the highest grade of cattleyas and cyps are firm at $1.50 a dozen. A great many of the wholesale houses now are handling orchids, and their popularity does not wane, no matter how extensive the supply. Valley is firm, and in quality perfect, with 4 cents obtainable for the selected. Lilies have advanced to 8 cents and 10 cents is the general prediction for Christmas. Callas are increasing in quantity every day, and so are the higher grades of gardenias. Violets are abundant and lower rates prevail. Sweet peas are plentiful and stevia is becoming a drug. Hyacinths and narcissi yield a daily surplus of which the street merchants take advantage.

The green goods men are all busy, with the usual increase in help, and many thousands of yards of roping are already contracted for. There will be plenty of wild smilax, but bouquet green is scarce and high. Holly in quantity will probably average $4, with $5 a case for the best. The same bundles of Christmas trees that brought from $50 to $60 a hundred last year now sell from $75 to $100.

Club Meeting.

The rooms of the Florists' Club were well filled December 11, over 100 being present, many faces seen only on election night. Messrs. Chalmers, Langeler, Othile, Riedel, Birnie and Irwin were elected to membership and those of them present gave brief addresses, with assurances of loyalty. A. L. Young, J. K. Flutte, A. McDonald, Alfred P. Smith and J. K. Farquhar were proposed for membership.

Prof. Craig, of Cornell, gave a stirring address, having made the trip from Ithaca especially for the evening. A federation of the florists' clubs of the state for practical action was advocated, and the appointment of a committee looking to a state organization. P. O'Mara told of the success in securing the appropriations for experiment greenhouses from the New Jersey legislature and the need of organization in New York state, suggesting definite action early in the new year, after the club's new officers are installed. Mr. Scott and Mr. Weathered took part in the discussion.

A vase of the new carnation, Brooklyn, was exhibited by Charles Weber and received the thanks of the club.

F. H. Traendly spoke of the rose and carnation convention at Detroit, January 10, and suggested a transportation committee to take care of the two carloads expected to attend from New York.

Resignations of Samuel Whitefield and J. H. Kemper were accepted with regret.

Al. Rickards and his lieutenants served a sumptuous turkey collation and received a vote of thanks for excellent service during the year.

H. Beaulieu gave a short talk on his recent travels in France.

P. O'Mara presented resolutions endorsing the candidacy of W. F. Kasting as commissioner of agriculture, which were adopted by unanimous vote.

A letter was read from W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., declining the nomination for treasurer. I. S. Hendrickson and J. B. Nugent also declined the honor of competing for the presidency, leaving a clear field for Joseph A. Manda. For vice-president the vote stood: Einsman, 41; Rassback, 39. John Young and W. G. Badgley ran for secretary and Mr. Young was elected for the twenty-second consecutive time. W. C. Rickards was elected treasurer. The trustees elected were: John Donaldson, 69; Phil Kessler, 57; William H. Duckham, 54. Messrs. Sheridan, Chadwick and Weathered were tellers and C. H. Totty master of election. Mr. Manda has been twenty-one years a member of the club. All the newly elected officers made interesting speeches, with pledges of undying loyalty.

Plant Growers' Officers.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association elected the following officers December 12:

President—Frederick Marquardt.
Vice-president—Louis Schmutz.
Treasurer—H. C. Steinhoff.
Secretary—W. H. Siebrecht, Jr.
Trustees—A. L. Miller, George Scott, Louis Dupuy.
Dinner Committee—Julius Roehrs, Jr., Louis Dupuy, H. C. Steinhoff.

Various Notes.

Oscar Lion, of Lion & Co., says 1911 has been the most prosperous year of his firm's career. They will move December 20 to the new wholesale silk district, on Fourth avenue, near Eighteenth street.

E. C. Horan is this year celebrating his silver jubilee as a wholesale florist. He says he is looking forward to a golden jubilee.

Wm. P. Ford had large shipments of Bonnaffons last week and expects to have a supply of mums up to Christmas.

The National Flower Show committee, C. H. Totty, chairman, met at the office of Traendly & Schenck December 7 to arrange the schedule.

Pritchard & Donahue is the name of a new wholesale cut flower firm with headquarters in the Coogan building. A. H. Pritchard has been in the business all his life, his father, Henry Pritchard, of Astoria, being a successful grower, especially of bouvardia. The junior member of the firm is S. J. Donahue. Both are young, popular and energetic.

H. S. Mabie, of Maywood, N. J., is sending some superb sweet peas to P. J. Smith, and says his new house, 40x 300, devoted to this specialty, will soon be in full bloom, but a little late for Christmas.

John G. Esler, of Saddle River, has earned the gratitude of the cut flower men by securing the restoration of the old agreement that makes the special delivery again effective.

Reed & Keller are handling the Riek Christmas tree holder, made by the Rhinelander Refrigerator Co., Rhinelander, Wis.

E. C. Haines & Co., of Bedford Hills, N. Y., have established branch stores at Stamford, Conn., and Peekskill and Mount Kisco, N. Y.

Charles B. Austin has opened a retail store at 5 East Twenty-eighth street. At the same number Lecakes & Co. have a branch store for the holidays.

Among the distinguished visitors in New York last week were: Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., and Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., both mem-about a hall for next August. On motion, President Philpott was instructed to appoint a committee representing the club to coöperate with the S. A. F. committee.

It was nomination night and for president H. N. Bruns nominated H. E. Philpott, W. N. Rudd nominating P. J. Foley. Plant Growers' Officers.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association elected the following officers December 12:

President—Frederick Marquardt.
Vice-president—Louis Schmutz.
Treasurer—H. C. Steinhoff.
Secretary—W. H. Siebrecht, Jr.
Trustees—A. L. Miller, George Scott, Louis Dupuy.
Dinner Committee—Julius Roehrs, Jr., Louis Dupuy, H. C. Steinhoff.

Various Notes.

Oscar Lion, of Lion & Co., says 1911 has been the most prosperous year of his firm's career. They will move December 20 to the new wholesale silk district, on Fourth avenue, near Eighteenth street.

E. C. Horan is this year celebrating his silver jubilee as a wholesale florist. He says he is looking forward to a golden jubilee.

Wm. P. Ford had large shipments of Bonnaffons last week and expects to have a supply of mums up to Christmas.

The National Flower Show committee, C. H. Totty, chairman, met at the office of Traendly & Schenck December 7 to arrange the schedule.

Pritchard & Donahue is the name of a new wholesale cut flower firm with headquarters in the Coogan building. A. H. Pritchard has been in the business all his life, his father, Henry Pritchard, of Astoria, being a successful grower, especially of bouvardia. The junior member of the firm is S. J. Donahue. Both are young, popular and energetic.

H. S. Mabie, of Maywood, N. J., is sending some superb sweet peas to P. J. Smith, and says his new house, 40x300, devoted to this specialty, will soon be in full bloom, but a little late for Christmas.

John G. Esler, of Saddle River, has earned the gratitude of the cut flower men by securing the restoration of the old agreement that makes the special delivery again effective.

Reed & Keller are handling the Rick Christmas tree holder, made by the Rhinelander Refrigerator Co., Rhinelander, Wis.

E. C. Haines & Co., of Bedford Hills, N. Y., have established branch stores at Stamford, Conn., and Peekskill and Mount Kisco, N. Y.

Charles B. Austin has opened a retail store at 5 East Twenty-eighth street. At the same number Leeakes & Co. have a branch store for the holidays.

Among the distinguished visitors in New York last week were: Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., and Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., both mera-bers of the National Flower Show committee. Mr. Sim is president of the National Sweet Pea Society and was accompanied to Boston December 9 by Secretary H. A. Bunyard for an important conference looking to the success of the sweet pea convention in 1912.

February 28 is the date chosen for the ball of the Greek-American Florists' Association. Terrace Garden is the place, as usual.

Wm. G. Saltford, of Poughkeepsie, was in the city last week, the guest of his brother, George Saltford.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht still are cutting Cattleya labiata at their New Rochelle greenhouses, and C. Trianæ is beginning.

Fire above S. Rodh's offices and store on West Twenty-eighth street, December 6, caused some damage to the ribbon stock, but the loss was covered by insurance.

Myer, 609 Madison avenue, had a decoration December 9 at the residence of Ledyard Blair; the most elaborate he has supplied this season. Twenty-eight debutantes' bouquets, no two alike, were a feature of the affair.

Alex. M. Westwood, formerly of Mengham & Westwood, has established his retail headquarters at 110 West Twenty-eighth street.

Charles Millang, though still young in years, is celebrating the rounding out of a quarter century in the business. Mr. Millang also is interested in Long Island real estate, where values go up while one sleeps.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association held its regular monthly meeting last week. The plant business is in an exceedingly healthy condition. There is a shortage in the smaller azaleas, but an abundance of about everything else, though most of the stock already is booked for early delivery.

H. A. Bunyard's friends are complimenting him on the cover of Arthur T. Boddington's 1912 catalogue, just out. He designs all the covers.

H. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, L. I., returned last week from Europe.

J. K. Allen, who is preparing to celebrate his silver jubilee, says 1911 has made a new record for volume of sales.

William Kessler reports shipments of the Dreyerii fern in 6-inch and 7-inch sizes going out daily to leading retail florists in many big cities.

J. J. Coan, of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., says mums will hold out this year later than ever before.

M. C. Ford is looking forward to a record Christmas.

Traendly & Schenck report a fine booking of advance holiday orders.

H. E. Froment says there will be a splendid supply of roses this Christmas.

The Pennock-Meehan Co. is well pleased with the business of the last year, but is patiently waiting for May 1 and the opening of the larger store.

The F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown and Scarboro, is shipping a large cut of Beauties, Killarneys and Winsor and Ward carnations to the New York Cut Flower Co.

Moore, Hentz & Nash, who in the past disposed of much English mistletoe and red berries at Christmas time, have cut them out this year, to give their entire attention to cut flowers.

This is the sixty-second anniversary for David Clarke's Sons, and business was never better, they say.

Alex. McConnell will have his usual branches for Christmas, with his new store on Fifth avenue as headquarters. Business at his New Rochelle nurseries this fall has been excellent.

A. J. Guttman says he is much encouraged by his success in re-establishing his wholesale business.

The Kervan Co. has the front of the store elaborately decorated with evergreen roping, and reports a large business.

A. Herrmann says he has had a phenomenal advance sale of Christmas novelties, the demand coming from all parts of the country.

James Meehan, formerly with Thorley, and later with the Smart Set store, now is with M. A. Bowe, in charge of the designing department. Arthur Merritt has charge of the decorating. James McDonald also has joined Mr. Bowe's force. A branch store will be opened on Fifth avenue, near Thirty-fourth street, for the holidays.

J. Austin Shaw.

Frederick A. Seidlich, Jr.

Utica, N. Y.—Chas. F. Seitzer, formerly in business at 38 Oswego street, reports that he is no longer connected with the trade.

Horseheads, N. Y.—Earl Shults, who began business here less than two years ago with one greenhouse, recently built another house and also a workroom and boiler house. He is well satisfied with the increase in trade.

Rockland, Mass.—W. B. Arnold & Co. have recently been doing their best to educate and develop the public taste for table decorations, by displaying in their show window a dining table, set with attractive chinaware and glass, and suitably embellished with flowers.

Dalton, Mass.—J. R. Shield, who for many years has been gardener for Fred G. Crane at his model farm home in Craneville, has given up his position there and has purchased a large greenhouse establishment near Boston, where he will engage in the florists' business, growing plants and cut flowers for the Boston market. Mr. Shield will take possession of his newly acquired property in the latter part of January.

OBITUARY.

Frederick A. Seidlich, Jr.

Frederick A. Seidlich, Jr., is dead at the home of his father at Catonsville, Md., after a long illness. For a number of years he had conducted a greenhouse establishment on Ingleside avenue, in Catonsville. About two years ago his own home was broken up by the death of his wife. Besides his parents, he is survived by four brothers and sisters. Mr. Seidlich was a member of the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club and was well known in the trade.

Arthur G. Greatrex.

Twenty minutes after having taken up new duties in Muir's greenhouses, at Scranton, Pa., Arthur G. Greatrex, aged 60 years, was stricken with heart failure and died a few minutes after. Mr. Greatrex had been for many years employed in the greenhouses of Morrell Bros.

R. S. Tabb.

Robert S. Tabb, who for many years had been connected with the firm of Nanz & Neuner, in Louisville, Ky., succumbed to Bright's disease Sunday afternoon, November 26, at his home, 1112 South Floyd street, in that city, at the age of 62 years. He had been in declining health for a year, but had been confined to his home but a few days. He was a native of Berkeley county, W. Va., and was a merchant at Martinsburg, W. Va., several years before removing to Louisville forty years ago. He was one of the organizers of the Westminster Presbyterian church and served as treasurer and deacon. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Anna May Herring, and the following children: Charles A. Tabb, of Pittsburgh; Robert F. Tabb, John Preston Tabb, Mrs. George B. Cooper, Mrs. J. Hamilton Ormsby and Mrs. Roy W. Burks. He also leaves two brothers, Stephen B. Tabb and Creighton Tabb, and two sisters, Mrs. Allan, of Louisville, and Mrs. R. J. Van Ness, of Nashville, Tenn.

Anthony Schramm.

Anthony Schramm, aged 20, junior member of the Schramm Bros., Toledo, O., died December 1 after a three weeks' illness of typhoid fever. He was a son of the late Anton Schramm, and leaves, besides his mother, three brothers, George, Leo and Frank, and one sister, Mrs. Albert Lehman. The funeral was held December 4 from St. Mary's church, interment being in St. Mary's cemetery.

Lowell, Mich.—One of the big industries of Lowell is the Lowell Greenhouses. From a small beginning on a farm, E. L. Kinyon has brought them to their present proportions. Four years ago, through raising tomato plants for the Fallas canning factory, Mr. Kinyon conceived the idea of branching out. He built a small greenhouse and, without any experience, set himself to the task of learning the business. This year Mr. Kinyon purchased the Ed Clark place and erected the present plant. This comprises three houses, 20 x 84, 15 x 84 and 12 x 40, besides a modern heating plant. Cut flowers and bedding plants have been the chief features up to date, but lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes will be grown this year.

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Brownwood, Tex.—Mrs. C. L. Steffens has erected a good-sized greenhouse here and installed a steam heating system. She will grow cut flowers and plants for the local market.

Raleigh, N. C.—C. A. Lyle & Co. have filed articles of incorporation. The authorized capital is $25,000. The incorporators are Frank Stronach and J. Norflect Stronach.

Holyoke, Mass.—G. H. Sinclair says the best late white mum with him is Gen. McArthur, of which he has a fine batch for Christmas. He also has a splendid lot of primulas.

Belleville, Ill.—It is reported that A. S. Halstead, of the St. Clair Floral Co., recently fell over a box in his greenhouses and received injuries which were likely to confine him to his home for some time.

Lenox, Mass.—Robert Spiers has resigned his position as superintendent at Interlaken and will take charge of the greenhouses of Fred G. Crane, at Dalton. Mr. Spiers has been a prominent and highly successful exhibitor at horticultural shows in this vicinity.

Salem, Mass.—The new establishment of H. T. Conant & Co., to which they have just removed, is said to be ideal in its equipments and in its convenience of arrangement. It is only a few doors from their former location at 133½ Essex street, which they were obliged to leave on account of a change of ownership.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—When Henry A. Siebrecht went to his greenhouses one morning recently, he found that the doors of the houses had been forced open during the night and that several dozens of specially choice carnation and chrysanthemum plants had been stolen. The plants, it is said, were new varieties and unusually valuable.

Berlin, Conn.—A. A. Weldon, the Berlin street chrysanthemum grower, says this season has been the most profitable one in his experience. He is a veteran of the Civil war and has for a number of years specialized in growing mums, after experimenting with other kinds of flowers almost continuously since his return from the war. His stock is noted for its fine quality and sells readily at the highest prices.

Mitchell, S. D.—The firm known as The Newburys, proprietors of the Mitchell Greenhouses & Nurseries, have filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $100,000. The incorporators are Charles E., Edwin C., Elizabeth A. and Jessie E. Newbury, and Frank J. Herrick. The business, which has already grown to large proportions under the management of the Newbury family, will be continued without change of name.

East Jordan, Mich.—Mrs. Rosa Batterbee reports that she has retired from the florists' business.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Miss Ruth Flick, of the C. B. Flick Floral Co., in this city, has taken a position with John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich.

West Hoboken, N. J.—Two young men have been arrested on the charge of stealing chrysanthemums and roses from the greenhouses of Adolph Asmus and George Tschupp, in North Bergen.

Painesville, O.—The Painesville Garden & Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $20,000, by Alfred E. McKee, Chas. M. Hawley, Edmund Witzman, Samuel J. Potts and Edwin H. Hawley.

Hartford, Conn.—John Coombs is congratulating himself on the prospective yield of carnations during the next few weeks. The output is tremendous and all sold at retail. H. T. Whiting has some of the finest violets seen in this vicinity, both Marie Louise and Lady Campbell.

Daytona, Fla.—Leon Despland, of the Daytona Floral Co., is building a flower store on Magnolia avenue, between his residence and the Despland hotel, and expects to have it completed in time for the Christmas trade. Shrubbery, as well as flowers and plants, will be handled at the new store.

Fayetteville, Ark.—A recent wedding that attracted much attention here was the marriage October 25 of Lawrence T. Shelton, secretary and treasurer of the Southwestern Seed Co., and Miss Ada L. Grasham, formerly chief stenographer for the same company. Mr. and Mrs. Shelton will make their home in a fine new residence at 223 East Dickson street.

Quincy, Ill.—While Gottfried Gross, the Main street florist, was driving across the street car tracks recently, a car collided with his vehicle with such force that the harness was stripped from the horse and the buggy was dragged several yards before the car could be stopped. Mr. Gross retained his seat in the buggy, but received some painful bruises. His injuries, however, were not considered serious.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co., of this city, has been a favorite investment for several florists and their friends, and it will be noted with interest that the company has just declared a dividend of three-fourths per cent, payable December 20. Books close December 8 and reopen December 21. This is the first dividend declared since October, 1906. Prior to that time the company disbursed six per cent per annum in dividends.

Waukegan, Ill.—M. P. Dilger recently returned from a brief sojourn in northern Michigan. He reports that when he left that locality the ground was covered by fourteen inches of snow.

Lowell, Mass.—Griffith's flower store, on Bridge street, was damaged by fire recently. When the flames were discovered at 2:30 a. m., they had destroyed part of a partition, but were soon extinguished.

Greenfield, Mass.—The residence of Paul R. Burtt, with nearly all of the furniture, was destroyed by fire on the afternoon of December 4. Mrs. Burtt and her 3-months-old baby had a narrow escape. The loss is roughly estimated at $3,500, partly covered by insurance.

Albion, Mich.—Arthur H. Dew, who last year tore down his old greenhouses and rebuilt them on a larger scale, doubling their former capacity, now finds it necessary to add another house, so as to be able to take care of his spring trade. He will begin work on the new house at once.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Minneapolis Florists' Club held its last meeting December 5, at the establishment of Rice Bros., 115 North Sixth street, which has been chosen as the club's headquarters. C. F. Rice is secretary and treasurer. The regular date of meeting is the first Tuesday of each month.

Springfield, Mass.—Prospector holds the lead as the best scarlet carnation with J. W. Adams & Co., who will have a cut of several thousand for the holidays. Mark Aitken is receiving from his plant at Agawam fine Pink Delight, May Day and White Winsor. White Enchantress he considers the most profitable of white carnations. In roses, Killarney takes the lead. Antoine Rivoire (Mrs. Taft) has many admirers. Wm. Schlatter & Son report heavy sales for their bouquet pin.

Waterford, Conn.—On Wednesday, November 22, Stanley Jordan, superintendent of the Harkness estate, near this town, made a visit to Sterlington, N. Y., where he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Bulpitt, at Table Rock estate, where Mr. Bulpitt is head gardener for W. G. Hamilton. During Mr. Jordan's visit he was married to Miss Elsie Violet Hodges, of Wells, England. The wedding took place November 26, at Sloatsburg Episcopal church, and on the following morning the happy couple left for a short visit to Niagara Falls. Mr. Jordan is well and favorably known in the gardening trade and the estate under his charge is in fine condition. He has the best wishes of his many friends.

The Review brings results.

Will all the rose growers plant Mrs. Aaron Ward next season? It looks that way now.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Trade has fallen off since Thanksgiving, but it is not a reason for fearing that it will not come up to previous Christmas or December records. Turn back in your books, or your thoughts, to last year, and other years, and you will find that business never is rushing in the first three weeks of December.

The better pompon chrysanthemums have made a marked advance in popularity this season, having sold well all through November and been in especial request for Thanksgiving. Of the whites, Diana was the best seller, and of the yellows, Klondyke. No pink has yet been found that would travel in the same class with these two.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia December 5, Secretary David Rust read a paper on the history of the organization, now 25 years old, going so into detail that his manuscript ran to 8,000 words, equivalent to about fourteen columns of The Review. The club's records, including the papers read at its meetings, constitute a splendid history of the development of floriculture in America.

Phoenix Roebelenii has proved to be admirably adapted to the conditions under which Louisiana growers operate. In the vicinity of New Orleans it can be grown in the open to good salable sizes in two to three years, and stocks have been worked up to the point where at least one grower figures on producing all the seed he will need in future. With him the imported seeds germinate only about fifty per cent.

APPRECIATION FOR MR. ESLER.

As an aftermath of the report of the chairman of the tariff and legislative committee of the Society of American Florists, we would add our appreciation of the work which Mr. Esler did for us personally. We were among the victims of the unsatisfactory deliveries of the express companies and, as individuals, were unable to get satisfaction. We appealed to Mr. Esler and, thanks to his interest and indefatigable efforts backed by the Society of American Florists, we gained our point. This shows two things clearly and emphatically: first, the great value of united action and pulling together, as under the patronage of a society like the American Florists, and, second, officering any society with the right men in the right place. To spare Mr. Esler's blushes we will let you make the inference here. Benjamin Dorrance.

THEN IT'S INDISPENSABLE.

It is a pleasure to the Editor that a great many people have tried, in renewing subscriptions, to tell how unhandy it would be to get along without The Review. Here's a new way of putting it:

As the year 1911 draws to an end, I enclose $1 for The Review for 1912. I value every issue of it as necessary to the florist as are sunshine and water to the plants he grows.—Michael Mendel, St. Paul, Minn., December 5, 1911.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Conditions since Thanksgiving have been dispiriting and the Christmas atmosphere is lacking. It probably is true that every December may be expected to develop a calm before the storm of holiday business, but this year it has been more trying than usual because of weather conditions. The temperature has been running much above the normal and for several days last week there was an unusual duration of bright sun. This has been followed by dark weather, but there has not yet been any fall in temperature that was worth speaking about. The warmth and the sun combined to bring in an unusual supply of flowers, including practically all the important items, and, since demand was light, the market became weak, presenting the somewhat unusual spectacle of retailers and wholesalers being all down in the mouth at the same time. Usually "what is one man's meat is another man's poison," and when supplies are too large to suit the wholesaler the retailer is happy.

The increase in the supply of Beauties has not been great, but there have been enough of the long stems to meet every demand. Medium and short Beauties continue scarce. Cattleyas have shown only a moderate increase in supply. A few fancy Trianæ are coming in, but the bulk of the supply is Percivaliana, the total being all that has been required. Practically everything else has come in heavily, so that the supply has been in excess of the market requirements. While the balance between supply and demand has been poorly maintained, the tendency has been to hold prices fairly stiff, "for next week is Christmas." The fact is that Christmas does not come until week after next and the Christ-

SPLENDID STOCK FOR Christmas

Christmas Prospects.

Everybody is busy discussing the outlook for Christmas. Most of the wholesalers say that scarcely any orders came in the Monday mail, but that there were a large number of inquiries, with the prospect that the average out-of-town buyer will in the end take more stock than ever before. There is considerable difference of opinion as to what the supply will be. The greatest unanimity is with regard to Beauties, which nearly everyone thinks will be short. The general estimate is that the supply will be about half what it was last year, practically all long stems, but one or two venture the opinion that there will prove to be all the Beauties that are needed. Some say that the unusually warm weather has rushed their rose crops so that they are too early, while others say the recent dark days have delayed the crops to the point where they will not be ready in time. On the other hand, some of the best judges are advising the retailers to push the sale of Killarney as being the item which will be most plentiful and of best quality. There probably will be better supplies of Richmond than in any previous season. Only moderate supplies of carnations are expected and splits have now become so plentiful that they require a separate quotation, but the chances are there will be as many carnations as can be used at straight quotations. In spite of the fact that violets have sold less well this season than last, some of the wholesalers are figuring on a larger demand and higher prices this Christmas than last, though it is difficult to see any basis for the prediction. Poinsettias promise to be in rather heavier supply than usual and of all the miscellaneous items there will be all the stock that anyone can use.

The usual word of caution to growers: The special demand will be December 21 to 23; flowers sent in early in the week can not be used for Christmas, but they doubtless will bring more money while still fresh than they could realize by being held. Holiday flowers now are too plentiful for pickled stock to find a market. For the last two years the market has broken badly under the weight of the supplies received after the shipping orders had gone out. Buyers may take a chance that it will do it again, but growers should not take the chance that it won't.

Various Notes.

Baur & Steinkamp state that one-third of the blooms of St. Nicholas shown before the Florists' Club December 7 were exhibited December 5 at the Indianapolis meeting. After going through the usual amount of handling, the old blooms and the fresh ones could not be distinguished.

The George M. Garland Co., of Des Plaines, Ill., has a new "boss." He arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Garland December 6, and he weighs something over eight pounds. Both mother and son are doing well.

The George Wittbold Co. expects to have a good crop of red carnations at its Edgebrook greenhouses in time for the Christmas demand. Other colors are off crop. The new rooms for the Texas land has proven an irresistible attraction to George M. Garland, of Des Plaines. He is now in the Lone Star state, looking over the ground with a view to purchasing.

The Foley Mfg. Co. has completed a new steel frame greenhouse for the city of Cadillac, Mich.

The Raedlein Basket Co. has been so rushed with Christmas orders that night work has been necessary two or three times a week.

In the weekly report of trade conditions now being issued by Kyle & Foerster, A. C. Spencer points out, under date of December 9, that the present demand and tendency of prices are exactly seasonable.

A. Henderson, who has kept in close touch with the lycopodium market, says that the notable feature has been the absence of demand for bulk green after the advance orders were out. Wreathing is going much better, he says.

E. E. Pieser keeps up his old friendships on South Water street and almost any Saturday afternoon you can see him making his way back to the Kennicott store laden with some delicacy picked up during his weekly visit to the provisions market.

Phil Schupp says the bouvardia now coming in is not only the longest ever handled by J. A. Budlong, but that he thinks it is the longest ever seen in this market.

Zech & Mann have a grower who is still growing Bridesmaid, cutting a good crop, and say that many out-of-town customers ask for it in place of Killarney.

While he recognizes that the weather for the next week will be quite a factor, E. C. Amling thinks the Christmas supply of Killarney will be the largest this market ever has known. "The growers have got so they can bring it in about the way they want it," he says, and adds the comment that "they all want it for Christmas."

John Poehlmann remarks that he never has seen Cattleya Percivaliana sell better than it has the last few weeks, during the interval between the crops of labiata and Trianæ.

Winterson's Seed Store says the paper Christmas bells, now offered so cheaply, are selling well again, though florists are buying more for store decorating than for retailing.

O. Johnson intimates that there is truth in the report that the Batavia Greenhouse Co. is figuring on another addition to its glass.

Peter Reinberg recently has been cutting a fine crop of roses in the houses that were hit by the cyclone.

C. W. McKellar figures that the Christmas business will come later than usual this year, but that it will in the end show the usual increase.

Henry Van Gelder is steadily increasing the space used for the Percy Jones business.

Miss Gunterberg says that the death of B. Eldredge will make no change in the Belvidere greenhouse affairs, the estate continuing all his businesses.

Weiland & Risch recently took out a building permit for the erection of six houses as an addition to their range at Evanston, but have abandoned the idea of going ahead with the work this winter. The houses will go up in the spring.

N. J. Wietor points with special pride to the Richmond roses now being cut, the stems being the longest in their experience, running up to five feet.

The arrival of a boy baby at the home of Mrs. Paul Kruger, December 8, gave George Reinberg the proud title of Grandpa.

C. M. Dickinson was called to New York unexpectedly December 9, but is again at his desk at E. H. Hunt's.

The Adams-Robertson Co., on Rush street, was given a fine illustrated write-up in the last issue of the British-American, a paper held in high esteem by the British-American residents of Chicago. Walter Adams is an American of British extraction and D. A. Robertson is a native of Kirkcaldy, Scotland.

John Kruchten has established quite a shipping trade on gardenias.

John Starrett asserts that the Hotel La Salle, where he is florist, is one of the largest buyers on the local market. He uses, he says, from 1,000 to 1,200 flowers every day in the year.

W. W. Randall, of the A. L. Randall Co., was summoned to appear December 11 for a fortnight's term of jury service during the busiest two weeks in the year. He was excused.

Harry Manheim considers the outlook bright. He says the orders already booked insure beating the record made last Christmas by Hoerber Bros.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market has dropped a little during the last week. Business is about the same, but with increased receipts. Violets suffered most. The demand for them disappeared on Saturday, just when it usually is strongest, and has been poor since. This is usual after the close of the football season. Roses are much more abundant. Many of them are fine. The values given in pink and white are above reproach. Carnations show less increase, although the springlike weather has increased their numbers too. Chrysanthemums are fast disappearing. The withdrawal of that grand late white, Jeanne Nonin, makes room for the Easter lily to emerge from retirement. Romans are quite a factor now, while the trading in valley and Paper Whites is brisk. Sweet peas of color prove more popular than white. Poinsettias have made their appearance and stem-burning has recommenced in earnest. The trading in greens is active. Boxwood, holly, lycopodium and laurel are bought and sold freely in surprisingly large quantities.

Centennial days will remember that back of the landscape gardener's office was a vast storeroom, from whose recesses all the odds and ends of gardening requisites were brought. This storeroom is a thing of the past. In its place has been reared a substantial temperate house, with lofty curved roof, concrete benches set on brick piers and concrete walks; a most substantial affair, filled with the best of the plants that formerly inhabited the old temperate house, and with many more.

Next to this new house is a second fern house, extending from the temperate house to the first fern house, glass partitions giving a clear view throughout. This second fern house is made necessary by Mr. Paul's trip to Jamaica, which resulted in many rare and beautiful species being added to different groups in the hall, and by the increase in the nephrolepis family. Mr. Schmitt assured me that he had all the members of this prolific family save four or five. It was pretty dark and I really can not tell; there certainly were a great many nephrolepis and Mr. Schmitt is a man of unimpeachable integrity, so I am sure he has them all save four or five and that they are doing well.

There are two rare orchids in bloom, of which Mr. Schmitt is justly proud. One is Vanda Sanderiana, with five spikes; they have had it with ten, bearing soft blue flowers. The other is Cypripedium Gaudianum, a rare hybrid, showing some of the blood of Curtisii, one of its parents.

The entire main floor of Horticultural hall is now given up to plants, except the office of the landscape gardener.

Partitions, offices, storeroom, every wooden obstacle has disappeared, leaving the view uninterrupted from end to end.

Outside, the sunken garden is being planted with tulips; no small undertaking when its size and designs are considered. This method of planting the parterre, giving two crops in one season, has attracted favorable comment from visitors to the park and draws large crowds in the early spring, when the bulbs are in bloom.

Roelofs.

"A good many buds." The speaker, a strongly built man in the prime of life, was gazing over a broad expanse of Killarney rose plants under glass; a sea of buds in front of him, flanked by oncoming crops to the left and right; behind him an equally broad expanse of White Killarney and of Richmond, rejoicing in full health and vigor.

The speaker was Joseph Heacock, senator from Montgomery county in the legislative halls of the Keystone state. It is doubtful whether any grower has ever looked on as fine a house of Killarney. It is certain that no senator has ever done so; for a florist to become a senator is not an everyday occurrence. The people of Pennsylvania benefit by the sense of duty that places so freely at their disposal the sterling qualities that have made a successful florist.

is left undone when it ought to be done. The system of growing is that practiced by most of the first-class rosarians of the day, the flowering of an entire crop on a given number of plants at once. The Killarneys that have been coming from this place into the Philadelphia market give promise of being in the front rank this season; last season they were unsurpassed.

A New Art Basket.

Paul Berkowitz sent a young man upstairs expressly to get some new baskets that had particularly pleased him. "These are new art baskets," Mr. Berkowitz said. "I want you to notice their beautiful ivory finish. They are of fine rattan, ornamented with garlands, a new basket that is sure to attract attention." In reply to a question Mr. Berkowitz said that Mr. Bayersdorfer had imported these baskets from abroad. They are round, or nearly so, of moderate depth, with rather short handles, and are quaint and pleasing.

Various Notes.

Robert Craig Co. reports an excellent demand for Christmas plants, already ahead of last year—the record year. The supply is so large that they hope to satisfy late orders.

M. Rice & Co. report many night letter telegram orders arriving each morning last week. Their visitors include: Mr. Barker, Trenton; G. H. Hoskins, Reading; Mr. Schroyer, Allentown.

Charles F. Edgar has commenced work with Pennock Bros.

The annual meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held December 11. The treasurer's report showed a satisfactory balance. The active membership is about 100, with fully as many members on the eleemosynary list. The following officers were reelected: Edwin C. Jellett, president; J. P. Willetts, Herman Burgen, Stewardson Brown, vice-presidents; George Redeles, secretary and treasurer. The secretary gave an interesting talk on house plants, in his usual happy vein.

The Henry A. Dreer store was decorated with some fine palms and ferns from the Riverton houses December 12.

Gentlemen:

Having heard so many complaints about florists having trouble with growing Elise Papworth Chrysanthemums, we wish to say we also had trouble until we learned that it wants to be planted early so they are strong plants when hot weather sets in, and if sprayed with Fungine three or four times a season, which keeps them healthy and in fine growing condition, this is also applicable to all other varieties, they make healthier plants and finer flowers.

Elise Papworth has proven to be a fine Commercial variety and better than Eaton, a pure white flower and better foliage.

Fungine we find indispensable for cuttings, we use it on our cutting bench all the time, especially for chrysanthemums, and thereby can use the same sand over and over again.

Thanking you in advance for your kind attention, we remain,

Yours truly,

METAIRIE RIDGE NURSERY CO., LTD.

Per Harry Papworth.

Murphy supplied the winning party's tribute to the city solicitor. In loose bunches 500 Beauties and 250 white chrysanthemums were used. It is said the most unique design at City hall was a fish sent to a member of the select council by the Lobster and Shrimp Country Club. M. J. Tommer made the body of white immortelles, with alyssum fins, mouth of red immortelles, Beauty eyes, and a base of white chrysanthemums. For a member of the executive committee a large pair of clogs filled with mums and roses was sent; quite appropriate for one "stepping into new shoes" in the political world.

Fire destroyed Theodore Edwards' flower store at Bridgeton early in the morning of December 11. No insurance.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have been working much overtime. The holiday season is certain to be the largest in the history of the house. Their visitors include George Stumpp, New York; Ernest Ashley, Allentown, Pa.; George Seidel, Hazelton; J. G. Shackmayer, of Z. D. Blackistone's, Washington, D. C.; H. J. Holmes, of Holmes Seed Co., Harrisburg, Pa.; Charles Seek, of C. Smith & Co., Baltimore; Miss Tille Held, Baltimore; George W. Berke, Atlantic City, N. J.

Edward Reid has some specially prepared holly wreaths that he is sending to his out-of-town customers.

Prospects are bright for a good Christmas, with likelihood of enough roses, carnations and other flowers to fill orders. Phil.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For a few days following Thanksgiving, prices held up well, owing to all growers being well cleaned up for the holiday, but later there was some little reaction. We have been favored with a week or more of almost cloudless skies and unusually high temperature, which has brought flowers on rather more rapidly than the market could properly digest them. Roses are in good supply and selling a little lower. Beauties continue to sell well. Other favorites are Mrs. Waddell, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Lady Hillingdon and Killarney. Some growers have Radiance and it takes well. For whites the demand is weak. Some chrysanthemums still come in, but they cut little figure, and people seem to have lost interest in them. It is doubtful if it pays to carry them after Thanksgiving. Violets are more plentiful, owing to the mild weather, and are a little lower. No further drop is likely, as growers will now hold their crops for Christmas. Carnations are of first-class quality, but do not sell so well as a week ago.

Lilies are ample for all calls. Valley is in oversupply. Some cut poinsettias are seen, at $2 to $3 per dozen. Larger bracts will, however, make double these prices later. Some excellent mignonette is now coming in and sells well, also snapdragons. Finer pansies were never seen in this market at any season of the year, and they clean up well. There is a superabundance of Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths, and a few yellow trumpet narcissi have appeared. Sweet peas are much more plentiful and cheaper. Stevia is in oversupply. Cattleyas continue scarce and are higher in price. Cypripediums are seen in great numbers. Some splendid Bouvardia Humboldtii is seen, the best making $1 per bunch. Asparagus is abundant and moving well.

Pot plant trade is brisk. Poinsettias, Lorraines, cyclamens, primulas, Otaheite oranges, ardisias, solanums, azaleas, palms and ferns are the leaders.

Various Notes.

H. H. Barrows & Son, of Whitman, have 10,000 plants of their new compact sport of Nephrolepis Whitmani. It is the finest variety in their collection and will soon be introduced. They are having heavy orders for nephrolepis and within a few days have shipped both to Canada and California.

The several committees in charge of the schedule for the National Sweet Pea Society's exhibition in Boston in July, 1912, met at Horticultural hall December 9 and arranged the schedule, which is on a comprehensive scale. Many additional special prizes have come in during the last few days.

The new Horticultural Club held its regular monthly meeting December 6, at the Market House. M. A. Patten spoke on "Commercial Floriculture," a discussion following.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, and F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, are still cutting nice lots of cattleyas. Mr. Dolansky has a splendid lot of poinsettias in pans for the holidays.

The finest mignonette is from William R. Nicholson, of Framingham. No other grower seems able to equal Mr. Nicholson with mignonette.

Special electrics on the Boston and Worcester Street railway will carry members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to Framingham, December 16, leaving Park Square at noon. A large attendance is assured, as also at the club meeting on December 19, when the annual election of officers will take place.

William Sim and Thomas Roland are in New York this week in the interest of the coming national sweet pea exhibition.

H. R. Comley is showing Strelitzia regina, Dendrobium formosum giganteum, odontoglossums, violas in variety and a fine assortment of yellow roses.

P. & W. O. Jahn, of East Bridgewater, are shipping carnations such as Pink Delight, Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon of splendid quality to W. A. Hastings.

Perhaps the most noteworthy and striking carnation seen in Boston is Peter Fisher's sensational new variety, Gorgeous, handled by the Boston Rose Co. Mr. Fisher may introduce this next season.

Neal E. Boyle, of Malden, spent a happy Thanksgiving, Mrs. Boyle presenting him with twins November 29. All are doing well.

William C. Wood, of Quincy, one of our leading pansy specialists, is sending large daily shipments of these flowers to the Boston Flower Exchange. Mr. Wood devotes several houses to them.

Albert Roper, of Tewksbury is a noted carnationist, and as raiser of Fair Maid, Chester Roper, Bay State and other sorts has secured more than a local fame. Some of his flowers have realized as much as $8 per hundred during the last week.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, is having splendid success with White Wonder, Gloriosa and Scarlet Glow this season.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. has hired the commodious store at 1 Park street, next to Boston Flower Exchange Market.

Joseph Fay, buyer for T. F. Galvin's stores, has been on the sick list two weeks, but is improving.

P. L. Carbone, in line with other progressive florists, is out with a splendid new auto delivery outfit.

The stork has of late been partial to the houses of the boys in the Flower Exchange. Now he has visited Everett and rejoicings are great.

The E. Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, was first in the market with Freesia Purity, December 11. They also had Trumpet Major narcissi the same day.

F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, will give a practical talk on "Planting by the Aid of Dynamite" at the club meeting December 19.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. reports an almost complete clean-up on all bulbs.

W. N. Craig.

J. R. Shield, for the last sixteen years superintendent of the F. G. Crane estate, has resigned to go into business for himself, having bought a greenhouse establishment near Boston.

Arthur Griffin, of Woburn, has one of the neatest and most up-to-date florists' establishments in New England. His specialty is high grade carnations. He has a white sport from Pink Delight which is a wonderful bloomer. He grows Pink Delight superbly, also Beacon, White Enchantress, Enchantress and other leaders.

PROMPT RETURNS.

So many florists are waiting, each week, for the arrival of The Review so that they can send orders, that the returns to advertisers usually are prompt:

The Review surely does the work. I sent in the advertisement Tuesday evening and Friday received the paper with it in. By Sunday I had the orders that cleaned up my stock. How is that for quick work? I expect to have some more advertising soon for "the one paper everybody reads."—R. K. Stokesberry, Leetonia, O., December 11, 1911.

GALESBURG, ILL.

Rome, N. Y.—E. J. Byam has again taken possession of the Elm street greenhouses, which he formerly conducted for several years.

Fort Madison, Ia.—A new apparatus for the extraction and distribution of nicotine has been invented and patented by Karl Boll. It is said to be remarkably simple and durable in construction, and effective in operation.

Always mention the Florists' Review when writing advertisers.

Bloomsburg, Pa.—Sheriff William P. Zehner, who since August, 1910, has been the owner of the greenhouses on Light Street road, formerly the property of Davis Bros., has entered into an agreement with William Allers, formerly of Danville, for the sale of the place. The transfer, however, is not to take place until May 1 of next year. Mr. Allers is a rose specialist and at present is employed at the Dillon greenhouses.

Vegetable Forcing.

LETTUCE ROT.

We would like to ask about lettuce rot, and whether there is any remedy for it. Frequently, after setting out a bed of lettuce, a plant rots here and there. By removing the affected plant at once, and applying air-slaked lime, with a little sulphur in it, on the soil from which the plant was removed, the disease seems to be checked. But when it attacks a bed that is half grown or older, it seems impossible to do anything with it, and sometimes we lose half the bed. G. & S.

Lettuce rot can often be avoided by taking off an inch of the top soil and putting back the same quantity of good, clean, new soil. If the plants are kept watered too much, so that the top soil is always wet, this condition is pretty sure to bring on the disease called lettuce rot. Give plenty of ventilation and keep the soil cultivated. F. R.

SNAILS AND MOLES.

Will you please tell us what we can do to get rid of snails in our greenhouse soil? They eat the young lettuce plants and do a great deal of damage. We are troubled also with moles, which rake up the ground and eat the roots. We have smilax, asparagus and other plants in a bed on the ground. H. H.

The snails can be caught by taking large lettuce leaves and laying them around on the beds. The slugs will eat on them and stay there, as they can hide under them after daylight. They should be collected each morning and more leaves should be laid in place before evening. They work mostly at night, but sometimes on cloudy days. The slugs can be poisoned by hollowing out half potatoes, putting a little Paris green inside them and laying them around.

The moles can be caught easily in the regular mole traps. All supply dealers handle these traps. They have several prongs, which are driven down through the mole if it ventures along the route over which the trap is set. In raising the soil as it goes, it springs the trap. F. R.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The warm weather that has prevailed here during the last week has not been good for the trade. Stock is more plentiful, especially carnations and roses. The former are still bringing good prices, while the latter are not going so well. Mums are much in evidence, despite the lateness of the season. There is a scarcity of single violets. Double violets are going well. Valley is fine. Some beautiful rubrum lilies are on the market. Sweet peas are good and in demand. Poinsettias are ahead of time, so far as the demand goes. They will not be wanted much before the holidays. The first azaleas are being shown, preparatory to the Christmas trade. Mme. Petrick is a favorite variety. Some nice stevia is seen.

Livingston's Superior Strains of

are developed through careful selection by the best growers of France.

Seeds are grown from transplanted roots which are critically sorted by men who know types required for greenhouse growing. Uniform size and shape, brilliant color of skin, small tops and quick growth are the characteristics that make our forcing strains of radishes so profitable to the grower. Test the truth of our statements by sowing now sorts offered below:

Rosy Gem produces shapely roots of typical size and attractive appearance. It grows quickly to good size, is easily bunched and sells readily at fancy prices. Oz., 5c; ¼-lb., 15c; lb., 60c, postpaid.

Fireball or Non Plus Ultra is the earliest, rich scarlet forcing sort in cultivation. Earlier than Scarlet Globe, with very small foliage. (See illustration). Oz., 5c; ¼-lb., 15c; lb., 60c, postpaid.

SEFTON FLORISTS' BOXES

CORRUGATED DESIGN STYLE AND FOLDING CUT FLOWER BOXES

Florists' success in shipping flowers depends to the greatest extent upon the point where their interest ceases in the sale of flowers. The progressive, prosperous florist retains his interest in a customer's order until it reaches destination, and for that reason he is careful to select the proper style and grade of box to insure safe delivery of his flowers.

Particular Florists are users of Sefton Corrugated Fibreboard Boxes for the shipment of Floral Designs as well as our superior line of Folding Cut Flower Boxes. They know from experience that Sefton Boxes combine high quality with low price and make neat, attractive packages which carry the flowers safely to destination. Write for our Flower Box Price List.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week was not a brisk one for the local retailers. There was quite a lot of funeral work, but aside from this little was done. The wholesalers say stock moved slowly some days, but there is no overstock of any one thing just now. The prices have kept up fairly well on all first grade stock and there has been a good shipping trade in cut stock and supplies.

Among the stock seen last week were some extra fancy Killarney, Richmond and Maryland roses. The Kirkwood growers are, as usual, sending in the bulk of the violets that come to this market. These were quite plentiful all through the week, the best Mazzuras bringing 75 cents, while Californias sell at 40 and 50 cents per hundred, and with clear, cold weather a great crop is expected for the Christmas demand.

Chrysanthemums are practically over, except for a few excellent blooms of Yellow Jones, Nonin, W. H. Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick and a few small Bonnaffon. Carnations are coming in fine, those from Kirkwood being in the majority in this market with the price up to 3 and 4 cents for fancy grades.

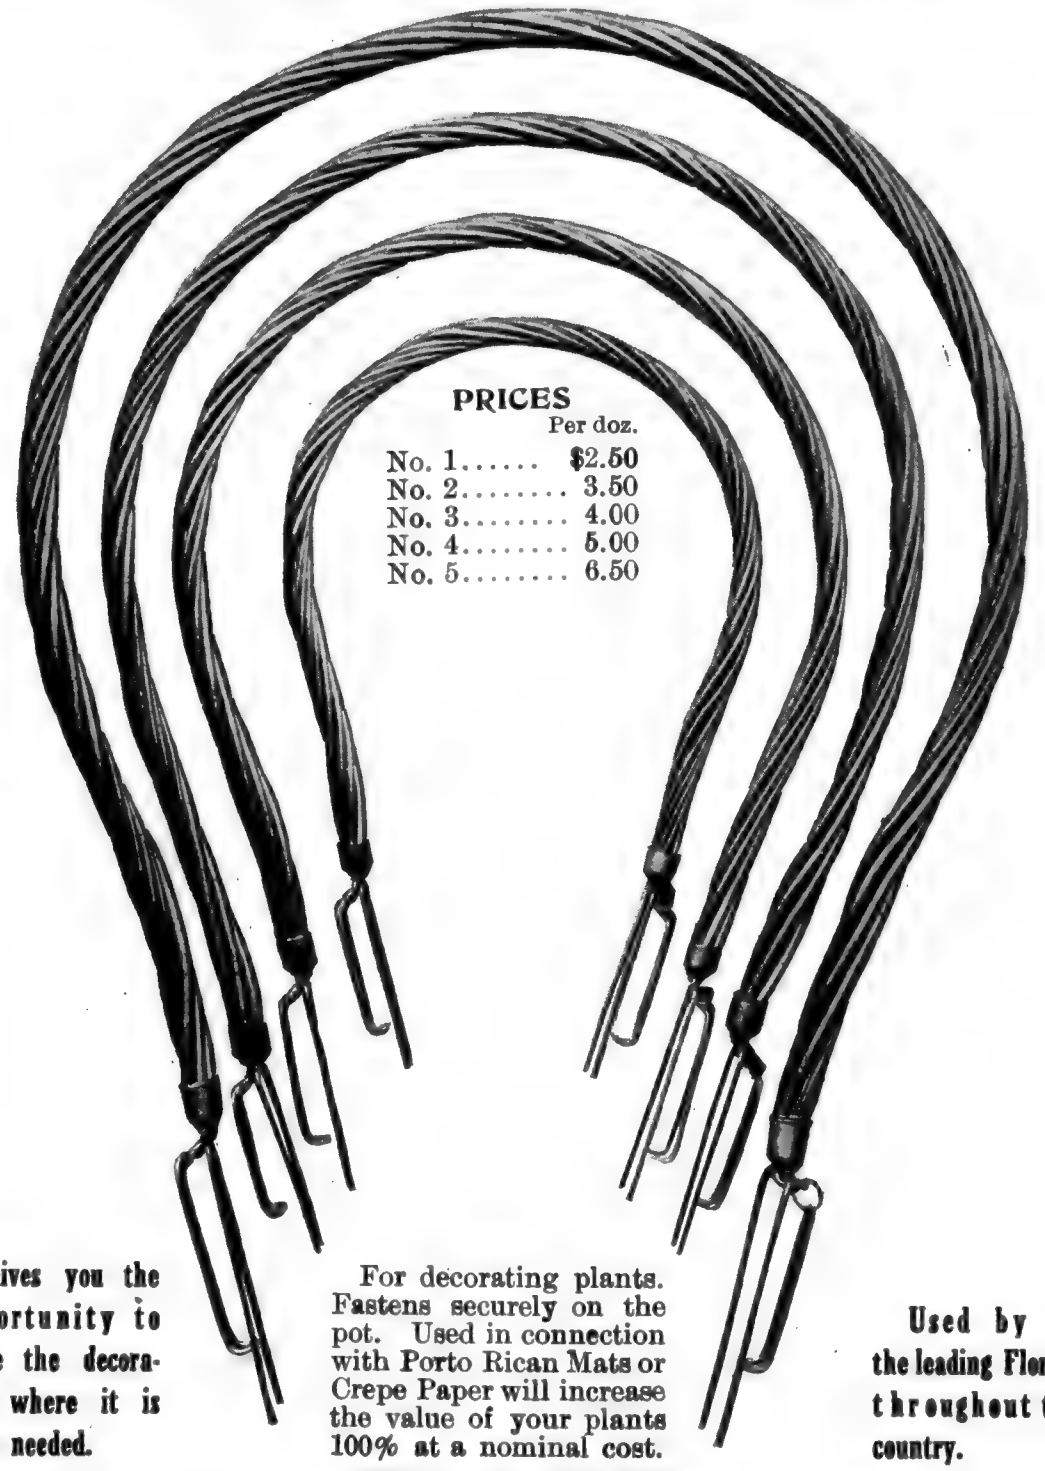
Paper Whites are plentiful, but Romans are rather scarce. There are a lot of fine lilies to be had and stevia sells well. Cut poinsettias sell at $3 per dozen.

Wild smilax had quite a call last week; in fact, all greens had a good demand.

Various Notes.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening, December 11. The feature of the meeting was a paper by W. W. Ahlweiler, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, on "Recent Developments in Our Knowledge of Stomata."

The Ladies' Home Circle held its last meeting for this year Wednesday, December 13. Many surprises were in store for those who attended.



A. S. Halstead, proprietor of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill., met with a painful accident recently in falling over a box in one of the greenhouses. He was completely laid up for a week, but is out and about again with the aid of a cane and crutch.

Henry Emunds and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, spent a day here last week and report a good Thanksgiving business. Mr. Emunds is still cutting fine Chadwick and Nonin mums and expects

Geo. H. Angermueller says he is having a good run on velvet poinsettias, waterproof crepe paper and birch bark novelties. He enjoyed quite a good shipping trade last week.

Henry Berning handled a nice lot of Beauties and carnations last week. A few good sized mums were also seen here.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., left Monday night for Kansas City to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Western Nurserymen's Association. About January 1 he will leave for an extended eastern trip, his last stop being at Boston, where the next meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held in June.

Seven Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Last week was a good one for the retailers—everybody was busy. Debutantes took up most of the attention, but several large funerals helped to keep everyone on the jump.

Among the wholesalers trade was up to their best expectations. Chrysanthemums have about disappeared, but will not be missed, as there is a nice long list of flowers to select from, which includes sweet peas, mignonette, baby primrose, white and yellow daisies, valley and Roman hyacinths for those who want something in small flowers, and Beauties, lilies, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses with stems thirty-six inches long; Paper Whites and stevia for filling, with Cattleya Trianæ, Dendrobium formosum and oncidiums in the way of orchids, and plenty of violets. Everything is of the finest quality.

The growers have not been pleased with the kind of weather. It has been entirely too springlike. The last few days brought on some of the stock which, with the usual weather, would have made Christmas flowers. But there will be an abundance of flowers, just the same, for the holiday.

Various Notes.

Fred Kocher, superintendent of the plant of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., says he saved several cars of coal last week, but thinks he paid for them with the immense cut of roses, which cold weather would have kept back for later cutting. However, he admits their prospects still are for the best holiday cut they ever have had.

A few of the carnation growers have just got to the end of their finest cut and will not be quite ready for Christmas. These are stock that was planted early. There is no doubt, however, that they will still be able to supply the demand.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening in the Dutch room of the Fort Pitt hotel and had a well attended session, with some good exhibits. E. D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., was a guest of the club and gave an interesting talk on chrysanthemums, answering all questions, which were quite a few, as many of our growers took advantage of the opportunity to get the opinion of such an authority. An informal lunch was served. Next meeting will be nomination night. President Jones says it is up to the club to give the honors to another, and that the willing horse will not allow himself to be overworked further.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First VicePres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

LAVERNE F. JONES, formerly proprietor of the Jones Seed Store, at Grand Rapids, Mich., has been adjudged a bankrupt on his own petition. His liabilities are placed at about $11,000, with no assets.

CONGRESSMAN JAMES R. MANN has again introduced his pure seed bill and it has been referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, of which Mr. Mann is ranking member, but no longer chairman. In his campaign for re-election, he asserted his intention of urging the bill for passage, but his influence as a member of the minority, though its leader, generally is figured as not being what it was in the last Congress.

NOTICE has been given that "the United States Department of Agriculture desires quotations for furnishing standard varieties of vegetable and flower seed from surplus stocks or under growing contract for the 1912-1913 Congressional seed distribution. Approximately 1,200,000 pounds of vegetable and 50,000 pounds of flower seed will be required. Bids will be opened by the Board of Awards at 2 p. m., January 9, 1912. Copies of specifications can be obtained from the office of seed distribution, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C."

THE first general seed catalogue for 1912 to reach The Review was that of Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O. It was in the mail of December 9, and was accompanied by the firm's market gardeners' list. This is three years in succession that the Livingston general catalogue has been the first in the file, but this year it was only one business day ahead of the 152-page book of Arthur T. Boddington, New York, which came December 11, and later that day the annual of the Ebbert Seed Co., Rocky Ford, Colo., arrived from the printers, the Regan Printing House, Chicago.

WHEN the 1912 catalogues are received it will be found that there is in them a lot of talk about the scarcity of seeds, but not nearly so much evidence of it in the prices quoted. The average house has tried to keep its prices at least as low as those of its competitors.

THE German steamers are bringing in many shipments of seeds. The crops may all be short, but it is a little consolation to get the seeds before the selling season begins. The lateness of shipments last year was due to the wet autumn and the earliness this season to the fine fall weather.

THE United States Department of Agriculture has issued a circular to acquaint the public with the partial results of a recent investigation as to the dates of sowing and harvesting the principal crops. The work has been in progress for the last two years, that portion of it which relates to the cereal and forage crops of the United States has been completed, and that relative to truck crops is in process of execution. "The Golden Queen that I ordered from you were planted in a carnation house on February 7th, and we are now getting fine spikes and handsome flowers. in official view, by the Customs Court decision in the appeal of Breck vs. the United States.

A FIRE in the office of the Successful Farming Publishing Co., Des Moines, Ia., December 9, gave the Iowa Seed Co. a close call on its catalogues. The catalogue requires four carloads of paper and the work is about two-thirds complete. For a while it was feared that the entire building would go, but the fire was finally extinguished and little damage was done to the catalogues. It would have been a hard blow to have such a loss at this season of the year, when the time for sending out seed catalogues is so close at hand.

MARCH weather conditions may have been one of the causes for the failure of the Christmas spirit to develop at Chicago as early this year as was expected, and the latter fact undoubtedly caused the weakening of the market for bouquet green and holly. At the latter part of last week green was offered as low as $6.50 or even $6, with no active demand, even though these prices certainly gave no profit to the sellers. There is every indication that a freeze will stiffen the market, but this week it still is sagging and offers are made at $5.50. Holly has been offered as low as $3 per case, but on inspection some of the prospective buyers concluded that it would be difficult to get even that much money out of the stock. It takes a buyer of tolerably keen wits to come off first best in picking up commission holly.

NEW BRITISH DISCLAIMER.

It will be recalled that in a recent British non-warranty case referred to in these columns, the Lord Chancellor in delivering judgment said: "If it is desired by a seller to throw the risk of any honest mistake onto the buyer, then he must use apt language, and I should have thought the clearer he tries to make the language the better. I do not think he has done so in the clause to which I have referred; and therefore I think judgment ought to be entered for the plaintiffs."

In consequence of this verdict, the solicitors of the Nursery and Seed Trade Association, in conjunction with the counsel in the case referred to, have drafted a new clause, which has been adopted by the association and recommended by it to its members and the trade. It is as follows:

"We believe that all seeds, bulbs and roots sold by us are of the description and kind specified by us at the time of

BURPEE'S ANNUAL FOR 1912

"The Leading American Seed Catalogue"

¶ Is now ready for mailing. The first edition of more than four hundred thousand copies will soon be distributed. As usual it is sent unsolicited only to "Customers of Record." We shall be pleased, however, to mail a copy immediately upon application (a postal card will do) to every one who appreciates Quality in Seeds.

¶ This Silent Salesman (and we employ no "talking" salesmen to solicit orders) tells the plain truth about The Best Seeds That Can Be Grown. It is a bright book of 178 pages and shows, besides colored plates of Burpee-Specialties, hundreds of the choicest vegetables and most beautiful flowers, illustrated from photographs. It is almost indispensable to all who garden either for pleasure or profit.

¶ The "House of Burpee" is known the world over not only as Experts in Sweet Peas, but also as Seed Specialists. No other American firm has ever introduced so many novelties of sterling value—and no other growers supply seeds annually direct to so many planters. It might be to your interest to read The Burpee Annual. It will cost you only one cent for a post-card to send us your address—and you are under no obligation to buy. We never annoy applicants with "follow up" letters!

¶ Shall we mail you a copy?

¶ If so, kindly write today.

Burpee's Blue List for 1911

THE most complete catalogue published for MARKET GARDENERS, TRUCKERS and FLORISTS. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye ⊙ placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given of many new and valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1912 contains 146 pages, with hundreds of half-tone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalogue we have condensed an experience of thirty-five years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalogue; but if you are a private planter please do not ask for it, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

sale, but owing to the practical impossibility in many cases of being certain of this, we give no undertaking that such seeds, bulbs or roots will correspond with the description under which they are sold, and we make all sales subject to this condition. We further give no warranty, express or implied, as to their growth, description, quality or productiveness, and will not be in any way responsible for the crop. If the purchaser does not accept the goods sold to him, on these terms, they are at once to be returned to us."

DON'T ALL SPEAK AT ONCE.

We note an article in The Review on seed shortage, page 69, issue of November 30, 1911. We have been intending for some time to go into the seed growing business, and if you know of anyone wanting seed, especially seed peas, we shall be glad to hear from them. We are now negotiating for the growing of seed on about 200 acres of what we consider suitable land. Thanking you for any information you may be able to give us, we remain, GOVERNMENT SEED TESTING.

In his annual report the Secretary of Agriculture has this to say about the government's work of seed testing:

"On account of the provision for seed testing made by state laws in North Carolina and Nebraska, coöperation with these states has been discontinued, and two new laboratories are being opened in connection with the agricultural experiment stations in California and Louisiana, the laboratories in Missouri, Oregon and Indiana being continued.

"Hairy-vetch seed, which has this year for the first time been collected for examination for adulterants, was frequently found to contain seed of cultivated varieties of spring vetch, the latter generally being useless for fall sowing on account of winter killing. An examination of the hairy-vetch seed-growing section of northern Germany

Many a man is just about now having his good disposition massaged by the lady with the French heels because of the overdone Christmas racket. In the olden days a man looked forward to Xmas as a time of good cheer, but of late years the strain on his pocketbook has been so great that it has overbalanced the good cheer. He has come to dread the date. People of late give presents they cannot afford, and the reciprocity feeling has made it a hardship on others. Some people give presents to get presents, and, on the whole, it is certainly being greatly overdone. Now a good way to overcome this excessive giving is to give flowers. Just a few will do—enough to show a true regard for your friends and acquaintances, and at the same time not stare them in the face forever, to remind them of their duty to you another year. There is nothing more appropriate, and nothing more beautiful to demonstrate the right feeling at Xmas time. A pot of Xmas lilies is especially fine, or a medium size Azalea. Florists do well to advertise flowers, especially for Xmas—boost the business. Horseshoe Brand Lily bulbs and Azaleas will give the florist good ground to work on, and if you are not prepared this year, see that you are in 1912. Order early. Send for catalogue—it will be ready soon.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6- 7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case,	$15.00 per case;	full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7- 9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case,	16.00 per case;	full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case,	18.00 per case;	full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots	$0.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants	$1.00 to 1.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 10-inch plants	2.50 each

Downieville, Pa.—It is reported that J. C. Trees, the millionaire oil man of Pittsburgh, has prepared plans for the erection of greenhouses, to cost about $100,000, on Einhouse Farm, his estate near this town. The plans also include a residence, of approximately the same value as the range of greenhouses, and the estate, it is said, will be one of the finest in western Pennsylvania.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

L. R. Bryant, Princeton, Ill., has been elected first vice-president of the Northern Illinois Horticultural Society.

Kirkman & Son, Fresno, Cal., are establishing a branch nursery on the Borden ranch at Madera, Cal., F. P. South being in charge.

Root-knot and its control is the subject of a bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The author is Prof. Ernst A. Bessey, of the Michigan Agricultural College.

Frank Lebkicker, who for many years was associated with his father, the late Samuel Lebkicker, in the nursery business at Freeport, Ill., is now at Los Angeles, Cal., where he has purchased a fruit farm.

Within the last ten years a large percentage of the hickory trees have died in various sections throughout the northern tier of states from Wisconsin to Vermont and southward through the Atlantic states to central Georgia and to a greater or less extent within the entire range of natural growth of the various species. While there are several and sometimes complicated causes of the death of the trees, investigations by experts of the Bureau of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, have revealed the fact that the hickory bark-beetle is by far the most destructive insect enemy and is therefore, in the majority of cases, the primary cause of the dying of the trees.

It is stated at North Yakima, Wash., that there have been shipped from the Yakima valley to December 1 this season twenty-two cars of nursery stock, which is just about a third of the amount shipped to the same date last season, when the aggregate was sixty-one cars. The difference in the fall shipments, however, does not indicate properly the relative standing of the business this and last year In the first place there is every indication, at this time, that the spring shipments will be heavier. It is also true that the weather conditions this year have had some effect. It seems, however, that there are few large orchards to be planted this season as compared with other years. Hitherto large areas have been planted under contract, the trees to be cared for by the land selling companies for two or three years, after which the absentee owner becomes responsible and must himself take charge.

NURSERYMAN ASKS LABEL LAW.

An unusual scene was that when a nurseryman denounced the sale of apple trees wrongly labeled and called upon the state legislature to pass a law making it a crime to sell stock under a wrong label. The nurseryman was E. A. Smith, of Lake City, and the Minnesota State Horticultural Societv promptly adopted a resolution embodying his ideas. The trouble was that unscrupulous persons were said to be trading on the advertising recently given for the Wealthy apples, which won for Minnesota the first prize at the Spokane apple show. Varieties have been delivered, Mr. Smith declared, bearing Wealthy labels, that never would bear Wealthy apples. R. D. Underwood and H. W. Beebe, also of the Jewell Nursery Co., were prominent figures at the meeting. Other nurserymen on the program included T. E. Cashman, Owatonna; S. D. Richardson, Winnebago, and W. Pfaender, New Ulm. Many nurserymen were present.

NEW YORKERS TO ORGANIZE?

In the following letter to the florists' clubs of the state, the floricultural department at Cornell, the State Experiment Station, proposes an organization of the florists of the state to push trade interests. Here is the letter:

New York stands first among all the states of the Union on the basis of the importance of her floricultural investments. Notwithstanding this, she has failed for the past two years to interest the legislators at Albany sufficiently to secure an appropriation for the express purpose of promoting the floricultural industry.

The florists of Illinois, by united effort, have secured appropriations aggregating $80,000, which have been employed or are to be used for buildings, equipment, and to assist investigations in behalf of commercial floriculture. These appropriations have been secured by concerted, well organized effort.

In New York the fruit interests are thoroughly organized and secure continuous aid from the state. The various farming industries are also recognized by legislative assistance, especially designed to promote their particular features. New York has a considerable number of live, hustling florists' clubs. These are in the main doing splendid work in maintaining local interest and spreading information regarding floricultural practice. There is, however, little or no coöperation between these clubs.

Has the time arrived for a federation of interests? May we not effect a state organization to take charge of questions of state-wide significance? Such a state organization would in no way supplant the function of local clubs or societies, but would be expected to act more effectively on all legislative questions and problems affecting the whole state. The opportunities for expanding floricultural interests are great.

Can the florists of the Empire State do more to bring before the public the desirability of expending greater effort in beautifying home grounds with flowers and plants?

Is there opportunity for coöperation with civic improvement organizations and the great school gardening movement?

Are the florists of New York State interested in promoting the next national flower show to be held in New York city in 1913?

Are the florists of the state interested in the establishment of a floricultural hall at the State Fair?

Are the florists of the Empire State ready and willing to throw their influence with a movement to secure an appropriation for the erection and equipment of a range of glass at the State College of Agriculture, to be devoted exclusively to the solving of problems in commercial floriculture?

These are some of the problems which might be effectively assisted by a state organization.

Is this a subject in which your club is interested, and if so, might it not be well to use it as a text for a discussion at one of your early meetings?

The Department of Horticulture of the New York State College of Agriculture stands ready to assist in every way in its power any movement of this kind. If thought wise, a meeting, at which your club should be represented by delegate or delegates, can be called at the New York State College of Agriculture at any time agreed upon by a majority of the clubs of the state. This meeting could readily pass upon constitution and by-laws and effect an organization, and the florists of the Empire State would then be able to present a united front on all questions affecting interests in common. These are suggestions. We shall be glad to correspond with clubs or individuals interested in a movement of this kind. May we not hear from you before very long?

Yours for the advancement of floriculture,

John Craig,
Professor of Horticulture.
A. C. Beal,
Assistant Professor of Floriculture.

PACIFIC COAST.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

Since the beginning of Thanksgiving week the market has showed considerable improvement over recent conditions. Carnations, which occupy the most prominent position among local crops, took quite a jump, so that florists still had something to be thankful for, even after the low prices that prevailed during November. Chrysanthemums this year have been of fine quality, but scarcely reached the prices of recent years. Last week there was a brisk demand at good prices. There is still a considerable stock of mums to move. Local violets have been largely side-tracked by the California imports, which, though quite scentless on arrival here, seem to meet requirements. Cyclamens are selling well, with better plants than usual on the market. A good number of out-of-town orders accelerated trade recently.

Various Notes.

The Hollywood Gardens held a chrysanthemum show at their premises on upper Second avenue last week, which was visited by a large number of interested and delighted spectators. The ladies received floral souvenirs.

The Seattle Florists' Club holds its regular meetings on the second Tuesday of each month, in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce. The program for next year includes a rose show in July, as well as a chrysanthemum show in November. In the rose show the club expects to have the coöperation of the Seattle Rose Society, an organization mostly composed of amateurs, with whose help it is confidently expected a large and successful exhibition will be held.

A. E. Buxton is erecting an addition to his plant at Brighton, having decided to grow some Easter lilies as well as carnations.

Many growers are already making preparations for the next season's cucumber business, as this year's cucumber crop was more than usually remunerative. This proceeding should tend to improve the rather glutted condition of the carnation market.

The members of the Bowling Club, in connection with the Florists' Club, think they are no small potatoes, and are open to meet any similar organization in battle.

Misses Anna J. and Bessie Burns, so long with the Woodland Park Floral Co. at the Second avenue store, have started in business on their own account in the Lyon building, on the corner of Third avenue and James street. The store they occupy is 14x70 feet. They are supported by the King County Flower Growers' Association and expect to secure a good portion of the wholesale and retail trade. We wish these popular ladies the success they are entitled to.

John Holze, of the Queen City Floral Co., has just completed the erection of a new range of glass on his premises at Thirteenth and East Union streets. A short time ago he secured a new lease and, with advancing trade, considered himself justified in entirely remodeling and reconstructing his plant,

THIS DEPARTMENT PAYS.

Advertisers who use space in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review report almost invariably good results. Like this:

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean for Thanksgiving and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash., November 30, 1911.

The trade on the coast is growing rapidly and all the hustlers in that section watch the Pacific coast pages to learn about sources of supply, since so many need more stock than they can produce.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The pre-holiday trade is all that could be expected. All stock is moving nicely. Carnations and roses are plentiful and mums are about equal to the demand. Numerous weddings utilize all available valley. Orchids also are used considerably for bridal arrangements. Judging from advance orders, the Christmas business will be in advance of former years. Stock is in good shape, with plenty to go around. Poinsettias are the principal flower of the season and, generally speaking, are well shaped and colored. Green goods are steady in demand. Business houses have started early with window arrangements.

The Market.

The weather has turned a bit colder, with slight frosts in the morning, but plenty of sunshine as well. As a consequence there is quite a difference in the quantity of stock being brought into town. There is practically nothing from the outside except a few late mums and violets. Some Paper Whites have been cut and they come in nicely to help on funeral work. Mums have risen about fifty per cent in price and the quality is not as good as it was earlier in the season. Violets are still the most popular flower and although the price has not advanced the bunches have decreased in size.

Cattleyas and other orchids are in better supply than they have been and move about as usual. Carnations are a shade higher, with plenty in sight. Roses have also advanced quite a bit in price and the better quality stock is somewhat scarce. Everyone is looking toward Christmas and wondering whether it is to be a record breaker or not. A glance backward at the summary for Thanksgiving confirms the earlier statement that the bulk of the trade equaled that of 1910, but the sales were smaller and more numerous and the principal demands were for less expensive grades of stock.

Various Notes.

The Hackel Floral Co. has opened a new store at 127 Powell street and will operate it under the name of the St. Francis Floral Co.

There is less inclination shown among the retailers to keep their stores closed Sunday afternoons and many of them are falling back to the old-time hours.

ROSES IN CALIFORNIA.

The Budding Season.

After the stocks are planted and growing strongly, the budding season comes around. This is another important phase. The cutting of buds must be done with great care and precision, and woe to the grower who relaxes his vigilance at this time! Careless help have driven many a nurseryman to distraction when he deserved a better fate. The selection of varieties and the quantity of each to be worked is another perplexing problem. The fickle public changes its wishes often and without notice. The sort that is popular this season can not be given away next year, and vice versa. We are supposed to know all of this ahead of time and act accordingly. There are quite a number of so-called standard varieties for which there is always a call in limited or fair quantity, but with the bulk of the different kinds it is something of a gamble.

About budding itself there is little room for argument, but about the mistakes made after the bud has been inserted a book might be written. Presuming that the scions are properly cut and handled and the choice of tying material is right, we must pay attention to the man who ties the strings. Too few wraps, too loose wrapping or carelessness in making a knot ruins many thousands of good materials yearly. Then the growing of the stocks must not be allowed to stop; too much stress can not be laid on this point. There is also the question as to whether the young stocks are to be encouraged by artificial means to shoot out quickly or not. The effect of a possible cold snap or a heavy wind storm must be taken into consideration and the young wood pruned accordingly. These two latter conditions can not be entirely forestalled, and he is indeed lucky who does not lose a good portion of his crop occasionally by some of these happenings. But, barring accidents and under usual conditions, the buds are ready for inspection in a few weeks after budding. If all points are right there should be no failure greater than one per cent, and this has been our record for many years. Occasionally we get poor scions of some new variety from

This magnificent, giant yellow rose has been tested for three years in our benches; it stands head and shoulders above all other sorts of its color and will rank with American Beauty and the Killarneys in value and grandeur—because

It has a long, pointed bud, which can be cut tight for market. It is pre-eminently a long-stemmed rose. The stem is always stiff. It is free in bottom breaks. Is extraordinarily vigorous and healthy. Belongs in the class of Big Roses. Its keeping qualities rank with the best. Buds shipped from Richmond last December opened up perfectly in both Philadelphia and New York, where it scored 90 before the Florists' Club.

The color is orange-copper or golden orange and golden yellow, all intense shades, extremely brilliant in effect.

Come and see it growing; we have 8,000 of it benched.

Does splendidly out of doors; will rank high as a bedder. At the Chicago show, 1910, it was awarded the silver cup for the best new rose never before exhibited, and the judges unanimously gave it honorable mention additional. Has created a sensation wherever shown.

Raised by M. Pernet-Ducher, from whom we bought the American rights.

We have divided our stock with Mr. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., to give eastern growers a chance to see it growing. Will be distributed March 1 in America by C. H. Totty and The E. G. Hill Co. Mr. Pernet will distribute same date in Europe.

The American price is $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000 (own roots); $5.00 per 100 additional for grafts

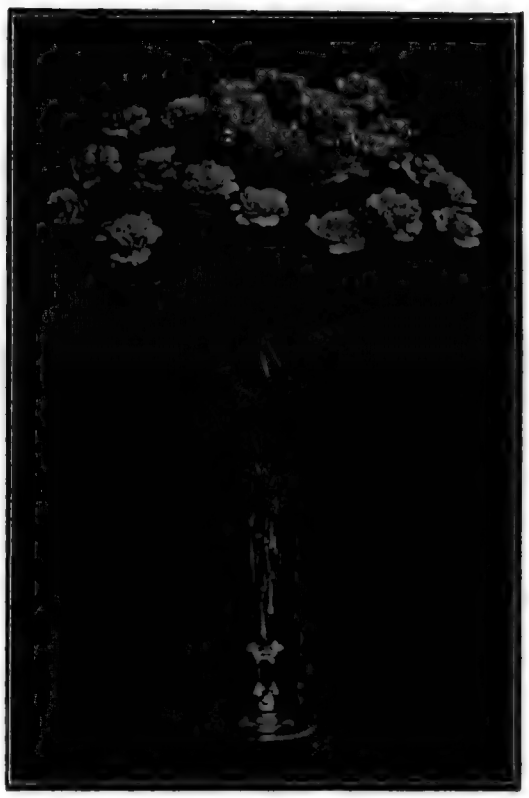
GREENWICH, CONN.



The first annual meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held at Stamford December 8, with eighty members present, seven new members being elected. The following officers were chosen for 1912: President, James Stuart; vice-president, Robert Williamson; treasurer, Thomas Aitchison; corresponding secretary, Oscar Addor; financial secretary, J. B. McArdle; executive committee, Chas. Adcock, J. T. Burns, Wm. Smith, James Aitchison and P. W. Popp.

It was decided to hold the meetings for 1912 in Greenwich. J. K. M. L. Farquhar will lecture at the meeting January 12. The society voted to hold the fall chrysanthemum show at New Rochelle, N. Y., and the summer rose show at Greenwich.

The judges recommended a certificate of merit to James Stuart for calanthes. Cultural certificates were given to T. W. Stobo for carnations, and to Robert Williamson for vegetables. Honorable mention was given to James Foster for Cypripedium insigne and to Thos. Ryan for three varieties of carnations. A vote of thanks was given to John Grant for Kaiserin roses and to A. Peterson for sweet peas.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

The Springfield Florists' Club held its regular meeting December 11, in the rooms of the Commercial Club. After the transaction of routine business, Harry F. Good read a carefully prepared, interesting and scientific paper on "Soils," a subject of most vital importance to every florist and nurseryman. With the aid of a high-power microscope, samples of a number of different soils were shown, giving the members a better understanding of the elements necessary to the growth of plants. A general discussion followed, participated in by all members present, in which the idea prevailed that it would be well for growers to submit samples of their soils to the proper department of the government experiment stations for analysis and thus learn of any element lacking for the production of best results in plant, bloom and fruit. NEW ORLEANS.

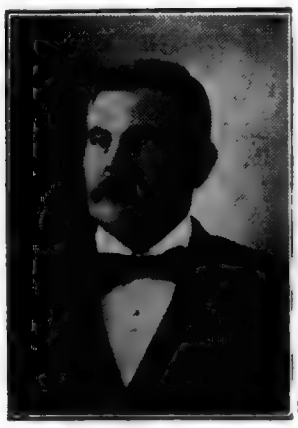
The Market.

With the advancement of the season business is increasing considerably. Several prominent weddings called for the best in the line of cut flowers, and church and home decorations, some of them on an elaborate scale, gave the decorators a chance to show their skill. The stores are filling a larger number of country orders than last year and the demands are mostly for choice flowers. The growers are getting ready for Christmas and, although the extreme changes in the weather have had some effect on certain plants, the stock in general is good and will quickly be disposed of. The azaleas show the effect of the dry season in Belgium and the early varieties are not so full of buds, nor are they so far advanced as in other years. Large plants in full bloom will demand high prices.

The retailers are hoping for somewhat lower temperature prior to Christmas, for large quantities of flowers will be shipped in from Chicago and they will travel better in colder weather.

R. E.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.



Business is fairly good, the supply of flowers is adequate and prices remain about the same as usual. Stevia and candytuft help out, also sweet alyssum. Flowering plants sell fairly well, also nice ferns.

E. H. Chamberlain was in Boston and vicinity last week, looking up stock for Christmas.

H. A. Jahn is cutting nice candytuft.

Good keeping and shipping qualities are one of the best assets a carnation can have.

ST. NICHOLAS

ships and keeps well, as is shown by the following letter:

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29, 1911.

Messrs. Baur & Steinkamp,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Gentlemen: The writer thought you might like to know a little bit more of the St. Nicholas carnations you sent here last week. They arrived Saturday morning, November 25, in first-class condition. They were here on exhibition all day, the writer took them home, and this morning, November 29, they are still in perfect shape.

It is a wonderful keeper. You must have cut these at least Thursday night, because to get them here by Saturday morning they would have to be shipped from Indianapolis Friday morning. This speaks remarkably well for this variety, considering that it had to travel almost a thousand miles to get here, and we predict for it a bright future.

Yours respectfully,
Henry F. Michell Co.
Paul F. Richter, General Manager.

Everywhere that we have exhibited St. Nicholas this fall it was invariably conceded the best scarlet on exhibition. Scored high every time. 87 points at Chicago Dec. 7th, and one-third of the blooms staged had been exhibited at Indianapolis Dec. 5th. Come and see how free it is. Send in your order now. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS, CARNATIONS AND ROSES

In CHRYSANTHEMUMS

We will distribute the usual high-class list of six or more of Mr. Pockett's Australian varieties, which will include Mrs. Geo. Burke, a grand bronze; Mrs. A. M. Henshaw and Annie L. Angus, whites; Mrs. Harry Turner, crimson, and Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, a lovely white, besides several other seedlings of surpassing merit.

In NEW ROSES

We are putting out the yellow "Sunburst," in conjunction with the E. G. Hill Co.—the giant yellow that creates a sensation wherever shown.

In CARNATIONS

We are distributing Wodenethe, the white you have been waiting for. It has been called the most perfect Carnation ever raised—a fancy in every sense of the word.

Brooklyn, a cerise pink; a "bread-and-butter" Carnation that will produce more from a given space than any Carnation I know of.

COME AND SEE THESE VARIETIES GROWING

¶ You will also see our 1911 varieties of Carnations and Roses—Princess Charming and White House in Carnations, and Lady Hillingdon in Roses, which is going to take the place of all other medium-sized yellows as a commercial florists' flower.

CHAS. H. TOTTY, Madison, N. J.

Giant-Flowering Cyclamen

For the last 15 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers, that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received first and second prizes at the Toledo Florists' Club meeting early in November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce. Strong August seedlings, now ready for a shift, $2.00 per 100, $18.00 per 1,000; once transplanted, $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1,000; 3-inch, 4-inch, 5-inch and 6-inch plants, for this season's blooming, at from 10c to 75c each. CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The warm weather of the last week has done wonders for the Christmas crops, and the present indications are for a good cut of Killarneys, Beauties, carnations and practically all other flowers.

The market has been fair, supply and demand being about equal. The quality of the Killarney roses is notably fine, some elegant buds being seen on 42-inch stems. The prospects are for a good crop of this grade of stock for Christmas. Supplies of all kinds have been moving nicely, which shows that buyers are stocking up early and avoiding the rush.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Fetters Co. had the decorations for one of the largest weddings of the year, the Hoyt-Mather affair, December 2. It was in the Second Presbyterian church. Over 1,000 large Yellow Chadwick mums were used.

The McCallum Co. reports a marked increase in the supply business in the last month. They have a full line of Christmas novelties, as well as the staple goods. This concern also is handling white lilac of good quality.

A crowd of Cleveland florists visited L. L. Lamborn's greenhouses at Alliance last week and found the place in fine shape. The Beauties and Killarneys are timed just right for a Christmas crop.

Knoble Bros. had the decorations for the Hexter-Stein wedding at the Excelsior Club, December 7. The display was elaborate and elicited much favorable comment.

Mr. and Mrs. Copas, of Elyria, were recent visitors.

D. R. White, of Sandusky, was in Cleveland last week, buying Christmas supplies. F. A. F.

We have now ready for December delivery 150,000 well-rooted Cuttings. ¶An early start is the prime requisite for fine flowers next October. Get your Cuttings early. Get good stock and the battle is half won.

We guarantee good, healthy, strong, well-rooted Cuttings. ORDER NOW

STANDARD VARIETIES

Scarlets

Bonfire (Novelty 1911)—Velvety scarlet, valuable for its fine color from the very beginning of the season, when Beacon and Victory are inclined to be dull and muddy. A good clean grower, easily propagated. Well liked by commission men. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

Scarlet Glow Dorner's novelty of 1910; brilliant scarlet, clean and wiry. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Beacon Still "the" standard red; probably the freest carnation in existence. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Victory Deep scarlet. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Whites

White Wonder A greatly improved White Perfection, which begins blooming in September and continues throughout the season; snow-white, fragrant, absolutely perfect in form, large in size, on stiff stems, healthy and free and an easy rooter; grand in every way; makes nice big field plants. The only variety that threatens to pass White Enchantress in the race. We have one of the largest stocks in the country in perfect condition. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

White Enchantress Ours is the Pure White Western strain. We have an enormous quantity planted for Cuttings which are a joy to behold; come and see it growing. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

White Perfection $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Pink Varieties

Princess Charming (1911)—An extra fine traveler and keeper; runs a shade deeper than Enchantress in Winter, with a longer, stiffer stem, and produces equally well, and positively will not split; expected to displace Enchantress. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

Gloriosa (1911)—A grand shade of pure pink; a trifle darker than Pink Delight, without the salmon shade. Lovely in color, early, free and continuous; size, large with full center; form, very perfect. Dorners consider this one of the very best of their introductions for commercial purposes. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

Dorothy Gordon An improved Rose-pink Enchantress; constant rose-pink shade; grand in growth; very free in production of bloom. A very profitable variety. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Mrs. C. W. Ward A perfectly formed flower with full center; color, deep pink, several shades lighter than Lawson, deeper than Winsor, having strong, erect stems 24 to 36 inches in length. A vigorous, healthy grower and has never shown disease of any kind. A very early and free bloomer, producing fine flowers as early as September 1. The leader in its shade of pink. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1,000.

Pink Delight This variety is in a class quite by itself; the color is brilliant salmon pink; the form could not be more perfect; very free, grand keeper; its one peculiarity of being a "fussy" variety in the cutting bench will always make it high-priced, but the cut blooms more than offset this expense. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1,000.

Bright Spot (1911)—Pure bright dark pink of even shade; size, 3½ inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers than old Lawson at its best; flowers well-shaped on long wiry stems; calyx does not split; a good shipper and easy rooter. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

May Day Satin-Pink; has a fine stem, strong calyx, and is probably the freest of any pink variety. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Enchantress $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Rose-pink Enchantress Carefully selected strain. $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000.

Wodenethe (C. H. Totty)

Without doubt the largest pure white carnation ever introduced. Habit is good, throwing long, stiff stems crowned with enormous flowers of good texture and beautifully symmetrical. It scored 90 points before the American Carnation Society. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

Rosette (Dorner)

Darker than Rose-Pink. Brighter than Lawson. Growth of the very best. Size, very large. Highly recommended by these renowned raisers. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

Benora (Peter Fisher)

Clear white, penciled with bright red. Narrow foliage; long stems. Flowers large, freely produced. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

St. Nicholas (Baur & Steinkamp)

Blooms from September to July. Size, 3½ inches. Color, Victory red. Stems always long, always stiff. Free and constant. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

The New Carnation, BROOKLYN

A Reincarnation of the Old William Scott, but embodying additional and more important qualities

THE NEW "HELEN" PINK A beautiful Deep Pink after the style of the old William Scott, lighter than Lawson, grand under artificial light. Highly built-up center, petals fringed, habit of growth all that could be desired. Very easy propagator, fastest growth of any Carnation. Flowers 3-in. and larger. Preliminary scoring, New York Florists' Club, 86 points. "Certificate of Merit" Horticultural Society of New York. TO BE DISSEMINATED 1911-1912.

ROOTED CUTTINGS, ready now, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. 250 at 1000 rate.

DETROIT.

Various Notes.

The rose and carnation show to be held here next January is already receiving much publicity in the Detroit papers. In Sunday's Free Press there appeared advertisements from nearly every florist in the city, covering a page and one-half, with a large heading across the top and a column write-up announcing the show.

Breitmeyer's windows are ringing in the holidays with myriads of bells suspended from above.

An immense snow-white bell with appropriate surroundings is proclaiming Santa Claus in E. A. Fetters' window.

Mums are all gone, with one exception. The beautiful white pompon, Helen Newberry, now about to be disseminated by Fred Breitmeyer and Fred Pautke, is still available on the local market.

The opening of a large bowling alley in Detroit last week resulted in B. Schroeter having a big decoration this week.

Wm. Dilger has on hand 1,500 Christmas trees, of exceptionally fine quality, which will help gladden the hearts of many Detroit children.

Seasonable weather is always best for business, and no one knows it better than Albert Pochelon, of the Bemb Floral Co. Nevertheless Mr. Pochelon is rejoicing at the "just-like-summer" weather we are having, as it enables the contractor working on his building to make good progress. In another week the roof will be on the place.

The enlarging of the basement and rebuilding of the rear of J. F. Sullivan's store is now completed. What was formerly a dark, crowded room is now a splendidly arranged, well lighted work and shipping room. Mr. Sullivan is well pleased with business so far this season.

Ferdinand Kolbe is busy getting a stock of mum plants for next season. Mr. Kolbe is wise in looking into the retailers' requirements and growing accordingly. H. S.

Mitchell, S. D.—The Newburys, proprietors of the Mitchell Greenhouses & Nurseries, have secured the local agency for the Day Utility Car, made in Detroit by the Day Automobile Co. The machine is so constructed that it can be quickly transformed from a touring car into an attractive and roomy light delivery car.

MILLER'S GIANT OBCONICAS are the best selling plants on the market when in bloom. The engraving shows a few of our seed plants last January. Flowers average larger than silver dollars, with long stems, on a well-grown plant They are a sure money-maker for you. Extra strong, 3-in. stock, $5.00 per 100.

Cyclamen Giganteum, in bud, 4 in., $10.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Cinerarias, the largest flowering grown, strong 3-in., $3.50 per 100.

Asparagus Plumosus, large 3-in., $4.00 per 100; 2-in., $2.50 per 100. Asparagus Sprengeri, 2-in., $2.00 per 100.

Chinese Primrose, extra fine large flowering, 3-in., $4.00 per 100. Kewensis Primrose, sweet-scented, for cut flowers and pot plants, 3-in., $4.00 per 100.

Dracaena Indivisa, extra strong, field-grown, 18 to 24 in. high, 3-in., $3.00 per 100; 4-in., $4.00 per 100. Packed light.

These are all well-grown plants and will please you. Cash, please.

ROSES IN CALIFORNIA.

a distance and then the loss is much heavier.

In topping the stock the rose grower has another good chance to distinguish himself. Whether to do it early or wait until later is often an enigma, and if one were always sure of the weather much extra work could be avoided and there would be less danger from wind and rain. Heavily irrigated roses show little inclination to become dormant, and when dug in the fall and covered with young foliage are in anything but satisfactory condition for transplanting. On the other hand, when there has been no irrigation and the stock has been allowed to dry off naturally there is no difficulty in digging, no danger of heating during transit, no dying back when replanted and no kick from the purchaser.

Another point should be mentioned here. Non-irrigated roses can be dug with perfect safety as early as October, and from that time on there is no difficulty in handling them until April 1. This gives the grower a splendid chance to dispose of his stock at such times as best please his customers in the many parts of the country. Digging, when possible, should always be done with a tree-digger, as the buyers have become quite as particular in the matter of roots as they always have been with tops.

One might ramble on indefinitely about the varieties of roses, both new and old, and the peculiar conditions favorable to certain kinds and classes, but it is not the intention to go into details along these phases. In conclusion I will remind you that the demand for properly grown field roses was never greater than it is at the present moment in California, and although quite a few growers have "gone broke," to use a common expression, in our state, it was because invariably they had overlooked or did not consider the importance of one or more of the points that I have endeavored to impress on you.

MONTREAL, CAN.

At the annual meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, in the Royal Guardians' building, the report for the past year showed the club to be in a good financial position.

Officers elected are: President, Wm. C. Hall; first vice-president, E. J. Hayward; second vice-president, W. S. Watts; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Horobin; assistant secretary, H. J. Shoning; committee, J. Walsh, W. G. Pascoe, J. Pidduck, C. Byford, G. Miles, J. Luck; corresponding secretary, E. J. Hayward.

The annual dinner will be held in January. Arrangements are under way for a chrysanthemum show next November on entirely new lines, and a magnificent display is anticipated.

Progress is also being made for the convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association here next August. The president, A. C. Wilshire, and secretary, J. Luck, are both active members of the local club.

A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring president, W. R. Whiting.

Flushing, N. Y.—Michael F. Loughman is the new proprietor of the greenhouses formerly owned by A. L. Thorne, at the corner of Colden and Hillside avenues.

Canandaigua, N. Y.—Edward Sick proposes to establish a nursery with the land recently acquired, believing it the better policy, as, owing to excellent shipping facilities, he finds he can buy cut stock in season as cheaply as to grow it.

The Market.

Trade was fair last week. The market is shortening, but there is enough stock to go around. Carnations are not at all plentiful. Beauties are showing the effects of the cloudy weather. Chrysanthemums are of the past. Violets are selling unusually well this season. Some first-class Killarney, Richmond, Bride and Maid are to be had. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful. Cypripediums are plentiful, but move slowly. Cattleyas are becoming more plentiful, some fine Trianæ being seen.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held at the wholesale rooms of the Smith & Young Co., 134 North Alabama street, December 5. President Gause was in the chair, with about twenty-five members present. Four new members, Houston Tall, Thomas Hart, Earl Harger and Oliver Steinkamp, were elected. The association now has about 100 members. B. F. Hensley, W. W. Coles and J. S. Stuart were selected to investigate a bill prepared by the state entomologist regarding the inspection of plants. Albert Pittet, Albert Marshall and Charles Pahud were appointed to audit the secretary's and treasurer's books. Homer Wiegand, Herman Junge and Will Roepke were named to look after the entertainment for the annual meeting, which is to be held January 17. Baur & Steinkamp showed a vase of their new red carnation, St. Nicholas, which received favorable comment. Among the out-of-town florists present were W. W. Coles, of Kokomo; J. S. Stuart, of Anderson; B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown; George Gause, of Richmond, and W. H. Cossairt, of Shelbyville. After the meeting a Dutch lunch was served by Smith & Young Co.

Various Notes.

Geo. and Homer Wiegand have purchased a new 1912 Marmon automobile.

Ed. Bertermann is back at work after a short illness.

Adolph Baur spent a few days in Chicago last week. While there he exhibited his new red carnation, St. Nicholas, before the Chicago Florists' Club, where it scored eighty-seven points.

A. Wiegand & Sons are equipping another of their houses with cement benches. This firm intends to tear down three of the houses next summer and rebuild with two new ones.

The Roepke & Rieman Co. has an unusually fine lot of cyclamens for Christmas this year. H. L. W.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

This is one of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2,000 to 3,000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were crackerjacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 3-in., 12c to 15c. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine Betty Anderson, a new, fine begonia. Have only large plants in 7-in. pots at $1.50 per plant.

Begonia Erfordii, our newest improved strain, pink and bright red flowers. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, 20c; 5¼-in., 25c to 30c.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, 4-in. pots, 35c and 40c; 5½ to 6 and 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

Just Arrived with the azaleas a fine consignment of Latania Borbonica, in first-class condition. Perfect foliage, 8 good leaves—height given in consular invoice, 35 to 40 inches, fit for 7 and 8-in. pots, $1.50 to $2.00. Combination Latania Borbonica (3 plants), 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 in. high, forming a bush of about 14 leaves, which give them an attractive appearance, $1.00 to $1.25.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50; 4-in., 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, which came on the same steamer as azaleas, are potted off combination plants (made up with 3 plants), 22 to 25 inches high, having 12, 13 to 15 leaves to a pot (in 6-in. pots), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00, according to height; still larger sizes, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; single plants, 5 leaves, 22 to 25 in. high, stocky 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, only 50c, worth 75c.

Cocos Weddelliana, made up of 3 plants, 4 to 5-in. pots, 30c, 40c to 50c; 3-in., single, 15c; 4-in., single, 25c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, suitable for fern dishes, 16, 18, 20 to 25 in. high, 20c to 25c; 5¼-in. pots, 24-in., 35c.

Sago palms, 5-in. pots, small leaves, 2, 3, 4, 5 leaves to a plant, 20c, 25c, 30c and 35c per plant.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c; 7-in., 50c. Only pot-grown, will force successfully for Easter.

Solanum or Jerusalem Cherries, our well-known prize strain, the multiflorum, 6-in., 35c, 40c to 50c. Never were so fine as this year, just right for Xmas; big plants, full of ripe red berries and with green berries ripening on.

Primula Obconica, 5½-in., in bloom, 25c.

Primula Chinensis, John Rupp's best strain, 4-in., 10c; 5-in., 20c.

Shasta Daisies, pure white, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; seedlings, $1.00 100.

POINSETTIAS.

THE TOWN'S TALK.

Did you see those large 12-in. pans, made up of 3 large, 20 to 25-in. high poinsettias, trimmed with large Whitmani, Scottii and Giatrasii ferns, areca palms, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, cocos palms, etc., in Mr. McGinty's show window? "They came from Godfrey Aschmann's greenhouses; we paid only $2.50 each for them and sell them at a ten dollar bill." "Oh, I bought one not quite as big as yours, for which I paid Aschmann only $2.00," explained Mr. Miller; "I let it go for eight dollars. I thought that was a fair profit."

Poinsettias in prime condition for Xmas, in bloom; 3-in., short, stocky, suitable for filling pans, 15c; 4-in., also suitable for filling pans, 25c; 5½ to 6-in. pots, all pot grown, single or branched plants, medium height, 35c, 40c and 50c per plant; 8-in. pans, 3 plants in center and border of Asparagus plumosus around, only 75c per pan—suitable for basket work or to cut.

ARAUCARIA EXCELSA

With Xmas approaching there is always a big demand for Araucaria Excelsa. What looks nicer at Xmas time than an Araucaria properly dressed up with a nice pink, red or lavender ribbon, tied around the plant about half way up? It is a good keeper and keeps its beautiful evergreen foliage (tiers) green and perfect for years; when all other plants are withered, the Araucaria is in full glory, admired by all in the family. We are well prepared for the Araucaria orders and are the leaders, as we have always been for the last 25 years. 6000 can be seen in our greenhouses, all sizes and prices. 5½-in., 3-year-old, 15 to 20 in. high, 3 to 4 tiers, only 50c; 6-in., 4-year-old, 20, 22, 25 to 30 in. and over in height, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; specimen plants, 7-in., 30, 35 to 40 in. high, 5 to 6-year-old, 6, 7 to 8 tiers, green from bottom up, at a bargain

Araucarias Our Specialty

CYCLAMEN.

Giant cyclamen, our own grown strain, selected from the very best and well built plants and flowers. Seed, $1.00 per 100, $6.00 per 1000; nearly all sold out. August seedlings, $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000. Plants, well set with buds, 4-in., $18.00 and $25.00 per 100. Orders amounting to $25.00, 10% off. Here is one of the many letters we received from satisfied customers: E. A. Butler & Son, Niagara Falls, N. Y., say, "The plants are excellent, the finest we have ever had and, if the seed this year is of the same quality, we will be perfectly satisfied." Our aim has been to, and we have, improved our strain every season. Cultural directions with every order. See my calla and A. plumosus advs.

PANSIES—Continued.

Pansy Park Perfection is the best strain of giant show and fancy pansies, largest in size and of the greatest variety of rich and rare colors, the reds and bronzes in large proportion. The growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years. Samples of many reports: "Pansy plants arrived in best possible condition. They have the finest roots I have ever seen. I am well pleased." Fred Reichert, San Antonio, Texas. If you want more proof read the many testimonials in my Review advs. during the past 2 months. Over 75 varieties mixed. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5,000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Special attention to southern orders and delivery in good condition guaranteed. Cash with order.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

HOME OF PANSIES.
Our strain of pansies is unsurpased. We have scores of testimonials. Here is what a few of my customers say—Audubon Park Association, New Orleans, La., writes: "Pansies received in good order. Thanks." J. M. Breckenridge, Savannah, Ga., sends us an order and says: "I bought plants from you last year and found them very satisfactory." The Pansy Floral Co., De Land, Fla., sends us an order and says: "Plants we got from you last year were fine." Industrial School and Gardens, Mobile, Ala., says: "The pansies you sent were in good shape when received and are doing nicely." They sent us another order. We have a large stock of Our Own Specials, Masterpiece, Perret, Trimardeau, black, yellow, blood red, etc., all kinds mixed, $2.50 per 1000. 5000 for $10.00.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, OLEAN, N. Y.

Think of the strain of pansies containing light, dark, lavender, violet, blue, bronze, royal purple, red, cerise, salmon, mahogany, yellow and red and gold shades, a dozen or more varieties in each shade, of immense size with great form and substance. They are MASTODON PANSIES. It has cost us hundreds of dollars and eighteen years' time to upbuild this strain and it is worth all it cost. We guarantee perfect order delivery everywhere and we guarantee satisfaction. Plants, 50c 100; $3.00 1000; $12.50 5000, prepaid.
Steele's Mastodon Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore.

THE EUREKA CARNATION SUPPORT

Of course you are going to use this another season. No thoughtful person would do otherwise. There is nothing that you can use that will compare with it. You just cannot get that clear, distinct space between rows, that uprightness of growth, that straight border line and general neatness by any other method. And all so cheap, just think of it, 1/10 of a cent per plant; lasts 15 years; any height, width or length; comparatively cheap; and you yourself can make it so easily.

By what other method can you do a whole row of plants (any length) in about a minute, and extract in a few seconds? Absolutely none. It begins to save you money from start to finish. is ready when you are. A weary month's job turned into a week. Can any right thinking man still keep in the old rut? Have you any theoretical objections or criticisms? If so, write me. Doesn't it look to be the simplest commonplace thing for its purpose? Do you know where to buy the material cheap? If not, write me. Material in any quantity, well adapted for the purpose, can be had within a half-mile of here for 30c per rod. Don't ring supports cost too much, aren't they too inconvenient, and don't plants grow all outside instead of in? In string and wire or similar methods, don't you find it a long, dreary, never-done job? Don't the plants, sooner or later, spread all over the bed, and the strings become loose and saggy, plants crooked, smothered at the bottom, a regular mixed-up mess to work among and to tease out when the weather is so hot? Do you want to keep this up when there is such a good thing at your command? Do you think you have any good reasons for thinking what I claim is not the truth? If so, write for proof. I have all the necessary proof at my command and am willing to part with it. Send $5.00 for permit and instructions. Infringement for using without permission may cost more.

Gentlemen: In regard to the burner recently purchased of you—Rodgers' Patent—I know of no better language to express my appreciation than the word "satisfied." To say that it is perfection is not too high. I am using crude oil, 34 gravity. I have over 5000 feet of glass, and from my test I believe that the coldest weather will not require over 30 gal. to 24 hours. Sincerely yours,

Greenhouse Heating.

Snow blockades are to be expected at any time after the turn of the year and it merely is courting trouble to let the coal supply run low at this season.

OPERATION OF GATE VALVES.

I am heating a house with hot water. A 3-inch main leaves the boiler and is divided into two 2-inch flows, which run to the farther end of the house, where they drop and feed fourteen 1½-inch returns, sixty-five feet long. There are gate valves near the boiler, on the 3-inch main and return. These gate valves, when turned down seven turns of the ten which it takes to close them, affect the temperature of the house only a fraction of a degree, if at all. How can this be explained? Would you recommend larger flows than I am using?

A. B. R.

The statement regarding the conditions is not sufficiently clear to warrant a definite answer. Much depends on the location of the pipes; if the returns are placed several feet above the top of the boiler, a very small opening would give a good circulation. This would be especially true if overhead flows are used. While a 3-inch main is amply large for the radiation in the houses, it is not advisable to attempt to supply more than 200 square feet of radiation with a 2-inch pipe, and there would be something more than 525 feet to be supplied by the two 2-inch flow pipes in the house in question. If the returns are placed well above the boiler, however, they ought to do the work fairly well.

The size of the opening through a valve need not be as large as would be desirable in the pipe itself, on account of the friction in the latter throughout its entire length, and if a 3-inch gate valve is one-third open the effect on the flow in a system such as described would not be very marked. If the system is not giving satisfaction, putting in another 2-inch flow pipe and raising the return pipes would certainly be helpful, especially if the flow pipes are overhead and run downhill.

CONNECTING EXPANSION TANK.

On page 94 of The Review of November 9, in your reply to H. E. H.'s inquiry about cold return pipes, I notice that you advocate joining the expansion tank to the flow pipe. Is this the common practice now? I have heard that the tank should connect with the return always, as the cold water from the tank, coming in contact with the hot water, might cause trouble. The few places that I have seen, whether open or closed systems, had the connections with the return. What advantage is there in connecting with the flow? Would only open tanks be used in this way? K. G.

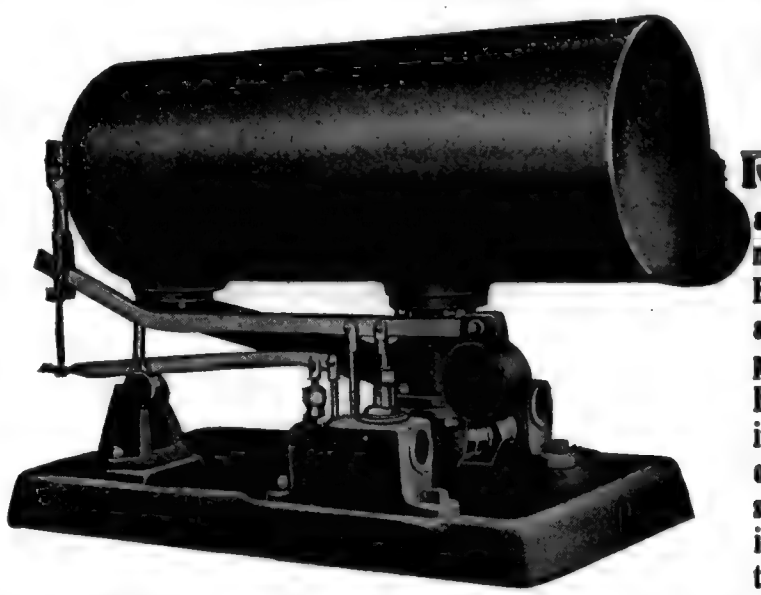
The plan of connecting the expansion tank with the flows, rather than with a return pipe, has no disadvantage and there are several points in its favor. Arranged in this way, it does away with the use of air valves and the bother of looking after them. It also permits the air and steam to pass out readily and there is less danger of the water being thrown out through the expansion tank than when the latter is connected to a return, in case the water gets to boiling. The connection can be made to the flows with both open and closed tanks. If properly connected, the water in the tank would circulate sufficiently to keep it slightly warm at least, but even if cold water mingled with warm water the only effect would be to equalize the temperature.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Brampton greenhouses have been taxed to their utmost during the last few weeks to produce anything like the quantity of stock which the ever increasing florists' business calls for. In fact, there never was such a demand for flowers as there is at present, and the best quality of stock finds a ready market everywhere.

Various Notes.



Walter Calvert has two new houses devoted to violets, which in this section are hardly as prolific this year as last, notwithstanding the fine weather conditions.

Mark Henderson found chrysanthemums again a profitable venture, and for the rest of the winter he will devote his space to successive crops of lettuce, for the local market.

Both R. Jennings and William Fendley are cultivating carnations and violets extensively, and find it difficult to grow a sufficiency of the latter for their customers, even at $1.50 per hundred, wholesale.

Social events of late have created a demand, especially for orchids and American Beauties, such as has never before been known at the Dale Estate, and, fortunately, their stock of both flowers this year has turned out most satisfactorily. Chrysanthemums came to a full stop last week, and their benches are already half full of carnation cuttings in the sand. The Beacon are devoid of all unnecessary mechanism.

Every part designed, manufactured and assembled with the idea of permanence foremost.

Every tilt of the trap shows that it's working—draining every drop of condensation from the heating system and automatically returning it to the boiler—no pumps—no trouble.

Condensation is the purest kind of boiler feed water. Don't waste it. Return it directly to the boiler by "Detroit" Return Traps and prevent scale formation.

The Florists' Choice is the "Morehead System" of Steam Drainage and Boiler Feeding

THE accompanying illustration shows the Morehead Steam Trap installation at the Greenhouses of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., located at Bakerstown, Pa.

The installation consists of 2 No. 5 Morehead Return Steam Traps, one working on a battery of Tubular Boilers, which are developing, in cold weather, 600 H. P.

The Morehead Traps are feeding these boilers entirely, without the use of pump or injector.

The plant is furnishing steam to 12 houses, having 300,000 square feet of glass area and containing 184,000 feet of steam pipe to keep dry.

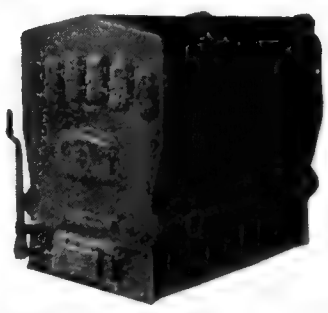
YONKERS, N. Y.

On Friday, December 1, a well attended meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held and many interesting matters were discussed.

The committee on the spring show reported progress, and the executive committee reported on the financial result of the last fall show. It was voted to pay a deficit of $83.80 from the society's funds.



Four active members, A. W. Millard, W. A. Murray, F. Smith and W. Muir, were elected; also one associate member, W. Butts Two nominations for membership were received.

A prize was up for twelve carnations, any variety, and R. Cochrane was awarded first, with splendid blooms of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Dorothy Gordon. Messrs. Macdonald and Kinney received cultural certificates.

The Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., exhibited a new begonia, La Patrie, and a certificate of merit was awarded, its handsome, glossy foliage being much admired. H. M. B.

Long Branch, N. J.—K. M. Van Gelderen, proprietor of the Evergreen Nurseries, started business here two years ago with one greenhouse and the returns were so satisfactory that he decided to build another house this season. The new house was completed in time for the Thanksgiving trade.

Avoid a Freeze-up

Style I

The sudden cold wave that swept the country November 12 brought heavy loss to many florists who had no warning. This Standard Thermostat, if placed in your houses, will save your stock from a similar freeze-up if you should be caught unawares. It is also an excellent fire alarm. The indicating hand shows the actual temperature at all times. When it reaches either of the other hands, which can be set for any variation you desire, it anywhere you please to locate the bell. You are thus protected against both excess cold and excess heat, and when the temperature in your houses becomes dangerous you are immediately notified.

Anybody can put it up—only a screwdriver needed—and full directions with each instrument.

Style I, diameter 6 inches, price, $5.00 each.

This is the cheapest of all crop insurance. You can't afford to be without it this winter.

COST OF WATER.

Could some of The Review readers who use city water tell me what it costs them for water by the year for each 10,000 feet of glass? I have about 10,000 feet of glass, 3,000 of which I added this season. For the last six months, when my place was 7,000 feet, they charged me $16.85 for water, which I feel is too much. Some of the city council are inclined to give me a special rate if other florists get their water for less. L. G. B.

Answering the inquiry regarding cost of city water, we pay on a yearly average $1.10 per month per 10,000 feet of glass. Hope you will hear from others on this subject. J. W. Dudley Sons.

I read the inquiry in the issue of November 30, under the head "Cost of Water." I have two houses, each 24½x125, in Salamanca, N. Y., and use city water, for which I pay $12 per year. This includes water for the boiler. On this rate there is a discount of about eight per cent, making the net cost about $11. My place comprises a little over 8,200 square feet of glass. I hope this will be of some use to the inquirer in arriving at a satisfactory rate. W. L. Farquharson.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

The Market.

A falling off in trade has been noticed since the Thanksgiving rush. However, advance Christmas orders are coming in and the lull merely gives opportunity for getting the stores decorated and in order for the holiday trade. Exceptionally fine, mild weather, with a great deal of sun, has made the prices of flowers drop considerably this week. It affected nearly everything but Beauties, which still are up.

Chrysanthemums are poor, what there are of them, and apparently there will be none for Christmas as in former years. Timothy Eaton is the best mum on the market now. In carnations, Pink Delight is the best variety, with fine blooms and long, firm stems. Beacon comes next, and red is in great demand at this time of the year. Enchantress, Perfection, and Winsor are all fairly good. A few Lawsons are seen. Roses are all good. Radiance is coming in with new vigor and splendid color. Richmonds are becoming more plentiful. Hillingdon is quite popular but the supply is light. Killarney is pale. Last week a scarcity in roses was felt and naturally the price went up, but the latter part of the week the fair weather brought in a more abundant supply. Since the price of violets has been raised sales have fallen off almost one half. Valley is good, but there is little demand. Gardenias are good. Orchids have advanced in price and Cattleyas now bring $1.25 apiece. Cypripediums are not selling at all. Stevia and Roman hyacinths are moving well.

Poinsettias, holly, laurel, ground pine and winter berries are here, reminding us that the holidays are near. Wreathing is selling well. Smilax, galax of both colors and ferns are plentiful. Asparagus plumosus sprays that are grown in Florida are flooding the market at a reasonable figure.

Flowering plants are as much in demand as ever and Boston ferns and palms are also selling well.

Various Notes.

William F. Kasting, of Buffalo, was in the city on business last week.

R. E. Hall, of Reed & Keller, New York, called on local florists recently.

Geo. J. Keller is producing some stevia of exceptional quality.

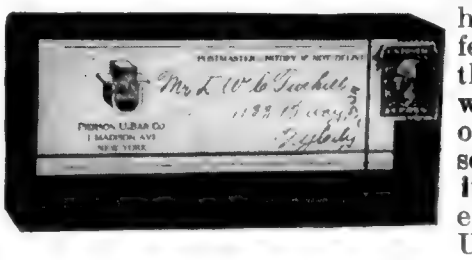
The Importance of This Reason Book.

BEFORE talking about the Reason Booklet itself, let us first ask you a question or two:

When you buy anything of importance, involving the expenditure of several hundreds or thousands of dollars, do you rely entirely on your own individual information and go right out and buy it? Of course you don't.

In making your final decision, are you not strongly influenced by the opinion of some one who has already bought—and is satisfied? Doesn't the fact that this or that person, company or institution of prominence has put their stamp of approval on it, by putting their money into it, carry a good deal of weight with you?

This being so, then naturally enough you will buy a greenhouse much the same way.



Suppose, for instance, you want to know thoroughly about the U-Bar Greenhouse, and have been wondering if there are any houses in your vicinity you could see; wouldn't a booklet giving you the names of all U-Bar owners and the character and extent of the greenhouses they own, be of interest and assistance to you?

Let us suppose, still further, that you want to confirm your decision to buy a U-Bar house by seeing who some of the others are who arrived at the same decision and built; wouldn't a booklet grouping such names in a readily get-at-able way be just the thing you want?

That's why we made just such a booklet.

It's called "Reasons."

The Reasons themselves are told in 93 words, right at the start—the rest is given over to a unique and interesting arrangement of the locations and owners of U-Bar houses built in the last few years. Send for this Booklet. With it we will mail you our catalogue and a section of the U-Bar itself—so you can see exactly what the U-Bar is.

ROCHESTER NOTES.

M. Adler, the novelty pin man, of New York, was in town last week.

J. M. Keller spent December 5 in Buffalo.

It has been reported that the Buffalo and Rochester florists' bowling teams were to have a match game in the near future.

December 11 was the date of the big smoker of the Rochester Florists' Association. Colin B. Ogston's lecture on chrysanthemums was a good one and all had a most enjoyable evening. Refreshments were served.

Frank Victor, formerly with Geo. Keller, is now located at the Osburne House, in another line.

Geo. Bennett's carnation crop is much improved.

D. R. Herron, of Olean, is cutting a fine crop of carnations and reports that business is booming.

The Rochester Floral Co. already is displaying Christmas novelties.

Colin B. Ogston, foreman for Mrs. W. S. Kimball, did an artistic job at Convention hall December 7 and 8.

The ladies of the Rochester Florists' Association have begun bowling practice at the Elm alleys.

Wm. Ronolder is erecting a new greenhouse in Olean, N. Y.

One of the Trautman brothers and Stanley E. Smith, of Geneva, visited Rochester December 9. E. C. A.

GOT TOO MANY ORDERS.

It is a frequent occurrence for advertisers in The Review to report that they received more orders than they could fill, like this:

Stock all sold and had to send back a lot of checks.—Van Aken Bros., Coldwater, Mich., December 7, 1911.

That's fine, but advertisers are urged to discontinue promptly as stock runs low. Cut out all items that are sold out. No dead offers in The Review.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A SEATTLE STORE OPENING.

It is quite the customary thing for the retail flower stores to splurge a bit just at the time that the fall trade is opening and the accompanying illustrations show what was done in this line by the Hollywood Gardens, of Seattle. T. B. Pritchard, who is manager of the store, called his opening a free flower show and advertised it widely, with the result that as high as 2,000 people visited it in one day, the last week in November. The pictures on page 15 show the lavish character of the decorations and the quality of the stock and, to those not familiar with the strides that have been made by the trade interests on the coast, will prove something of a revelation.

A MAN'S PRIDE.

It has been quite the regular thing for a man to maintain that his horse, his dog and his child were the most wonderful in the land. Some have even gone so far as to include their wives, and those who have acquired motor cars have added them to the list of the things in which they take unbounded and justifiable pride, so it is quite within the limits of modesty and good taste for George Waldbart to claim that the new automobile he will use for his Christmas deliveries this year is the finest in St. Louis. The machine is shown in the illustration on page 13, and evidently is up to date in every particular.

PROGRESSIVE PITTSBURGHERS.

Gustav & J. W. Ludwig started in the flower business in Allegheny Market, in the north side of Pittsburgh, formerly known as Allegheny, Pa. Beginning with one stand, they enlarged their space from time to time as the business grew, until they occupied five times the original space in the market. Now they use the entire four floors in the building shown in the illustration on page 12, at 502 Federal street, in the best shopping district of Pittsburgh. The new store, just completed, is provided with every modern convenience for the retailing of flowers and the increased facilities already show an effect in an increased volume of business. When the store was opened the key was thrown away—this flower emporium never closes, open day and night.

DESIGNS FROM NEBRASKA.

The illustration on this page is reproduced from a photograph made in the residence of a leading citizen of Fairbury, Neb., and shows the work made by the Fairbury Greenhouses for a recent funeral. F. R. Hoffman is the designer.

Holyoke, Mass.—Gallivan Bros. are erecting two more greenhouses, each 35x200 feet.

LOOKS GOOD TO US.

How much should a man take in from a given amount of glass? It is a question that comes in time after time, as though anybody knew. The income from a business of any kind, and particularly from a greenhouse, all depends on the man. Location counts, of course, but one man might make a fair living under conditions where another would starve to death. Tell us how big a hustler you are, rather than how much glass you have, if you want to know how big a success you can make in the business. All of which is brought to mind by the receipt of the following letter from a florist in a small town in New York:

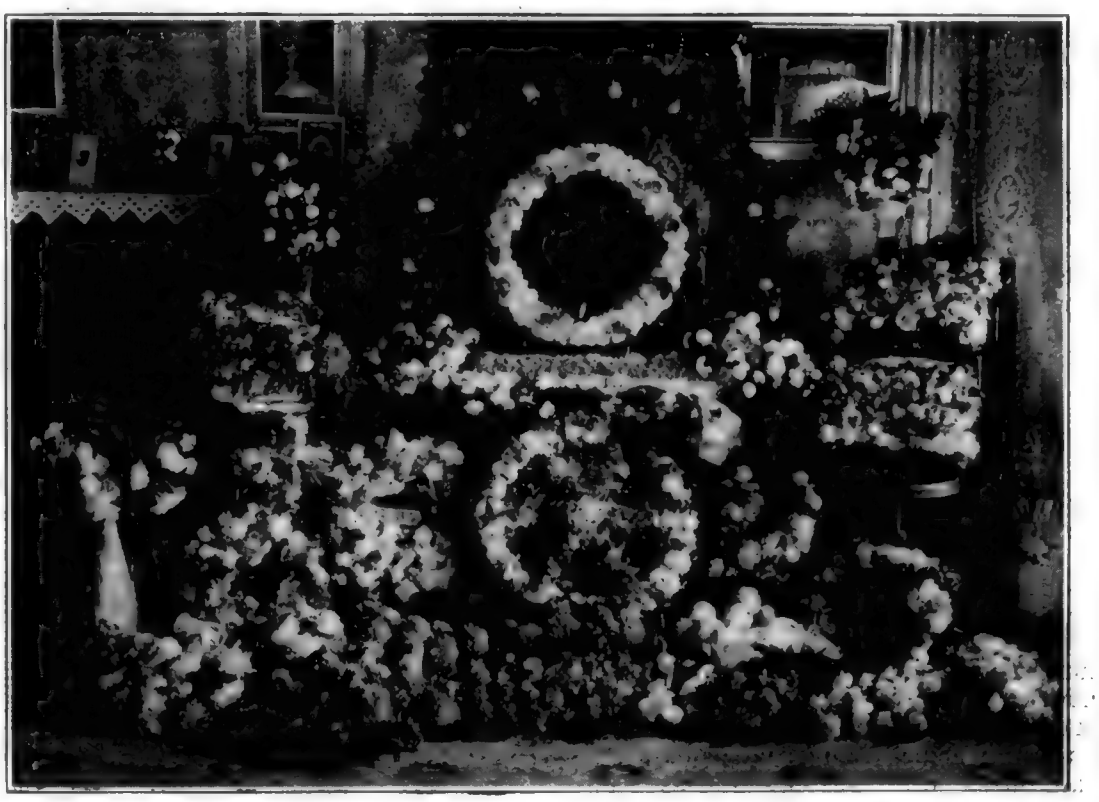
"How is this," he says, "for a small greenhouse, 15x60?

"Sales first year	$450.50
"Sales second year	395.11
"Sales third year	475.03
"Sales fourth year	569.55

"The sales for the fourth year are really for only eleven months, for December is yet to be added to them, and the record for the second year is the same as for most other businesses in the town, as there was a bank failure that hit everybody. Is that a fair sale, or ought it to be more? Of course I have just started in and don't try to get as good prices as the city greenhouses do."

ASTERS TO FOLLOW TOMATOES.

We wish to follow our tomato crop with asters. The tomatoes will be out about the middle of June. Can we then plant the beds to asters and cut them in time to plant tomatoes again about the middle of August? At what time should the seed be sown, and what are the best commercial varieties in white and pink to grow under glass? H. F.



Two months is hardly sufficient time to allow the asters between your tomato crops. If you could arrange to plant them about a month earlier, they would do much better. It would be inadvisable to plant asters in small, narrow houses, but if your house is wide, with ample ventilation provided, you could get good asters in it. Do not give them the exhausted tomato soil to grow in. If you use the same soil, be sure to give it a liberal dressing of rotted cow or horse manure. I would advise planting one month earlier than suggested; or, if this is not possible, run them until the middle of September. You cannot grow and clean off the crop within two months. Good indoor varieties to grow are Vick's or American Branching in pink and white, and Semple's giant pink. You could also, if you wished, grow splendid flowers of the giant Ostrich Plume, pink and white. These usually bring fancy prices. C. W.

FORCING SPANISH IRIS.

Can Spanish iris, or the bulbous iris, be forced to bloom in the winter? If so, how? C. L. R.

The Spanish and other bulbous irises will stand a moderate amount of forcing. Presuming that they are well rooted in flats or pans and have made growths two or three inches in length, they can be moved from their present cool quarters to a greenhouse with a minimum temperature of 45 to 50 degrees; the latter figure should not be exceeded. Flowers of the Spanish iris can not really be had in the winter months, as few will be open before the middle of March. There are, however, one or two dwarf varieties, natives of Asia Minor, not much grown commercially, which can be flowered much earlier. March, April and May are the months when Spanish irises grown under glass are in season. C. W.

Dahlia and Gladiolus Growers Hold Meeting

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association held its first annual meeting Friday, December 15, at 66 Randolph street, Chicago, where facilities for exhibition and meeting were provided by the A. L. Randall Co. The program as published in The Review for December 7 was carried out with the exception of two papers from members unable to be present. Following the papers on "The Gladiolus," by A. E. Kunderd, and on "Hybridization and Culture," by H. W. Koerner, was a general discussion enjoyed by all. Carl Cropp gave some interesting points regarding late development of the corms of gladioli and the dahlia clumps, showing that both plants largely increased in size and solidity late in the fall, but that care must be used in not leaving too late, to be injured by severe frosts. He also suggested that there might be a profitable future for the Colvillei type of gladiolus, Blushing Bride and others. S. W. Pike, of St. Charles, Ill., gave it as his opinion that late development of the bulbs is decidedly advantageous. The paper on "American Bulbs," read by E. S. Thompson, completed the program.

It was decided to appoint a committee on nomenclature, so that the work could be started at once. M. Crawford, of Cuyahoga Falls, O., was appointed. The proposition to hold an exhibition of flowers in connection with the Society of American Florists at Chicago in August, 1912, was placed in the hands of the executive committee. The regular annual meeting of the association for the election of officers will be held at the annual bulb show some time in December of each year, each date to be fixed by the executive committee.

No immense things were expected, but those who have worked for the association feel well repaid with the reception by the trade as well as by the amateurs, and anyone interested missed a good thing if he did not look over the bulbs shown at this meeting. Dahlias, gladioli, cannas, irises, oxalis, tiger lilies, montbretias, etc., were shown, all grown in the central west. Mammoth bulbs of Kunderdi Glory, four inches in diameter, were shown. Koerner's hybrids were three and a half inches in diameter. Bulbs of Childsii, florists' mixture, King and America, three to three and a half inches in diameter, were shown by the Central Seed and Bulb Co. Vaughan's Seed Store gave a good exhibit of King, Augusta and the new Chicago White gladiolus. The exhibit was a success from all sides, for the initial one of the association. Over seventy entries were made. Dahlia clumps fourteen inches across were shown. One of the remarkable features of the exhibits was the thick, solid and healthy appearance of all the gladiolus bulbs. Only one diseased bulb was found in the collection, and the western growers can congratulate themselves on placing on the tables the largest sized and the finest appearing gladiolus and dahlia bulbs ever placed on exhibition in this country. The association is so well pleased with the work that next December will see more than 500 entries of dahlia clumps, representing all varieties of any value, and specially showing those of good value from the standpoint of the commercial and amateur trade. It is designed that other outdoor flowers grown from a bulbous root will be included in the scope of the work. One aim is information to both trade and amateur. The growers are in earnest and propose to be in the front for western bulbs and business. E. S. Thompson, Sec'y.

HYBRIDIZING AND CULTURE.

[A paper by H. W. Koerner, of Milwaukee, Wis., read at the meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, in Chicago, December 15, 1911.]

Though Secretary Thompson has called on me to read a paper on "Hybridizing and Culture," I wish to say that my remarks shall be brief, as the time for preparation was short and there were too many other things on my mind.

Hybridizing can be explained in fifteen words, but to go into details would make volumes, so I shall just give a few brief particulars as to the way I do things. When there is any variety that I wish to cross, I generally cut the anthers off the one from which I intend to save the seed, and then cross with the one from which I take the pollen.

Now, in judging and figuring so as to get the colors and types you want in gladioli, I consider all the points—the habit of stem, the number of flowers open, the closeness of the flowers to the stem; the flowers must be well open, and the main thing is color.

Best Gladioli Multiply Slowly.

I do not like the Lemoine type, although I think there is a time coming when they will go ahead of any other type, for they multiply faster, which gives them the lead. The reason I do not like them is, because they generally have crooked stems and only two or four flowers open at once. I can pick out any one that has Lemoine blood by those two points. One thing I have learned is that the best varieties generally multiply the most slowly, for I have been growing some of my best kinds for ten years and still have not stock enough to offer.

Pollenization of Dahlias.

In pollenizing dahlias, it is more difficult to do the work right. You must employ a strong magnifying glass to see the anthers which should be cut off, and to select the ripe pollen. I always select free-flowering and long-stemmed varieties to cross, and I never save shy bloomers or short-stemmed varieties, for there are too many of that kind already on the market.

The best time of the day for crossing is between 12 and 2 o'clock on a bright, sunny day.

I venture to declare that hybridizing is yet in its infancy and that there will be entirely new types and shapes, unlike any ever seen before, in both dahlias and gladioli, for I have some rare sorts in both flowers and I also have new types in peonies, one in particular, which is like a decorative dahlia.

As to culture, there is not much to say. Any soil that produces corn or potatoes will grow dahlias and glads, but plant deeply, at least four inches below the surface. The time of planting differs greatly; gladioli should be planted early and dahlias late.

GLADIOLUS AND ITS FUTURE.

[A paper by A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., read at the meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, in Chicago, December 15, 1911.]

So much has been written and said about the gladiolus, as regards its culture both outdoors and under glass, for bulbs and cut flowers, that I will not attempt to suggest anything on that subject. I will only mention C. L. Allen and his bulbs and tuberous-rooted plants, and the excellent new book on the gladiolus by that veteran authority, Matthew Crawford, as two of the most reliable and convenient sources of information on the gladiolus and its culture, as well as other matters of information regarding this flower.

Great Future Possibilities.

Although I am a lifelong breeder of the gladiolus, it would take a much better tongue and pen than mine to do this subject justice. I have been so busy admiring the gladiolus, and working with it, that I have never thought much about its present or future. How well the gladiolus has taken care of its good reputation you are all aware, and I feel certain it will do even better in time to come. Of course, I am an enthusiast, as a breeder of this, one of the most magnificent of all the many beautiful flowers, and I have boundless confidence in its still greater advancement in the future, both commercially and artistically. Commercially its usefulness is only beginning to be recognized, and its future in the hands of the plant breeder holds almost boundless possibilities.

Improvement in Foliage.

Only within the last few days some friends of the gladiolus have reported new beauties in foliage variation and I believe much can be done to develop this feature alone. In addition to the reported foliage with white striping, great improvement may be expected with the normal color. For a number of years I have been selecting and breeding with this object in view, and find the gladiolus as susceptible along this line as in the improvement of its flowers. We should have tall, wide, rich green foliage; tall, slender and graceful foliage, of forms best suited to the usual straight-stemmed varieties, and some beautiful, slender and drooping foliage, best suited to blend with what are known as bent or crooked-stemmed varieties. That there is a future of usefulness for the last named form of stem, I feel confident, if the flower is specially attractive.

Colors of the Stem.

Another feature of promise is the colors of the stem. Some of the stems are almost white and others are fine cream or yellow. This, no doubt, will become a feature of usefulness in the gladiolus of the future.

Other features of form and type will suggest themselves to any experienced observer and I am confident the long wished for sweet-scented varieties will be perfected in the hands of Lemoine, Burbank or Van Fleet. Much has already been done; more will be accomplished by careful and patient workers in the development of the flower.

AMERICAN BULBS.

[A paper by E. S. Thompson, of Benton Harbor, Mich., read at the meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, in Chicago, December 15, 1911.]

Perhaps this subject may not appeal to many of you as being of special importance, but to me it is of wide significance. Always, as far as our history is concerned, we have looked to Europe for our bulbs. There were a few, of course, in the homes of the people, but as for growing them on a scale commensurate with the demand, it was hardly thought of till close to the date of the original world's fair at Chicago, 1893. Since that date, however, business has grown by leaps and bounds, till today we are largely supplying our own country and also exporting by the million. In tuberose bulbs we beat the world. From the south Atlantic coast and from Long Island, thanks to the enterprise of John Lewis Childs, millions of gladiolus bulbs are exported to Europe and other countries.

The greatest difficulty seems to be to grow what is known as the Dutch bulbs and lilies. However, we are finding that the Pacific northwest, in the vicinity of Puget Sound, is well adapted to the growing of this class of bulbs, as also is the Richmond district, on the Atlantic coast. The United States has climatic advantages excelled by none, and it needs only the careful push of Yankee ingenuity to develop other lines fully as much. Tiger lilies can be grown on the east Lake Michigan coast as cheaply and as well as in Holland. Of course we have to contend with the cheap labor of other countries, but we have an offset in the saving of freights and the decreased loss in carriage, which often leaves a good margin of profit of itself.

Results from United Effort.

One of the greatest difficulties we have to encounter is the slogan dear to the heart of many, "Importer," as though something imported was vastly superior to anything grown in the usual, everyday way, at home. One of the obstacles to progress in any line of work is the desire of some to be exclusively superior to their fellow mortals, and it applies to the bulb business as well as to a host of other lines. But "Results," from the standpoint of The Review, come to both by joint effort, and when men who specialize in any one line join together and work for mutual advancement, all are benefited.

Of late years our leading seedsmen have been sending all over the world for new and rare things. Childs has done this to a large extent, and we are greatly indebted to him for the marvelous advance in the gladiolus. Farquhar, of Boston, has been doing valuable work with lilies. With the aid of Burbank and Groff, as well as our own Kunderd and Koerner, progress is pushed on apace with the glorious gladiolus. What we need now is coöperation among growers and a disposition to play fair with results, and by this means gain for ourselves the advantages that should accrue to the hybridizer and grower.

The Bright Outlook in America.

Our country can produce almost anything in the bulb line the world produces and we are truly only on the brink of the great stream of success, not only with the gladiolus and dahlia, but with numerous others of the world's favorites in flowers produced from a bulbous or rhizome root. California and the Pacific coast, the fruit belt of Michigan, Long Island and the south Atlantic coast, are producing today vast quantities of bulbs that know no superior, and other parts of our country are coming to the front in an equally meritorious manner.

Brothers, let us go at this matter with a determination to get the best out of it and nothing will stop the progress. Our slogan should be "Grow our own stuff," and we can if we will. I believe our catalogue men would gladly patronize home growers, did we but produce as well and as reasonably. A Long Island grower, now in France, wrote a letter deploring the shortage of seeds in European markets this season and saying that "America must grow her own seeds." How about our own bulbs? They are of equal importance and deserve equal attention. The field is broad and valuable, and by no means occupied. Let us, during the coming year, try out more of the varieties sold by seedsmen in this country and come up here another season with a show of bulbs that will fairly take the trade off their feet, for value.

Exhibits of A. E. Kunderd and H. W. Koerner at Chicago Bulb Show.

Seasonable Suggestions

Gardenias.

To successfully flower gardenias in midwinter requires considerable skill. The idea that plenty of heat and moisture are the two essentials to success is entirely wrong. Proper soil, which passes the water readily through it, is one necessity. If the least pasty it is sure to become more or less sour and this will mean a heavy dropping of buds. Water must be carefully given during the short days, always allowing the benches to dry out well between waterings. A night temperature of 65 degrees to 68 degrees should be maintained and the plants should be sprayed well twice or three times a week to keep bugs and scale in check. Do not keep the house too stuffy and moist. Raise the ventilators a little at a time and close in the same way. Those having some bottom heat for the plants are least likely to have the yellows and drop the buds, as the roots of gardenias like to be warm. In pots the roots are under better control than when in benches and bud dropping is less likely to occur. Avoid heavy syringing. Always use a spray nozzle and see that the foliage dries out before night.

Show Pelargoniums.

This is the season of rapid growth with the show pelargoniums or Lady Washington geraniums, as they are still commonly called by many. Unless the Exhibit of Central Seed and Bulb Co. at Chicago Bulb Show.

Store of Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, During Autumn Opening.

plants are wanted in bloom early, it will be necessary to keep the stronger shoots pinched back for some weeks yet. Do not allow the plants to become potbound. In shifting them use a compost of fibrous loam, cow manure and sand, to which can be added a little fine bone or Clay's fertilizer. Pot firmly and keep the plants well up to the glass in a cool and airy house. The night temperature may be as low as 40 degrees, and is better not to exceed 45 degrees, if you want nice, stocky plants. A spraying over on bright mornings will be beneficial, and do not omit regular fumigations or the dreaded green aphis will soon raise havoc with them.

Hydrangeas.

The wood on hydrangeas which were pot-grown through the summer, or were lifted and potted in early fall, should now be of a nut-brown color, hard and well ripened. If an early batch of plants is desired, some can be placed in heat at once. A temperature of 50 degrees at night will suffice. Keep a little on the dry side at the root, but spray freely until the young shoots push out; then give more water at the roots. It is inadvisable to give heat in the early stages of growth, but with shoots well advanced the temperature can be raised 10 degrees, and when the flower heads peep they can be forced quite hard. It is better, however, to open them in a somewhat lower temperature. Do not overlook the everblooming hydrangea, H. arborescens grandiflora. This is splendid for pot culture, as well as one of our finest hardy flowering shrubs.

Calceolarias.

Those showy spring flowering greenhouse annuals, the calceolarias, succeed splendidly in a cool, damp house, one which sends a clammy feeling through anyone when entering it. They thrive in a low temperature, and 40 degrees at night is better for them than 50 degrees. The cooler they are grown, clear of actual freezing, the better they will be, and, at the same time, the freer from green aphis, which has a special fondness for them. In potting use a compost of fibrous loam, cow manure and sand, adding some soot and powdered charcoal to it. This latter keeps the foliage a beautiful dark color. Pinch the tops out of the plants to make them branch, unless you want an early lot of plants in small pots. The C. rugosa, or shrubby calceolarias, which are such favorites for bedding in Europe, are not sufficiently grown in pots. They are splendid either in pots or for cutting at Memorial day. Keep these potted on and well pinched for some time yet.

Seed Sowing.

Asparagus Sprengeri should now be sown in pans or flats of leaf-mold and sand. Many growers save their own seed. Where this has not been done, secure some at once. Asparagus plumosus nanus also will germinate well if sown now. Gloxinias, if started at once in pans of light soil, will make excellent flowering plants next summer. Water the pans, sow the fine seed carefully on the surface and do not water at all. Keep covered with glass and paper until the seedlings germinate. A few other seeds which can be sown now with advantage are Grevillea robusta, Aralia Sieboldii, fibrous-rooted begonias such as Vernon, Erfordii and semperflorens, antirrhinums for May flowering, amaryllis and Early Wonder aster; if a bench can be given to the latter for an extra early crop, this is the earliest aster in cultivation. All these seeds will germinate best in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night. The asters and snapdragons must be moved to cooler quarters after germination.

Smilax.

Probably a good deal of the smilax has been cut for the holiday trade. Before running up new strings for the next crop, scratch and clean over the surface soil and give a top-dressing of fine bone or rotted cow manure. Allow the plants to start well into growth, however, before giving them a soaking with water. Herein lies a common source of failure in smilax culture. Excessive waterings at the start, with an idea of starting the plants at once into active growth, will sometimes rot the plants. Nearly all plants enjoy a short rest, with drier conditions at the root, for a short time before making their next growth. We are, of course, referring to indoor plants, and an entire ignoring of this is too often the cause of injury to some, and may be death to others. Smilax, to do well, should have a night temperature of 60 degrees. It can be grown much cooler, but the strings grown in the higher temperature are better and keep just as well as those grown cool.

suggest themselves to any experienced observer and I am confident the long wished for sweet scented varieties will be perfected in the hands of Lemoine, Burbank or Van Fleet. Much has already been done; more will be accomplished by careful and patient workers in the development of the flower.

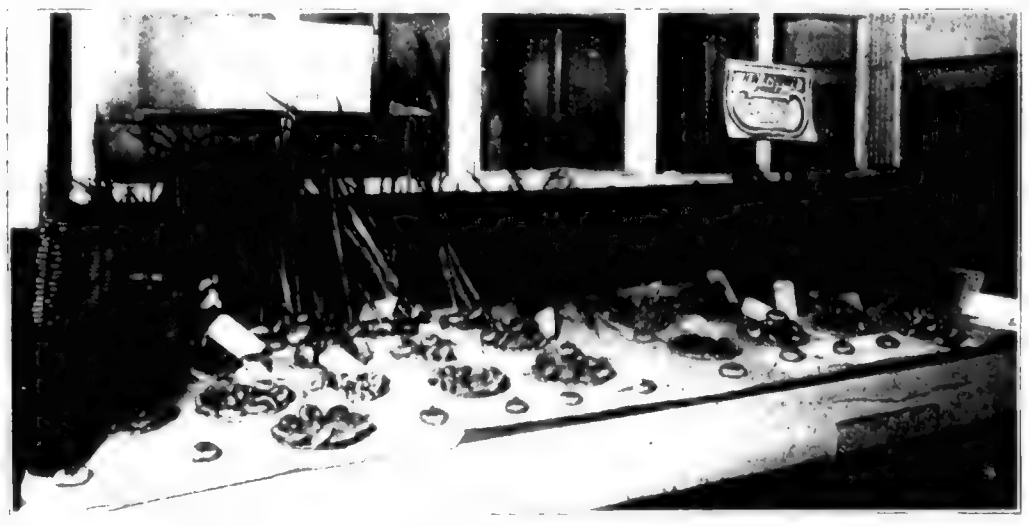
AMERICAN BULBS.

[A paper by E. S. Thompson, of Benton Harbor, Mich., read at the meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, in Chicago, December 15, 1911.]

Perhaps this subject may not appeal to many of you as being of special importance, but to me it is of wide significance. Always, as far as our history is concerned, we have looked to Europe for our bulbs. There were a few, of course, in the homes of the people, but as for growing them on a scale commensurate with the demand, it was hardly thought of till close to the date of the original world's fair at Chicago, 1893. Since that date, however, business has grown by leaps and bounds, till today we are largely supplying our own country and also exporting by the million. In tuberose bulbs we beat the world. From the south Atlantic coast and from Long Island, thanks to the enterprise of John Lewis Childs, millions of gladiolus bulbs are exported to Europe and other countries.

The greatest difficulty seems to be to grow what is known as the Dutch bulbs and lilies. However, we are finding that the Pacific northwest, in the vicinity of Puget Sound, is well adapted to the growing of this class of bulbs, as also is the Richmond district, on the Atlantic coast. The United States has climatic advantages excelled by none, and it needs only the careful push of Yankee ingenuity to develop other lines fully as much. Tiger lilies can be grown on the east Lake Michigan coast as cheaply and as well as in Holland. Of course we have to contend with the cheap labor of other countries, but we have an offset in the saving of freights and the decreased loss in carriage, which often leaves a good margin of profit of itself.

Results from United Effort.



One of the greatest difficulties we have to encounter is the slogan dear to the heart of many, "Importer," as though something imported was vastly superior to anything grown in the usual, everyday way, at home. One of the obstacles to progress in any line of work is the desire of some to be exclusively superior to their fellow mortals, and it applies to the bulb business as well as to a host of other lines. But "Results," from the standpoint of The Review, come to both by joint effort, and when men who specialize in any one line join together and work for mutual advancement, all are benefited.

Of late years our leading seedsmen have been sending all over the world for new and rare things. Childs has done this to a large extent, and we are greatly indebted to him for the marvelous advance in the gladiolus. Farquhar, of Boston, has been doing valuable work with lilies. With the aid of Burbank and Groff, as well as our own Kunderd and Koerner, progress is pushed on apace with the glorious gladiolus. What we need now is coöperation among growers and a disposition to play fair with results, and by this means gain for ourselves the advantages that should accrue to the hybridizer and grower.

The Bright Outlook in America.

Our country can produce almost anything in the bulb line the world produces and we are truly only on the brink of the great stream of success, not only with the gladiolus and dahlia, but with numerous others of the world's favorites in flowers produced from a bulbous or rhizome root. California and the Pacific coast, the fruit belt of Michigan, Long Island and the south Atlantic coast, are producing today vast quantities of bulbs that know no superior, and other parts of our country are coming to the front in an equally meritorious manner.

Brothers, let us go at this matter with a determination to get the best out of it and nothing will stop the progress. Our slogan should be "Grow our own stuff," and we can if we will. I believe our catalogue men would gladly patronize home growers, did we but produce as well and as reasonably. A Long Island grower, now in France, wrote a letter deploring the shortage of seeds in European markets this season and saying that "America must grow her own seeds." How about our own bulbs? They are of equal importance and deserve equal attention. The field is broad and valuable, and by no means occupied. Let us, during the coming year, try out more of the varieties sold by seedsmen in this country and come up here another season with a show of bulbs that will fairly take the trade off their feet, for value.

Seasonable Suggestions

Gardenias.

To successfully flower gardenias in midwinter requires considerable skill. The idea that plenty of heat and moisture are the two essentials to success is entirely wrong. Proper soil, which passes the water readily through it, is one necessity. If the least pasty it is sure to become more or less sour and this will mean a heavy dropping of buds. Water must be carefully given during the short days, always allowing the benches to dry out well between waterings. A night temperature of 65 degrees to 68 degrees should be maintained and the plants should be sprayed well twice or three times a week to keep bugs and scale in check. Do not keep the house too stuffy and moist. Raise the ventilators a little at a time and close in the same way. Those having some bottom heat for the plants are least likely to have the yellows and drop the buds, as the roots of gardenias like to be warm. In pots the roots are under better control than when in benches and bud dropping is less likely to occur. Avoid heavy syringing. Always use a spray nozzle and see that the foliage dries out before night.

Show Pelargoniums.

This is the season of rapid growth with the show pelargoniums or Lady Washington geraniums, as they are still commonly called by many. Unless the plants are wanted in bloom early, it will be necessary to keep the stronger shoots pinched back for some weeks yet. Do not allow the plants to become potbound. In shifting them use a compost of fibrous loam, cow manure and sand, to which can be added a little fine bone or Clay's fertilizer. Pot firmly and keep the plants well up to the glass in a cool and airy house. The night temperature may be as low as 40 degrees, and is better not to exceed 45 degrees, if you want nice, stocky plants. A spraying over on bright mornings will be beneficial, and do not omit regular fumigations or the dreaded green aphis will soon raise havoc with them.

Hydrangeas.

The wood on hydrangeas which were pot grown through the summer, or were lifted and potted in early fall, should now be of a nut brown color, hard and well ripened. If an early batch of plants is desired, some can be placed in heat at once. A temperature of 50 degrees at night will suffice. Keep a little on the dry side at the root, but spray freely until the young shoots push out; then give more water at the roots. It is inadvisable to give heat in the early stages of growth, but with shoots well advanced the temperature can be raised 10 degrees, and when the flower heads peep they can be forced quite hard. It is better, however, to open them in a somewhat lower temperature. Do not overlook the ever blooming hydrangea, H. arborescens grandiflora. This is splendid for pot culture, as well as one of our finest hardy flowering shrubs.

Calceolarias.

Those showy spring flowering greenhouse annuals, the calceolarias, succeed splendidly in a cool, damp house, one which sends a clammy feeling through anyone when entering it. They thrive in a low temperature, and 40 degrees at night is better for them than 50 degrees. The cooler they are grown, clear of actual freezing, the better they will be, and, at the same time, the freer from green aphis, which has a special fondness for them. In potting use a compost of fibrous loam, cow manure and sand, adding some soot and powdered charcoal to it. This latter keeps the foliage a beautiful dark color. Pinch the tops out of the plants to make them branch, unless you want an early lot of plants in small pots. The C. rugosa, or shrubby calceolarias, which are such favorites for bedding in Europe, are not sufficiently grown in pots. They are splendid either in pots or for cutting at Memorial day. Keep these potted on and well pinched for some time yet.

Seed Sowing.

Asparagus Sprengeri should now be sown in pans or flats of leaf-mold and sand. Many growers save their own seed. Where this has not been done, secure some at once. Asparagus plumosus nanus also will germinate well if sown now. Gloxinias, if started at once in pans of light soil, will make excellent flowering plants next summer. Water the pans, sow the fine seed carefully on the surface and do not water at all. Keep covered with glass and paper until the seedlings germinate. A few other seeds which can be sown now with advantage are Grevillea robusta, Aralia Sieboldii, fibrous rooted begonias such as Vernon, Erfordii and semperflorens, antirrhinums for May flowering, amaryllis and Early Wonder aster; if a bench can be given to the latter for an extra early crop, this is the earliest aster in cultivation. All these seeds will germinate best in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night. The asters and snapdragons must be moved to cooler quarters after germination.

Smilax.

Probably a good deal of the smilax has been cut for the holiday trade. Before running up new strings for the next crop, scratch and clean over the surface soil and give a top-dressing of fine bone or rotted cow manure. Allow the plants to start well into growth, however, before giving them a soaking with water. Herein lies a common source of failure in smilax culture. Excessive waterings at the start, with an idea of starting the plants at once into active growth, will sometimes rot the plants. Nearly all plants enjoy a short rest, with drier conditions at the root, for a short time before making their next growth. We are, of course, referring to indoor plants, and an entire ignoring of this is too often the cause of injury to some, and may be death to others. Smilax, to do well, should have a night temperature of 60 degrees. It can be grown much cooler, but the strings grown in the higher temperature are better and keep just as well as those grown cool.

CARNATIONS

STEM-ROT OF CARNATIONS.

In The Review of December 7, page 25, I read what E. S. has written regarding stem-rot of carnations. We have been troubled somewhat with the same disease.

Our soil is a heavy, clay loam, and, no matter how careful we are, during the month of September or just before the cold days arrive the stem-rot makes its appearance. Sometimes our plants have rotted just above the ground and sometimes directly beneath the surface, but so far we have never noticed the root in any way affected. The affected part dries up and no water reaches the stem or branches above it; consequently it goes quickly.

Contrary to the experience of a good many large growers, lime will prevent, almost entirely, the progress of the disease with us. Of course, any plant that has started downhill before the application of lime, eventually dies.

We have tried a section of bench this year with a light, sandy soil. In this part we have had no rot, but of course we shall not get the stem or the size of flower that the heavier soil produces. Next year we intend to try a combination of the two soils, and hope to eradicate the disease entirely. Our loss this year was 200 plants out of 15,000 planted, not a large loss, but yet large enough to warrant an investigation.

Occasionally, after feeding with liquid cow manure, we have seen one or two plants go off, but in such cases none have rotted beneath the soil, always above, and the roots were normal. Indeed, only yesterday I pulled out a plant of Beacon, and, though the top was dead, starting up from the stem beneath the area of rot was a small, new growth.

If any reader uses the same kind of soil for carnations, we should like to hear something about his experience with this troublesome disease.

J. E. Weir, Jr.

THE TROUBLE IS STEM-ROT.

You will find enclosed a sample of my carnation plants. Please let me know, as soon as possible, what is the matter with the roots. I have a bench of about 150 light pink Enchantress and they have done finely until now. This is the first plant that has shown any disease, and I am sending it to you so as to learn what the disease is and what to do to save the others from it. P. J. K.

The specimen forwarded was undoubtedly attacked by the common carnation stem-rot. If this is the only plant you have lost, you need not be alarmed. It may be the last one. Sprinkle a little air-slaked lime around where this plant stood; or, better still, take out about a quart of the soil and then sprinkle on the lime. If you have brought your carnations along this far without any more stem-rot, you will not likely have much trouble from that source during the rest of the season, providing you are reasonably careful with your watering, etc.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

Annual Winter Show.

The annual winter show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in London, December 5 and 6. Trade competitors were not quite so numerous as on some former occasions, but amateurs came out in stronger force and the show was a most successful one.

For group of cut blooms, arranged in a space 3x10 feet, the gold medal and premier award went to W. E. Wallace, Dunstable, who put up bold vases of finely developed blooms. Next in order of merit came Allwood Bros., Haywards Heath, winning a silver gilt medal, the silver medal and third prize going to Young & Co., Cheltenham.

The American challenge cup for three vases of recent American introductions was awarded to W. E. Wallace, for Gloriosa, Scarlet Glow and May Day. Bertie Bell, Guernsey, came next with Gloriosa, May Day and Mrs. C. W. Ward, followed by W. Wells & Co., Merstham, with Bonfire, White House and Princess Charming.

The Brunton challenge cup for three British novelties was awarded to Bertie Bell, for Coronation, Constance and Judith.

The Covent Garden cup for two boxes of blooms, packed for market, and two vases, was carried off by W. E. Wallace, and he also annexed a silver gilt medal for a vase of Enchantress, the best vase in the show.

For a vase of any variety not in commerce—first, W. E. Wallace, with Una; second, Bertie Bell, with Coronation; third, W. Wells & Co., with Merstham Beauty.

In the color classes the principal honors went to W. E. Wallace, Bertie Bell, W. H. Page, A. F. Dutton, H. Burnett, G. Lange and Mrs. D. M. Collins. A large gold medal was awarded to C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, for a decorative display which filled a 50-foot run of tabling. Another large, meritorious display, from Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, gained a gold medal. G. Lange, Hampton, received a silver gilt medal for a smaller collection, and Newport Carnation Nursery a silver medal.

Novelties.

The floral committee had seven or eight new varieties to discuss, and gave honors to four. A first-class certificate was awarded to Triumph, from C. Engelmann. The flowers are the brightest possible crimson, with nothing in existing varieties to equal it in color; flowers, three to three and one-half inches, of fine form and splendid calyx. The habit of the plant is vigorous and it produces flowers in large quantities.

An award of merit was bestowed on Geisha, from George Fairbairn & Sons, Carlisle. This was one of the most distinct novelties in the show. The flowers are mauve, with a dash of crimson at the base of each petal; full substance; petals serrated; grand calyx and good constitution.

Awards of merit also went to Coronation, from Bertie Bell, Guernsey; a fine, full flower, a bright shade of pink, and to Una, from W. E. Wallace, a pleasing, deep shade of rose, of good substance and habit.

Two American varieties were honored—a first-class certificate to White Wonder and an award of merit to Gloriosa.

Dinner and General Meeting.

On the evening of December 5 the members dined together in Anderton's hotel, with J. S. Brunton, chairman of the committee, presiding. The usual toast list was duly honored, that of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society being proposed in a happy vein by M. Todd, of Edinburgh. C. Engelmann, in a speech, referred to W. E. Wallace as the champion carnation grower of the world. Americans must look to their laurels. Mr. Wallace's flowers on this occasion were simply marvelous and he practically swept the boards in the leading classes. Messrs. Jacob, Hawes, Page and others added to the harmony of the proceedings with appropriate speeches.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were voted satisfactory. The total membership was reported as 301 and there is a balance of $140 in the bank.

J. S. Brunton was reëlected chairman; W. E. Wallace succeeds S. Mortimer as vice-chairman; E. F. Hawes succeeds H. Mathias as secretary, and L. J. Cook was reëlected treasurer. The secretary's address is: E. F. Hawes, Ulysses, Fortune Green, London, N. W.

MULCH FOR CARNATIONS.

To mulch carnations in January would pulverized cattle manure be as good as a rich garden soil? The article I have in mind is that furnished by the Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago, which has the following analysis: Nitrogen, 1.8 per cent; ammonia, equals 2.1 per cent; phosphoric acid, available, 1.0 per cent; potash, 1.0 per cent. How much should be used? I have used wood ashes once on my benches. Do you advise using them again? A. E. B.

The pulverized cattle manure will make a splendid feeding material for your carnations, but you should use it merely as a dressing, rather than as a mulch. Remember that this manure has all the moisture extracted from it and the same bulk would contain a great deal more plant food than in the green state. The same is also true of the shredded grade.

Of the pulverized grade I would advise you to spread on the soil about a good handful to each row halfway across a 5-foot bench. Apply it about every two or three weeks, according to what feeding your plants seem to need. Of the shredded grade put on three times that quantity and apply it once each month. Alternate about each third or fourth feeding with pulverized sheep manure, using the same quantity as recommended for the pulverized cattle manure. Let the sheep manure be applied about once in two months and, if possible, during a bright spell of weather.

Just one word of caution in regard to your feeding. If your plants need it, well and good. But be sure they do need it, and keep your weather eye out for the first sign of softness and then immediately put on the soft pedal, or if conditions warrant, discontinue altogether for a time. Weather conditions play an important part in the feeding of any kind of crops, but this is especially true of carnations. A. F. J. B.

GLADIOLI IN BENCHES.

Will you please inform me how close gladiolus bulbs should be planted to get the best results on the benches and be most profitable? J. A. T.

The small-flowered gladioli, such as Colvillei The Bride, Blushing Bride, Peach Blossom, etc., will do planted three inches apart each way. It is now, however, getting late to plant them, and furthermore, they are more profitably grown in flats. The large-bulbed gladioli, such as America, Mrs. F. King, Augusta, Brenchleyensis, May, etc., require rather more space, but do well planted in rows ten to twelve inches apart, with the bulbs three and four inches apart in the rows. They can also be planted between other growing crops and are useful for filling up blanks caused by carnations or any other plants dying out. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night is suitable. C. W.

FARFUGIUM FROM SEED.

I should like to grow farfugium from seed. Will you kindly tell me how? E. C. W.

I have had no experience in raising Farfugium grande from seed. It is so easily and abundantly propagated by division that this latter method is in almost general use. Fresh seed should germinate readily if sown in pans of light compost, two-thirds leaf-mold, one-third loam and a good addition of sand, placed in a warm, moist house and kept shaded until the seedlings germinate. Care must be taken not to allow the soil to become dry. A night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees would be suitable. C. W.

Enchantress as W. E. Wallace Grows it in England.

A NEW BEAUTY GROWER.

The average grower can make more money from some other crop than he can make from American Beauty roses, so that special interest attaches to every new man who turns up with a special facility for handling this greatest of all roses. Peter Morgen appears to be such a man; at least he has been so successful with the Beauty in his years as an employee that when he started in business for himself last spring he chose to specialize on the one variety and now has done so well that it is planned to put up four additional houses next season and plant them all to Beauties.

Mr. Morgen is a graduate of the school of rose growing conducted by Wietor Bros., Chicago. He went to them as a green hand and spent six years in their employ, taking a year for a trip to California after he had four years of training and returning for a postgraduate course of two years. Then he spent eight months with the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, and in the spring of 1911 went to Huntingburg, in southern Indiana, where he went into partnership with a Mr. Seubold and put up two houses, each 24x300. These were up and ready for planting May 24. The illustration is reproduced from a photograph made Thanksgiving day. The success thus far made is such that plans are being made for the addition of four more houses, each 24x300, to be put up early in the spring of 1912 and planted entirely to Beauties.

Mr. Morgen is particularly proud of the heating system in his two houses. He put it in himself and does not claim it can not be beaten, but says, "You got to show me." He uses steam with the Morehead double trap system, one condensation trap and one trap above the boiler. The addition next spring will call for another boiler.

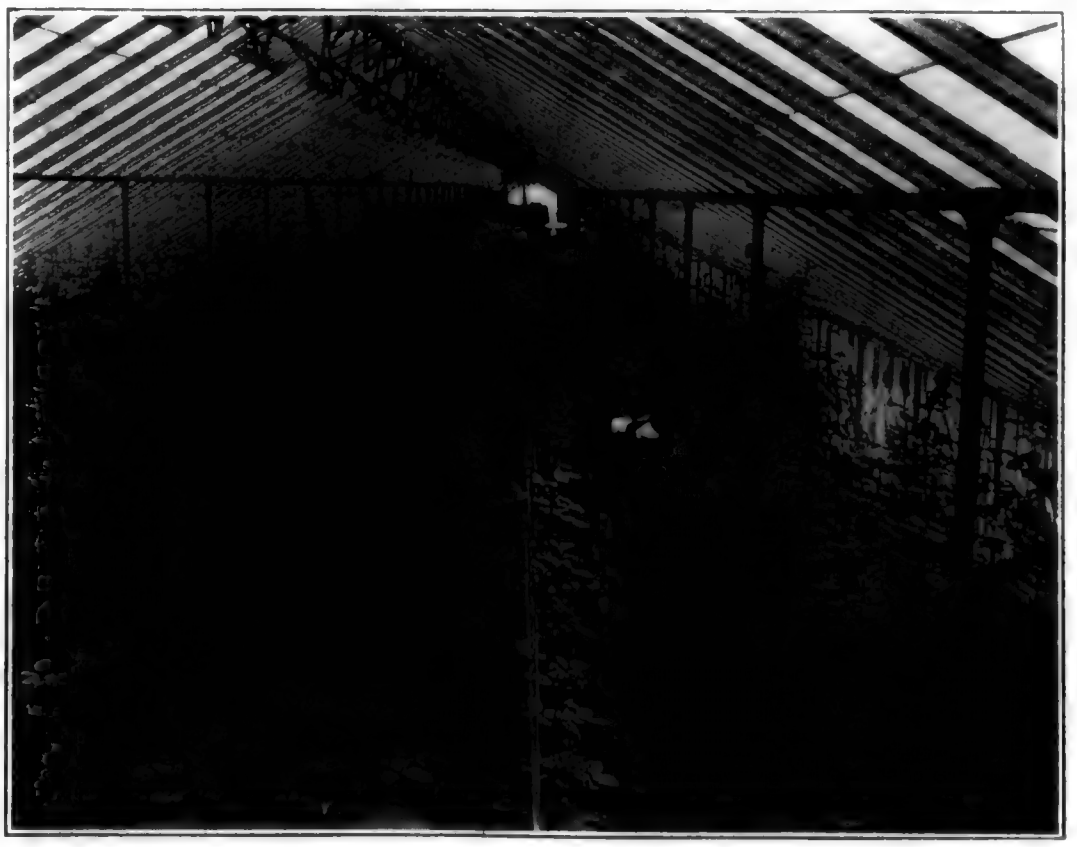
SPOTS ON ROSE FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find some rose leaves affected with small, round, black spots. I mulched my roses with fresh cow manure two weeks ago, and since that the trouble started. All my manure was covered two inches with loam. I do not know if it is a scale, as all the woodwork, the glass and even such other plants as poinsettias and lilies are covered with hundreds of those little spots, not as large as a pinhead. Under my microscope it appears formed like a scale, yellow brown underneath, but when scraped off with the fingernail, it leaves no typical light spot, as will other scale. I also notice many little flies among the plants, the same as in cow manure. I sprayed with whale oil soap and with nicotine, but without result. Would cayenne pepper hurt the plants, as gardenias, Harrisii lilies and poinsettias? I would be thankful if I could get special advice, as it is rapidly increasing. H. R.

These are not scale or insects, but are not uncommon when fresh cow manure has been used as a mulch. The insects which come with or breed in the manure are the cause of the spots, and their excrements will be found, as you state, on every class of plants, as well as on the woodwork. While fumigation will destroy such as are on the wing, others are daily coming into life and will continue the spotting while the freshness of the manure lasts. The pests will soon run out, or they probably have by this time. Be careful in the future not to use the manure too fresh, as in addition to causing these specks on the foliage from insects, the strong ammonia is liable to cause burning of the foliage. It would be unwise to use any strong fumigant, as poinsettias will not stand it, although gardenias and lilies would. You can kill all insect life in your soil or manure by using carbon bisulphide. Have holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way; put a small teaspoonful of carbon in each hole, covering the holes at once. The carbon will not hurt the plants. Do not use any naked light while using it, owing to its explosive nature. Of course the carbon will not destroy any unhatched insect eggs. C. W.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The members of the American Rose Society seem to be alive to the approaching exhibition and annual meeting, to be held this year in January. It is a little earlier and a little different from heretofore. From information now in hand, it would seem that there is going to be a fine spread. Robert Pyle, of West Grove, will give some evening an illustrated talk concerning his visit to England last June.



Another matter of interest is in regard to the name of the Double Improved White Killarney, which was filed with the American Rose Society and which exhibit took prize and recognition at Boston, but, owing to confusion in name and upon request of various people, this rose will hereafter be called Double White Killarney, Reuter's Strain.

FUMIGATING WITH CYANIDE.

Is Gas Used Too Strong?

As to cyanide gas and the experience of Mr. Merrill related in The Review for December 14, are we not using it too strong? Henry F. Michell Co. had a formula in the fall bulb catalogue which I copy: "Put a tablespoonful of water in a galvanized iron pail. Add to this one ounce of sulphuric acid and use one ounce of cyanide of potassium." The above charge is sufficient "for a house 20x100 feet. Don't open the greenhouse for at least twelve hours." I have used the gas in only one house, a small one, only 12x24 feet, and a much stronger formula, and have badly burned my tender plants. My worst pest is the white fly. In the late fall they completely denude my rose bushes in the open and stay around until winter, and then take possession of the only house I keep warm for winter. They even come into our dwelling and give the family an all-winter's fight and are worst on fuchsias. We cannot use the gas in our home and we fight them with nicotine, which is an up-hill tussle. They just love lettuce, and during the past fall, when I was most alert, they had a feast on some plants in flats. Elmer D. Smith, in a recent article in The Review, about mums, says he prefers the sodium to the potassium form of cyanide for fighting aphis. In my small way and small house I have little opportunity for experiment, and I am reading all I see in all the printed matter, hoping for the best and ready to adopt anything that will kill the plant-grower's enemies. F. P. Avery.

WHITE FLY ON COLEUS.

Two weeks ago I received a shipment of plants, including some coleus, from a large wholesale house. In looking over the plants a few days ago, I found the coleus had some insects on them. I have not been able to find out what the pests are, so I enclose some of the old ones and those just hatching out. Please let me know what they are and how to get rid of them. L. M. D.

The leaves forwarded were badly infested with white fly, one of the worst pests we have to control under glass. It is specially bad on coleus, calceolarias, cinerarias, show pelargoniums, alternantheras, heliotropes, fuchsias and tomatoes, but attacks quite a few other plants. You can reduce their numbers considerably by spraying with ordinary soap and water (such a soap as Ivory answers well), but the only way to really exterminate them is by the use of hydrocyanic acid gas. Formulas for the use of this gas have frequently appeared in The Review. It must be used with great care, being deadly to animal life of every kind. It will also scorch some plants of a tender nature. It should be used on a cool night, when danger of injury to the plants is much minimized. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was not at all brisk last week. On the two closing days almost continual rain greatly affected trade, and there was a considerable unsold surplus in many lines. The present week sees a little more activity prevailing, but considerable more life must be put into the market before the week closes. Carnations are not in particularly heavy crop and the Christmas supply will not be so large as in some recent years. The unusually warm weather has made flowers soft and there are many complaints of their going to sleep soon after arrival. So far there is no notable advance in price, but colored varieties are expected to make $8 to $10 per hundred, while others will probably make $3 to $6. Whites will be the hardest to move. Roses are abundant, but sell quite well. Beauties are fine and sell well. Richmonds from some growers also are superb, as are Rhea Reids. White Killarney sells slowly. Pink moves much better. All the yellow varieties are in good demand. Brides and Maids have practically disappeared from this market.

Thomas Pegler.
(President-elect Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club.)

Violets have sold only moderately of late. Growers are holding them for Christmas. Paper Whites are druggy and there are too many Roman hyacinths. Some small lots of white tulips, yellow trumpet narcissi, sweet scented jonquils, iris and freesia are arriving. All these are in demand. Yellow marguerites are eagerly bought and so is pink snapdragon. There is a fine sale for calendulas, but cosmos moves poorly. Good mignonette sells well. Stevia is good, but too abundant. Poinsettias are offered all the way from $2 to $6 per dozen. Cattleyas are not plentiful, but the demand is only moderate. There are far too many cypripediums. Sweet peas are as abundant as in summer, with a weak demand as the week opens. Valley is abundant. Good lilies have been in demand. Gardenias when good in quality bring excellent prices. No one seems to want the seconds.

There has been a brisk demand for Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, as well as smilax. The latter is now little grown here. Holly and other Christmas greenery never sold so well before. Plant business has been unusually heavy, and the warm weather has greatly favored growers, little wrapping being necessary. Poinsettias are about all sold out and the demand for azaleas, primroses, begonias, ardisias and other seasonable plants was never better. As illustrating the difference in climatic conditions, we may say that December 16, 1910, the maximum temperature was 13 degrees and the minimum 10 degrees below zero, the lowest of the winter. The same day this year the thermometer was in the forties all day.

Club Meeting.

There was a splendid attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 19, when one new name was added to the membership roll. Officers for 1912 were elected as follows: President, Thomas Pegler; vice-president, Wm. J. Kennedy; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Peter Fisher; executive committee, P. M. Miller, H. H. Bartsch, Wm. Sim, W. J. Patterson.

Exhibits were numerous. Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, showed St. Nicholas, the blooms showing up splendidly though they were the same flowers that had been on exhibition at Framingham when the club held its outing December 16. W. W. Edgar Co. showed a fine collection of azaleas, begonias and poinsettias. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. showed Begonia La Patrie. Thomas Coles showed Coleus thyrsoideus and Primula malacoides. W. N. Craig exhibited a collection of twenty-five zonale geraniums, receiving a report of merit. F. E. Palmer showed a scarlet tulip and a fine type of solanum. Gerhardt Bleicken showed new hybrid freesias. H. Huebner showed a new winter flowering snapdragon, well thought of by the committee. James Wheeler also showed splendid snapdragon.

F. E. Palmer gave a talk on the use of dynamite as an aid in horticulture. Numerous questions were answered. It was decided to hold a banquet after Easter.

Club Field Day.

After two weeks of warm weather, a rain started December 15 and lasted

Peter Morgen appears to be such a man; at least he has been so successful with the Beauty in his years as an employee that when he started in business for himself last spring he chose to specialize on the one variety and now has done so well that it is planned to put up four additional houses next season and plant them all to Beauties.

Mr. Morgen is a graduate of the school of rose growing conducted by Wietor Bros., Chicago. He went to them as a green hand and spent six years in their employ, taking a year for a trip to California after he had four years of training and returning for a postgraduate course of two years. Then he spent eight months with the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, and in the spring of 1911 went to Huntingburg, in southern Indiana, where he went into partnership with a Mr. Seubold and put up two houses, each 24x300. These were up and ready for planting May 24. The illustration is reproduced from a photograph made Thanksgiving day. The success thus far made is such that plans are being made for the addition of four more houses, each 24x300, to be put up early in the spring of 1912 and planted entirely to Beauties.

Mr. Morgen is particularly proud of the heating system in his two houses. He put it in himself and does not claim it can not be beaten, but says, "You got to show me." He uses steam with the Morehead double trap system, one condensation trap and one trap above the boiler. The addition next spring will call for another boiler.

SPOTS ON ROSE FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find some rose leaves affected with small, round, black spots. I mulched my roses with fresh cow manure two weeks ago, and since that the trouble started. All my manure was covered two inches with loam. I do not know if it is a scale, as all the woodwork, the glass and even such other plants as poinsettias and lilies are covered with hundreds of those little spots, not as large as a pinhead. Under my microscope it appears formed like a scale, yellow brown underneath, but when scraped off with the fingernail, it leaves no typical light spot, as will other scale. I also notice many little flies among the plants, the same as in cow manure. I sprayed with whale oil soap and with nicotine, but without result. Would cayenne pepper hurt the plants, as gardenias, Harrisii lilies and poinsettias? I would be thankful if I could get special advice, as it is rapidly increasing. H. R.

These are not scale or insects, but are not uncommon when fresh cow manure has been used as a mulch. The insects which come with or breed in the manure are the cause of the spots, and their excrements will be found, as you state, on every class of plants, as well as on the woodwork. While fumigation will destroy such as are on the wing, others are daily coming into life and will continue the spotting while the freshness of the manure lasts. The pests will soon run out, or they probably have by this time. Be careful in the future not to use the manure too fresh, as in addition to causing these specks on the foliage from insects, the strong ammonia is liable to cause burning of the foliage. It would be unwise to use any strong fumigant, as poinsettias will not stand it, although gardenias and lilies would. You can kill all insect life in your soil or manure by using carbon bisulphide. Have holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way; put a small teaspoonful of carbon in each hole, covering the holes at once. The carbon will not hurt the plants. Do not use any naked light while using it, owing to its explosive nature. Of course the carbon will not destroy any unhatched insect eggs. C. W.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The members of the American Rose Society seem to be alive to the approaching exhibition and annual meeting, to be held this year in January. It is a little earlier and a little different from heretofore. From information now in hand, it would seem that there is going to be a fine spread. Robert Pyle, of West Grove, will give some evening an illustrated talk concerning his visit to England last June.

Another matter of interest is in regard to the name of the Double Improved White Killarney, which was filed with the American Rose Society and which exhibit took prize and recognition at Boston, but, owing to confusion in name and upon request of various people, this rose will hereafter be called Double White Killarney, Reuter's Strain.

FUMIGATING WITH CYANIDE.

Is Gas Used Too Strong?

As to cyanide gas and the experience of Mr. Merrill related in The Review for December 14, are we not using it too strong? Henry F. Michell Co. had a formula in the fall bulb catalogue which I copy: "Put a tablespoonful of water in a galvanized iron pail. Add to this one ounce of sulphuric acid and use one ounce of cyanide of potassium." The above charge is sufficient "for a house 20x100 feet. Don't open the greenhouse for at least twelve hours." I have used the gas in only one house, a small one, only 12x24 feet, and a much stronger formula, and have badly burned my tender plants. My worst pest is the white fly. In the late fall they completely denude my rose bushes in the open and stay around until winter, and then take possession of the only house I keep warm for winter. They even come into our dwelling and give the family an all-winter's fight and are worst on fuchsias. We cannot use the gas in our home and we fight them with nicotine, which is an up-hill tussle. They just love lettuce, and during the past fall, when I was most alert, they had a feast on some plants in flats. Elmer D. Smith, in a recent article in The Review, about mums, says he prefers the sodium to the potassium form of cyanide for fighting aphis. In my small way and small house I have little opportunity for experiment, and I am reading all I see in all the printed matter, hoping for the best and ready to adopt anything that will kill the plant-grower's enemies. F. P. Avery.

WHITE FLY ON COLEUS.

Two weeks ago I received a shipment of plants, including some coleus, from a large wholesale house. In looking over the plants a few days ago, I found the coleus had some insects on them. I have not been able to find out what the pests are, so I enclose some of the old ones and those just hatching out. Please let me know what they are and how to get rid of them. L. M. D.

The leaves forwarded were badly infested with white fly, one of the worst pests we have to control under glass. It is specially bad on coleus, calceolarias, cinerarias, show pelargoniums, alternantheras, heliotropes, fuchsias and tomatoes, but attacks quite a few other plants. You can reduce their numbers considerably by spraying with ordinary soap and water (such a soap as Ivory answers well), but the only way to really exterminate them is by the use of hydrocyanic acid gas. Formulas for the use of this gas have frequently appeared in The Review. It must be used with great care, being deadly to animal life of every kind. It will also scorch some plants of a tender nature. It should be used on a cool night, when danger of injury to the plants is much minimized. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was not at all brisk last week. On the two closing days almost continual rain greatly affected trade, and there was a considerable unsold surplus in many lines. The present week sees a little more activity prevailing, but considerable more life must be put into the market before the week closes. Carnations are not in particularly heavy crop and the Christmas supply will not be so large as in some recent years. The unusually warm weather has made flowers soft and there are many complaints of their going to sleep soon after arrival. So far there is no notable advance in price, but colored varieties are expected to make $8 to $10 per hundred, while others will probably make $3 to $6. Whites will be the hardest to move. Roses are abundant, but sell quite well. Beauties are fine and sell well. Richmonds from some growers also are superb, as are Rhea Reids. White Killarney sells slowly. Pink moves much better. All the yellow varieties are in good demand. Brides and Maids have practically disappeared from this market.

Thomas Pegler.
(President-elect Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club.)

Violets have sold only moderately of late. Growers are holding them for Christmas. Paper Whites are druggy and there are too many Roman hyacinths. Some small lots of white tulips, yellow trumpet narcissi, sweet scented jonquils, iris and freesia are arriving. All these are in demand. Yellow marguerites are eagerly bought and so is pink snapdragon. There is a fine sale for calendulas, but cosmos moves poorly. Good mignonette sells well. Stevia is good, but too abundant. Poinsettias are offered all the way from $2 to $6 per dozen. Cattleyas are not plentiful, but the demand is only moderate. There are far too many cypripediums. Sweet peas are as abundant as in summer, with a weak demand as the week opens. Valley is abundant. Good lilies have been in demand. Gardenias when good in quality bring excellent prices. No one seems to want the seconds.

There has been a brisk demand for Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, as well as smilax. The latter is now little grown here. Holly and other Christmas greenery never sold so well before. Plant business has been unusually heavy, and the warm weather has greatly favored growers, little wrapping being necessary. Poinsettias are about all sold out and the demand for azaleas, primroses, begonias, ardisias and other seasonable plants was never better. As illustrating the difference in climatic conditions, we may say that December 16, 1910, the maximum temperature was 13 degrees and the minimum 10 degrees below zero, the lowest of the winter. The same day this year the thermometer was in the forties all day.

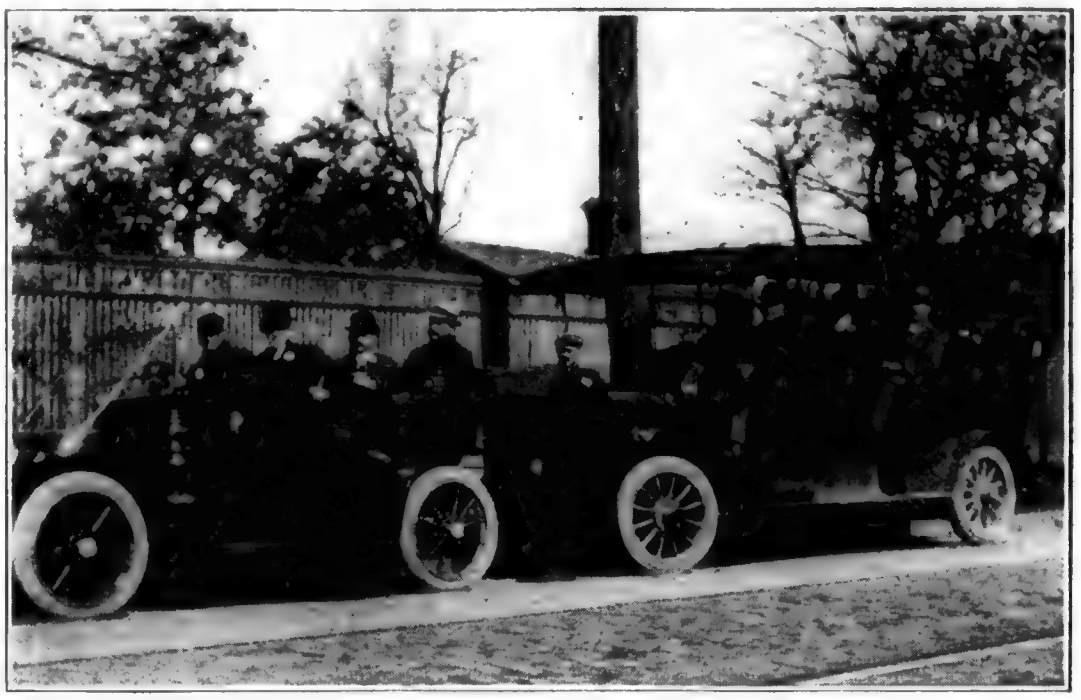
Club Meeting.

There was a splendid attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 19, when one new name was added to the membership roll. Officers for 1912 were elected as follows: President, Thomas Pegler; vice-president, Wm. J. Kennedy; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Peter Fisher; executive committee, P. M. Miller, H. H. Bartsch, Wm. Sim, W. J. Patterson.

Exhibits were numerous. Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, showed St. Nicholas, the blooms showing up splendidly though they were the same flowers that had been on exhibition at Framingham when the club held its outing December 16. W. W. Edgar Co. showed a fine collection of azaleas, begonias and poinsettias. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. showed Begonia La Patrie. Thomas Coles showed Coleus thyrsoideus and Primula malacoides. W. N. Craig exhibited a collection of twenty-five zonale geraniums, receiving a report of merit. F. E. Palmer showed a scarlet tulip and a fine type of solanum. Gerhardt Bleiken showed new hybrid freesias. H. Huebner showed a new winter flowering snapdragon, well thought of by the committee. James Wheeler also showed splendid snapdragon.

F. E. Palmer gave a talk on the use of dynamite as an aid in horticulture. Numerous questions were answered. It was decided to hold a banquet after Easter.

Club Field Day.



After two weeks of warm weather, a rain started December 15 and lasted for several days. December 16 the skies were dark and rain fell practically the whole day. This did not, however, deter a large number from going in the special car to the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's field day at Framingham. Over sixty journeyed from Boston, and additions from Natick, Wellesley and other towns swelled the total attendance to over 100. The establishment of W. R. Nicholson was first visited. Carnations are the leading specialty here, and were all in grand crop for Christmas. In the largest house 6,000 plants are grown, the varieties being Harry Fenn, White Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Pink Delight. In one house a number of new kinds were growing. Golden Ray was splendid and is the finest of its color up to date. Princess Charming showed up well. Washington did not look so well as some other sorts. White Wonder is grown in quantity and is the best of its color. Beacon and Scarlet Glow were both extra fine, also Gloriosa. Mr. Nicholson likes Benson's White Enchantress better than any other form, and it certainly did look superb. Cuttings in thousands were already rooted and rooting in the propagating house. A house of mignonette was splendid. White and yellow marguerites are grown in quantity and were heavily flowered. The new double white, Mrs. F. Sander, looked first-class. Shamrocks in tens of thousands were noted; also a fine lot of the Godfrey calla, violets and a grand lot of Freesia Purity, carrying remarkably long and stout stems. Everything here was clean and showed that W. R. Nicholson is a chip of the old block.

The next move was to S. J. Goddard's, and Sam had his houses in apple-pie order. On entering the packing shed a fine vase of the new scarlet, St. Nicholas, sent on by the raisers, Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, caught the visitors' eyes. The flowers stood up as if they were fresh picked and caused many favorable comments. The three large carnation houses here carried a grand holiday crop. Helen Goddard, as grown here, beats anything of its color to date. Fenn was fine, Beacon grand. A long bench of White Perfection would be hard to duplicate. Gloriosa was well grown, and Mr. Goddard thinks highly of both this and White Wonder. White Enchantress looked superb. Many new kinds were on trial. Golden Ray was blooming profusely. There were a number of English varieties also. The best in a large batch was Regina, salmon pink in color; this variety will be more heard from. In addition to the carnations, a fine house of stevia was noted, excellent Purity freesia, swainsona, orchids in variety and marguerites, also a fine assortment of Christmas plants for home trade. Coffee and sandwiches were served here, after which a move was made to J. T. Butterworth's, in South Framingham.

Here orchids are a leading feature and fill several houses. Their condition was first-class. Though cattleya flowers were being closely cut, some fine C. labiata were still in evidence, as well as C. Percivaliana, and a grand lot of C. Trianæ, including a fine specimen of C. Trianæ alba. Some good cattleya hybrids were also flowering for the first time. Dendrobium Phalænopsis Schrœderiana was in fine crop. In cypripediums, 8,000 flowers of C. insigne were open, practically all ordered for the holi-

New York and New Jersey Plant Growers on Tour.

PLANT GROWERS ON TOUR.

The annual fall inspection tour of the members of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers took place recently. The trip took two days and the members were conveyed in automobiles to seventeen establishments on Long Island and fourteen in New Jersey. On the Long Island trip a noonday stop was made at the dining hall of John Niederstein, Middle Village, where under Frederick Marquardt's direction a sumptuous meal had been prepared. The photograph reproduced on this page was taken at Middle Village by Miss Marie Marquardt. It will be noticed that F. R. Pierson, ex-president of the S. A. F., who occupied the front seat, was the guiding spirit of the larger car, while the committee's car was dominated by such large bodies as A. L. Miller and Anton Schultheis. Not only was the trip instructive and profitable, but the members had an enjoyable time.

TORONTO.

The Market.

The big rush is on and everyone is heels over head in work. Increased staffs in all the stores give ample evidence of this. Really good stock is scarce, although there is plenty of the poorer grades. The small amount of first-class stock is attributed to the bad weather. During the last month we have not had two days of sunshine. Good poinsettias are hard to get and as these are much wanted at this season, the scarcity will be keenly felt. Roses, carnations and violets of almost top quality are quite plentiful. Of late, the weather, while cold, has been absolutely without snow. Retailers are praying for a fall of at least enough to cover the ground, as this gives a more Christmasy air and helps business considerably.

Immortelle wreaths and bells are taking the place of holly to a large extent. Many retailers who have heretofore handled holly and wreathing say they will not touch it this year, but will leave it to the grocers and fruiterers. They state there is no money in it. People buy a 25-cent wreath and expect the florist to send the wagon or automobile a couple of miles to deliver it. Christmas trees are scarce, importations being made from as far away as New Brunswick.

Various Notes.

J. H. Dunlop imported a big shipment of Italian pottery. These are finding a ready sale at this season. Mr. Scrim, late of Ottawa, Ont., is now engaged in J. H. Dunlop's store.

J. S. Simmons has a fine lot of azaleas and other flowering plants. He expects to do a large trade in hampers and fancy baskets. He recently purchased a new motor truck for delivery purposes. Business at his new north end store is excellent. E. A. F.

HARTFORD, CONN.

At the annual meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, December 8, the members showed their implicit confidence in their officers of the last year by reëlecting every single one, thus giving testimony of their appreciation of the work done during 1911.

The officers are: President, John F. Huss, Hartford; vice-presidents, J. A. Weber, Hartford; Alex Cumming, Jr., Hartford; Carl Peterson, West Hartford; county vice-presidents, Litchfield, Walter Angus, of Chapinville; Fairfield, C. H. Plump, of West Redding; New Haven, J. H. Slocombe, of New Haven; New London, A. E. Mitchell, of Norwich; Windham, F. M. Smith, of Willimantic; Tolland, Chauncey Turney, of Rockville; Middlesex, A. E. Curtis, of Deep River; secretary, G. W. Smith, Melrose; treasurer, W. W. Hunt, Hartford; librarian, W. T. Hall, Hartford; botanist, G. W. Smith, Melrose; pomologist, C. H. Sierman, Hartford.

About thirty members of the society were present and the year's work was reviewed, showing a total membership of 211, cash on hand $121.68, and additional assets consisting of two shares of Ætna Life Insurance stock. Resolutions of regret on the death of Wm. B. May, one of the society's founders, were adopted. It was voted to draw up a new constitution and set of by-laws, and F. B. Parker was elected to membership.

J. A. Weber was awarded a diploma for three pots of Cypripedium insigne which he exhibited.

OBITUARY.

Henry F. Lord.

Henry F. Lord, treasurer of the Lord & Burnham Co., the widely known greenhouse building material manufacturing concern, with plants at Irvington, N. Y., and Des Plaines, Ill., was found dead in his garage at Irvington Saturday evening, December 16. He had been overhauling his automobile and had been crushed beneath the engine, which apparently had broken from the chassis while he was beneath it, and alone. Physicians said Mr. Lord had died instantly and that the accident had occurred several hours previous to the finding of the body by his son, Arthur Lord, and his son-in-law, John Cushman.

Mr. Lord was 58 years of age, the son of the founder of the business to which he had devoted his life. He had lived at Irvington since he was 15 years of age and was one of the leading citizens, both on account of the size of the company's plant and his activity in civic affairs. He formerly was president of the village and was a trustee at the time of his death. In addition to being treasurer of Lord & Burnham Co., he also was a director of the Irvington Bank and of the Irvington Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Lord was married and had three sons and one daughter.

The funeral was largely attended and a wealth of flowers came from his wide circle of personal and business friends.

Fred H. Johnson.

Fred H. Johnson, who for many years was in the greenhouse business at Olean, N. Y., dropped dead December 18, while at work in Llewellyn's greenhouses, where he had been employed for some time. The body was found by Paul Llewellyn. From all appearances, Mr. Johnson had just filled his pipe, and was about to light it, when he fell forward on his face. Mr. Johnson was one of the best known residents of Olean. Many years ago, when the Erie railroad was first opened, Fred Johnson was employed as an engineer. When he left the road he took up his work as a florist, and for over a quarter of a century conducted the greenhouses on Whitney avenue. For over thirty years he was a boarder at the Grand Central hotel, during all of this time carrying Mrs. Johnson's dinner to her, she being an invalid. He was always of a cheerful disposition, and few would have believed him to be as old as he was, about 82 years.

Last winter Mr. and Mrs. Johnson decided to give up the greenhouse, and, leaving Olean, they moved to Port Arthur, Texas, where they spent the winter. But home ties proved too strong, and in the early spring they returned to Olean. Mrs. Johnson, far advanced in years, is left without known relatives.

Dr. J. Q. Mulford.

Dr. John Q. Mulford, Lebanon, O., was fatally injured when he was buried in a cave-in of concrete and dirt at his home about 10 o'clock on the morning of December 10. He was preparing to make some repairs in a ditch running through his back yard; the ditch was lined with concrete, which was becoming loose and threatened to cave in. He entered the ditch without stopping to brace the walls, and was patching the broken places when the wall on one side, for a distance of twenty feet, gave way. He was caught by the shoulders and immediately rendered unconscious. Two men passing by ran to his assistance, prying away the heavy concrete blocks and freeing him. When taken from the ditch it was at first thought that he had been instantly killed, but physicians succeeded in reviving him and he lived until about 6 o'clock in the evening. No bones were broken, but the weight crushed his lungs.

Dr. Mulford had retired from practice several years ago and since that time has been engaged in the florists' business at Lebanon. He leaves a wife and three sons to mourn his loss.

Lucius S. Fife.

Lucius S. Fife died at Shelburne Falls, Mass., December 15, after several months' illness. He was born in Cincinnati, O., December 27, 1840, the son of Robert M. Fife. Mr. Fife's parents moved to Shelburne Falls when he was but 9 years of age. Mr. Fife had made his home in Shelburne Falls ever since that time. He established the first greenhouse in Shelburne Falls in the early '80s, and had been a professional florist from that time until within a few months, when because of failing health he sold out his business. Since giving up active business life he had continually been losing strength, and failed very perceptibly during the last few days, until the end came.

Mr. Fife was married June 15, 1875, to Myra Emler, of Conway, who survives him. Besides his widow, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Charles E. Buell, of Shelburne Falls, and Mrs. Emil M. Schneck, of Greenfield, and one sister, Miss Matilda Fife, of Shelburne Falls. Five grandchildren also survive him.

Henry A. Sauer.

Henry Adam Sauer, 64 years old, and a well-known florist of Minneapolis, died December 12. Mr. Sauer was born in Winkledorf, Hanover, coming to America in 1869. He moved to Minneapolis in 1898 and conducted a florist's shop until last July, when he was compelled to retire, owing to ill health. Mr. Sauer was active in Masonic affairs in Minneapolis. He was a member of Arcana Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; Anchor Chapter, R. A. M.; Adoniram Council, Darius Commandery and Zuhrah Temple, and also of Northern Light Lodge, I. O. O. F. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Charles Vanstrum and Miss Pearl Sauer, and two sons, W. A. and Henry Sauer, all of Minneapolis.

EXTRACT OF TOBACCO STEMS.

Kindly give the method of making tobacco extract for spraying, from tobacco stems, of which we have plenty. A. A. C.

For fifty gallons of water take a half-bushel of tobacco stems and allow them to soak ten hours. After pumping or dipping out the water, a second batch can generally be made without renewing the stems.

Peekskill, N. Y.—Mrs. J. D. Sherman opened a new flower store here December 9. This is the fourth retail establishment here, besides three greenhouses that grow plants and cut flowers.

...NEWS NOTES...

Plainfield, N. J.—Chas. L. Stanley says that the prevailing mild weather has produced lots of soft stock.

Raleigh, N. C.—The Raleigh Floral Co. has taken over the business formerly conducted by C. A. Lyle & Co.

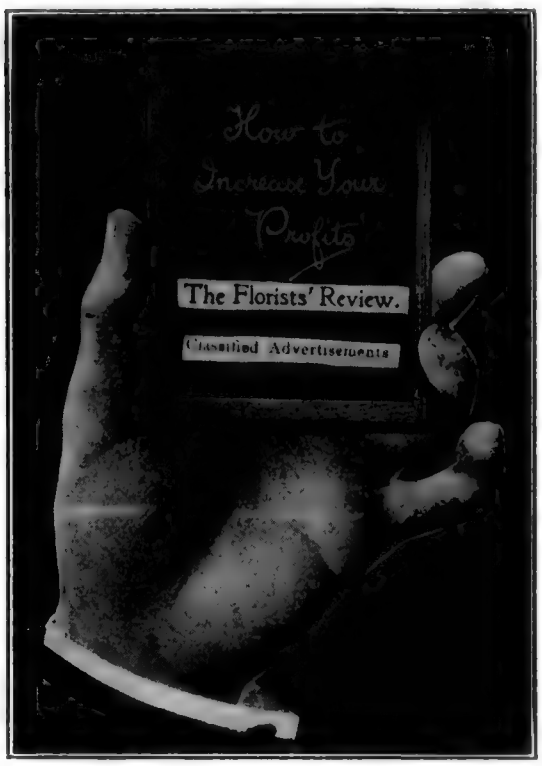
Montclair, N. J.—A. S. Wallace reports a busy season. He is a pioneer in the business here and has two branch stores.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—F. S. Weigand has erected two new houses, each 25x153 feet, and will devote them to roses and carnations.

Nashua, N. H.—A new greenhouse, 20x100, is being erected here for Mrs. Ella Churchill, who will grow cut flowers for the Boston market.

Dansville, N. Y.—The Allen Bailey Tag Co. has been incorporated here for the manufacture of florists' and gardeners' supplies, tags, labels, etc. The incorporators are J. J. Bailey, S. E. Allen and J. A. Bailey, and the capital stock is fixed at $60,000.

Englewood, N. J.—E. G. Burrows opened a fine new store here, early in the season, directly opposite the depot. Supplies are drawn from the greenhouses at Tenafly, where Mr. Burrows has for several years grown for the New York markets. Business is reported good.



Tipton, Ind.—F. A. Benthey, who formed a partnership here a few months ago with William Briscoe, has purchased Mr. Briscoe's interest and is now sole owner of the establishment. Including an addition just completed, Mr. Benthey now has 10,000 square feet under glass.

Shepard, O.—Leo Miller, who has earned a reputation as a successful grower of chrysanthemums, has had rather better stock than usual this year and is correspondingly well pleased with the season's business. All his stock is taken by the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus.

Irvington, Newark, N. J.—E. Jacobi is one of the largest growers of mushrooms in northern New Jersey. His experience this season is that the American spawn moves much more quickly than the imported article and also produces more heavily. The market has been steady for some time.

Summit, N. J.—The Colonial Flower Shop, being located in the best part of town, does a good business. Wm. Death, the hustling proprietor, finds the conservatory which was recently added the best investment yet made. Quite a range of glass is maintained on the outskirts of the town. A younger brother has recently arrived from England and will assist in the business.

Holyoke, Mass.—A new organization was recently formed here, to be known as the Florists' and Gardeners' Club. By-laws have been adopted and the following officers elected: President, Geo. H. Sinclair; vice-president, E. J. Canning; secretary and treasurer, F. L. Bartlett; executive committee, D. J. Gallivan, William Pickey and Reginald Carey. Meetings are to be held the first Tuesday of each month.

We both have them.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The way the sweet pea has jumped in favor beats anything heretofore known in the flower business. The production in the next few months will far exceed the supply of other years and everyone should take advantage of the fact to feature peas before the public. No question of good peas making a hit with the flower buyers.

EPIGRAMS FROM EVERGREEN.

M. E. McGraw is the manager of the Caldwell business at Evergreen, Ala., and has much of that keen insight into human nature that made The Woodsman famous. Among his latest epigrams are:

"There is one commodity not controlled by a trust—it is honesty."

"There is one commodity in which there is little competition—it is quality."

"The man who has quality for sale, and fairly and honestly tells his quality claims, will build for himself a name and a trade as enduring as time."

GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Gladiolus Society was held in New York city December 6, with the following members present: Arthur Cowee, A. T. Boddington, E. W. Fengar and I. S. Hendrickson.

The matter of a die and medals was taken up and discussed. It was finally decided to purchase a die and offer ten sets of medals the first year to as many local horticultural societies. It was thought best to offer a silver medal for first prize and a bronze medal for second prize, the ten sets of medals to cost $70.

The matter of a registration bureau was then taken up, and it was decided to combine this committee with that of the nomenclature committee, already established, with trial grounds at Ithaca, N. Y., where all tests can be made.

The matter of certificates of merit was then taken up, and it was the sense of the meeting that these certificates should be awarded only by the nomenclature committee, and not by judges appointed for the annual exhibition.

President Hendrickson has appointed Arthur Cowee and Professor Beal as members of the color chart committee.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW.

There always are two points of view, and usually both are interesting. The readers' point of view, according to the best publishing precedent, comes first:

The essential necessities of a florist's establishment are good stock, good pots, good soil, good heating, plenty of sunshine and The Review, so here is my dollar for 1912.—A. L. Miller, Brooklyn, N. Y., December 4, 1911.

Then there comes the advertisers' point of view, though you could guess that, with the readers feeling like Mr. Miller:

I shall have to ask you to take out my advertisement for geraniums, as all the cuttings and 2-inch stock are sold and I have orders booked ahead for all that I can root this season. I have had to return a great many orders and cash where I could not handle the orders. Also, the 4-inch Bostons are all sold.—D. R. Herron, Olean, N. Y., December 13, 1911.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Though in reality Christmas does not come until next week, the week ending December 16 generally was referred to as the week before Christmas. Comparisons with the week before Christmas last year are not favorable. The market was too heavily supplied with stock and with many the Killarneys were decidedly off color. At the same time the inclination was to hold up prices because of the approach of Christmas and the rather unusual spectacle was presented of some stock going to waste "the week before Christmas," White Killarney being the item that caused the most trouble.

This week things are different. At the opening of the week it might truly be said that "next week is Christmas" and the market began to take on the usual pre-holiday aspect. Monday, December 18, receipts were extremely light and it was difficult to fill orders for carnations. Prices were advancing and the Christmas level was well within sight. The run of mail orders Monday morning was said by many to have been the heaviest in their experience. Thursday, Friday and Saturday are the shipping days, December 22 having the bulk of the orders thus far received. There is an unusual disagreement as to what the latter part of the week will bring forth. Some able buyers believe that the experience of the last two years is to be repeated, at least in some measure, and quite a few wholesalers also are of the opinion that supplies generally will be adequate. These wholesalers expect to see enough Beauties and a fair supply of Richmond, with a shortage in red carnations, but they predict an oversupply of White Killarney and white carnations, with an abundance of Killarney and Enchantress carnations. On the other hand, some growers and wholesalers assert that the dark weather and snow in the last few days has completely upset the earlier calculations. They assert that the flowers are not on the plants and can not be cut, predicting that the market will strengthen as the week progresses, and that this Christmas will turn out to be quite a different Christmas from either of the last two.

There is general agreement that the orders did not come in so early this year as in other years; no great amount of business was booked prior to December 18. Practically everyone is looking for an exceptionally heavy run of late orders, believing that in the end the trade at retail will equal the best previous record and that the buyers who have not placed the usual orders will be compelled to wire during the last days for additional supplies.

Buyers out of town will do well to note that there is no mail to be had in Chicago Sundays, not even by going to the post-office for it. If orders can not be mailed to be sure of delivery December 23, for shipment December 24, use the telegraph or telephone, or put on special delivery stamps.

Various Notes.

Announcement is made of the withdrawal of Henry Wittbold from the George Wittbold Co. It is understood that Mr. Wittbold, whose headquarters at present are at Evanston, will continue in the business on his own account. The affairs of the corporation, and its management, will go ahead without change.

One of N. J. Wietor's proteges is Peter Morgen, who is now in business for himself at Huntingburg, Ind., and making a success as a Beauty grower. Mr. Morgen, whose place is illustrated in this issue, says Mr. Wietor gave him his start, taking him as a green hand.

At the opening of this week Vaughan & Sperry received a ton of red berries by express from California.

Tim Matchen says the run of mail orders for Christmas received December 18 was the heaviest in the history of Peter Reinberg's business.

Arthur Blom, who is buyer for Paul Blom, says he thinks no retailer has any cause for complaint on the market as it has been found thus far this season. Mr. Blom thinks he has bought better flowers for the same money, or the same flowers for less money than they cost last season.

Kyle & Foerster say that not all the rose growers are bringing everything into crop for Christmas and that the big scarcity of last year will not be repeated in January and February.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. says the dark weather of the last week has cost them much money through the inevitable injury to the quality of a good crop of short and medium Beauties.

The store of the A. L. Randall Co. was the scene last week of what was said to be the first bulb show ever held in America. It was by the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Growers' Association.

Zech & Mann say that their Christmas orders include an unusual number from new customers and that they also this week added a rose grower to their list of shippers.

South Water street is reported to be badly stuck on evergreen wreathing, the sale for which ceases several days before Christmas.

John Starrett is hanging a 36-inch or 48-inch double holly wreath with a big ribbon streamer in each of the street windows of the La Salle hotel this week.

John P. Risch is one of those who say last week's weather upset all Christmas calculations.

Klehm's Nurseries, Arlington Heights, has ordered an automatic electric pump for returning the condensation to its boilers. The apparatus is made by the American Well Works, Aurora, Ill., and replaces a Crane trap.

Bassett & Washburn said December 18 that the Christmas orders were running especially heavy on carnations.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says the flower business is an individual affair, a man's success in it depending on his ability to recognize and grasp an opportunity when it comes.

O. W. Frese reports that Christmas orders have come from several buyers who, he is sure, are new to this market.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says that violets have improved a great deal in the last few days, both local and eastern. He looks for no oversupply.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has not been able to move before the rush and now is figuring on getting into the new store shortly after New Year's.

Winterson's Seed Store is extremely busy this week with the retail trade in Christmas greens.

C. W. McKellar is showing a fine line of wreaths for Christmas.

George Reinberg's principal Christmas cut is White Killarney.

Pumps and engines will be added to the John C. Moninger line for the coming year. This will enable this company to furnish anything or everything that goes to make up a greenhouse establishment, including the building material, heating plant and water supply system.

Christmas stock is practically all cleaned out at Wittbold's Edgebrook plant, and in a number of cases they were obliged to buy from other growers to take care of their orders.

Visitors since last issue have included A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.; S. W. Pike, St. Charles, Ill.; H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee; E. S. Thompson, South Haven, Mich.; M. Rocklin, Sioux City, Ia.; Gust Rusch, Milwaukee.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was the usual before-Christmas, dull week in the cut flower market, only more so, because of the remarkably mild weather and the consequent increase in shipments of every kind. Ice-boxes and cellars were bulging with the surplus, which even a December Saturday was unable to relieve. Prices were on the down grade all the week and at times touched summer levels. The only consolation is that every year tells about the same story for a corresponding date. The new week opens with light shipments and nice, warm weather, splendid for the plantsmen, but ominous for the cut flower section.

The cut of American Beauties is large and the promised Christmas shipments will beat all records, the quality growing better as the cold increases. Prices can not be unreasonable, although they fell unreasonably low at times during the week just past. There will be a good demand for all the novelties in roses, and any price in reason may be asked with safety. The standard varieties of roses will have the usual reasonable advances. Carnations fell last week to half the Thanksgiving average, but will doubtless bring excellent returns to growers for the holidays. There are a good many varieties of orchids. Prices are reasonable and there is a wide demand from out of town. Lilies dropped to 6 cents and lower last week and 10 cents for Christmas is as high as anyone expects. Few will go above $1 a dozen, or $1.50 for callas. Gardenias are abundant and in many grades, the best firm at $4 to $5 a dozen. Violets were down to 50 cents last week, never above 75 cents, and this for the specials. The chrysanthemum has had its banner year, and is not yet hiding its light under a bushel. A goodly supply was obtainable all the week and they will last a while longer, not disappearing entirely until the advent of 1912.

There are lots of other flowers—sweet peas, hyacinths, poinsettias, pansies, and of stevia and Paper Whites a surplus that seems almost unclearable at any price, though doubtless everything will go for Christmas and plants and cut flowers will compete about equally for public patronage. There will be no more exclusively plant Christmases, now that the old days of great rises for roses, carnations, etc., are forever past. No one can reasonably complain at the fair levels maintained by the wholesale men in these later years.

The supply of holly, wreathing in laurel and pine, wreaths, wild smilax and mistletoe compares favorably with other years.

New York to Detroit.

F. H. Traendly, W. F. Sheridan and John Young issue the following announcement:

"The transportation committee appointed by the New York Florists' Club has made the following arrangements: Leave Grand Central station on the Wolverine, leaving at 5 p. m., arriving at Detroit at 7:15 next morning. Fare one way, $16. On a party ticket of ten or more the fare will be $13.25. Lower berths, $3.50; upper, $2.80; compartment, $10; drawing room, $13. Reservation of berths should be made by January 8 at latest. Tickets for transportation may be obtained on the train. All delegates from the east are invited to join our party. season. Everything in flower that is worth selling is already sold, and delivery is at its height. There has been considerable shipping, but the big city uses an enormous quantity. The quality of the azaleas, ardisias, poinsettias, oranges, etc., has never been excelled.

The event of special interest during this pre-holiday week will be the reunion of the gardeners Thursday afternoon and evening. All branches of floriculture will be represented. Much credit is due the committee, Messrs. Manda, Marshall and Donlon, for the thoroughness of the preparations.

A visit last week at the establishment of the Yonkers Nursery Co. revealed an enterprise, within street car distance of New York, that is already a credit to eastern horticulture and to its ambitious proprietor, Fred Smythe, of Wadley & Smythe. Robert Rennison is in charge of the nursery. Sixty acres are devoted to the business. Packing cellars, immense palm houses and every facility for handling the business are in evidence. Some of the palms are valued at $400 to $500 each. Mr. Smythe makes annual purchasing tours in Europe. A grand bank of the silver spruce attracts special attention. Great masses of rhododendrons on the side hill must be a glorious sight in the flowering season.

Not many miles distant, between White Plains and Tarrytown, one is attracted by a range of greenhouses and a fine nursery in embryo. The Scott brothers are proprietors of a 30-acre tract, one-third of which can be disposed of any day for the original cost, leaving as velvet twenty acres of splendid nursery soil in the heart of as fine a suburban section as can be found within a 20-mile radius of the metropolis. In the greenhouses are grown the new varieties of roses and carnations, all absorbed in the neighborhood by the retail trade, and an abundance of rooted cuttings for the wholesale demand. Fine homes have been built, immense plantings of nursery stock have been made and a bright future for this enterprise seems assured.

Distinguished visitors to New York last week were Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich.; E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and J. K. Farquhar, of Boston, the latter gentleman giving one of his interesting travelogues before the Horticultural Society of New York Saturday afternoon.

The trade was shocked on Monday morning by the announcement of the accidental death of Mr. Lord, of the Lord & Burnham Co., at his residence in Irvington. He had evidently been crushed without warning, as he was found in his garage and had been dead several hours when the accident was discovered.

The seedsmen are, many of them, handling holly and Christmas plants, some of them doing a big retail trade in lower New York. After New Year's all the big houses will have their representatives hustling.

Woodrow & Marketos say shipping orders for plants have been ahead of expectations.

overwhelmed with orders. "By far the best season ever known," is the universal verdict.

The promise for a record Christmas in Brooklyn is bright. The Brooklyn wholesalers are all cheerful. There are two million flower lovers in Brooklyn. PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market this week may be compared to a great ocean liner at sea: the tremendous height of the billows is increased by the fearful depths before and after. The Christmas wave of business activity soon to come was preceded by a week of dullness, with business in a most unsatisfactory condition. Irregular shipments, and shipments of flowers that bear evidence of an unsuccessful attempt to hold them for the holidays, increase the troubles of the salesmen, who find it difficult to induce buyers to take good flowers at fair prices. It is practically impossible to make them take overripe stock at any price. Under these conditions prices fluctuate. The volume of business was not equal to the week before. There was heavy trading in greens, particularly boxwood.

Roses are abundant and, generally speaking, of excellent quality; with Paper Whites and violets they form the most serious condition for the wholesalers. Carnations are perhaps the strongest factor in a weak market, due quite as much to the omission of shipments as to the strength of the demand. There is a fair amount of shipping to help the rather moderate local demand to form the total of business of the quietest week since the opening of the social season.

Christmas Conditions.

I am not sure whether the changes that are so rapidly coming over the Christmas market are generally understood. To those who understand them, a word of apology; to those who do not, these statements of fact may be of interest.

The demand for something bright and pretty or for something fresh and green is steadily increasing each Christmas. This demand is subject to changes, due to taste or to inability to secure what is wanted at the desired price. The difficulty in supplying this demand with cut flowers, ordinarily preferred for Christmas gifts, has broadened the field of plants and of florists' supplies. The improved varieties of both blooming and foliage plants, and the improvement in their culture, have created a greater advance in the demand for plants than for either cut flowers or supplies. The prices realized for the plants are as good as they have ever been before, if not better; the prices for flowers do not average so high. Really fancy blooms realize almost if not quite as much as they ever did before, but blooms that are not really fancy are sold at lower prices in the lower classes. The advantage that plants have over cut flowers is that the buyer can see exactly what he is going to get in advance, and can show this in turn to his customer. The disadvantage lies in the greater expense of handling in cold weather. It is probable that the more moderate price of cut flowers at Christmas is a decided advantage, because it brings them within reach of a much larger number of buyers. An interesting fact in connection with these changes is that many of the leading growers, particularly of roses, have ceased to crop for Christmas, finding that the depression that precedes and succeeds the holiday, when the market is so heavily loaded with stock, more than offsets the higher Christmas prices.

Various Notes.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, last week sent a fine bunch of St. Nicholas, their new crimson red carnation, to S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. The blooms were large and handsome, attracting attention by their showy appearance.

Fire destroyed the boiler and potting-shed, two houses and much valuable stock at the Thaddeus N. Yates & Co. greenhouses, Mt. Airy, Sunday, December 17, at 6 a. m. The fire is believed to have originated from a carelessly thrown match. The fire companies responded immediately, and saved the other buildings, but, unfortunately, destroyed many plants with their chemicals. Mr. Yates estimated his firm's loss as follows: Boiler-shed and greenhouses, about $3,000, eighty per cent covered by insurance; stock, not covered by insurance, 200 rhododendrons, 200 azaleas for Christmas, 2,000 table ferns and 25,000 nice geraniums. Great sympathy is felt for Walter Yates, whose enterprise has pushed the firm into business prominence. Plans are under way for rebuilding. The boilers were not damaged.

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall on the evening of December 19. Plans were discussed for the coming exhibitions and officers were elected for 1912.

Robert A. Craig says that the demand for Christmas plants exceeds that of any previous year.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report the following visitors: William Feast, Edwin A. Seidewitz and J. Dan Blackistone, Baltimore; Charles Schmidt, Harrisburg, Pa.; John Ratcliffe, Richmond, Va.; A. B. Ellsworth and Ernest Ashley, Allentown, Pa.; G. C. Boyd, Wilmington, Del. Two steamers arriving MARKET ST. PHILA.

December 18, bringing consignments of moss wreaths and other Christmas goods, were unloaded with lightning-like dispatch and their contents sent flying all over the country.

Robert Shoch, with M. Rice & Co., has returned from trips down east and to Baltimore and Washington. Mr. Shoch comments on brisk business and winter plowing at Dover, N. H., a sight not often seen in December. His firm reports visitors too numerous to mention; tremendous demand for everything red or anything that looks like it and a lively December. Arthur Zirkman has also returned, in happy vein, to the fold. Phil.

Clarence Alwine, of Aldan, is sending fine radishes to market. He grows them between his sweet peas. Fine prices are obtained and the demand is more than he can supply.

LANCASTER, PA.

The florists of Lancaster city and county, to the number of some fifty, have started a Florists' Coöperative Association at the call of Albert M. Herr. Coöperative buying and coöperative selling, along with some cultural talks and better business methods, are the objects to be attained and the first regular meeting will be held January 18, with carnations the main topic. Introducers who wish to send some flowers for this meeting should address in care of H. A. Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

The market last week was good in all lines and stock of all kinds cleaned up well. Monday, December 18, brought a nice supply of roses and carnations, which were sold out in a hurry. Not much business had been looked for in cut flowers, but orders came along, as most of the dealers were cleaned up Saturday, and before many hours the retailers found that stock of all kinds was scarce. The wholesalers had to get after the growers to get some stock down on the late express to help out.

There is an unusually large amount of boxwood and red ruscus being worked up into wreaths and all hands in the stores are busy getting a stock ahead for the rush. Red immortelles are selling well and statice is being used to good advantage. The retailers are much alive here and all are trying their best to get all out of the holiday business that they possibly can.

Cut flowers will be in good supply for Christmas, as there will be a good cut of roses and carnations, and poinsettias are to be had in quantity, as are violets, valley, sweet peas, etc. There will be no shortage on anything excepting red carnations, Beauties and red roses.

Various Notes.

Robt. Jean, of the Scribner Floral Co., has his two autos busy all the time these days picking up stock and delivering his orders. He has one rig on the pick-up and the other looks after his large deliveries.

Louis Charvat is thinking about ordering a Ford delivery car to use in connection with his rapidly growing business.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market was in fairly good condition last week. There was not a great amount of stock coming in, but there was about enough to cover the demand for the local trade, which was not so brisk as they would like to see it. Of course a great deal of business is expected the latter part of this week and preparations have been made for the rush by all of the leading retailers.

The wholesalers are reluctant to predict the amount of stock that they expect and say that both supply and prices will depend upon the weather. The prices during the week were not too high, the best grade in carnations bringing 4 cents, with a good demand. Good red were scarce, but there were plenty of white and Enchantress.

Roses seem plentiful in all grades, with 10 cents as top price for fancy stock. Beauties are scarce, while violets have been plentiful all the week and in good demand at from 40 to 75 cents per hundred in small lots. Should the weather be clear during this week, these will be plentiful by Saturday and Sunday.

There was quite a glut in Paper Whites last week and they sold as low as $2 per hundred in small lots. Romans were also plentiful. Valley and lilies held their own as to price and demand. From the looks of the retailers' show houses, a great sale on plants of all kinds is expected.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, December 14, with a splendid attendance. Much enthusiasm prevailed and the afternoon was most enjoyable.

Thomas Carroll, one of the first carnation growers in this vicinity, visited the club after an absence of ten years. Some years ago Mr. Carroll became blind, and his old friends were so glad to see him again that they got together and made him a Christmas present of $15.

Wm. F. Nichol, of the St. Louis Seed Co., and A. G. Butterfield, of Farmington, Mo., were elected to membership.

Baur & Steinkamp exhibited a fine vase of their new carnation, St. Nicholas, and a committee consisting of Messrs. Ammann, Fillmore and Schneider recommended it as a "red carnation of good color and stem, and a good commercial variety." W. F. Widmer, of Highland, Ill., showed a well grown plant of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Out-of-town members present were: J. F. Ammann, M. F. Widmer, E. W. Guy, John Connon, W. E. Ogle, Hugo Werner, Perrie Schneider, W. A. Rowe and George Hecht.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held a pleasant meeting Monday evening, December 11. The attendance was quite large. A credit system was talked of and a committee appointed to report at the next meeting. A general talk on Christmas business wound up the affairs of the evening.

Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, was with us all last week.

Advr. No. 1516.

Mrs. Fred H. Meinhardt, who has been seriously ill for the last ten days, is reported out of danger and will soon be up and about again.

Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill., made quite a large shipment of cyclamen and azaleas to the trade here and they arrived in splendid shape.

At a recent meeting of the executive board of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, it was learned that the loss of the last show would reach $1,500, and that the chances for a show next year are decidedly slim.

Otto Sander, who came into possession of the vase of St. Nicholas carnations after the meeting, claimed that they looked much better the next day and says he thinks it is one of the best reds for the retail trade. Mr. Sander has a most attractive Christmas window decoration.

George Waldbart's place on Grand avenue last week had one of the grandest poinsettia plant displays ever seen here. Mr. Waldbart says he expects a large business for Christmas.

C. A. Kuehn's new store is fast shaping itself and at the opening, December 13, the visiting trade who had not seen it were all surprised at the admirable arrangements and conveniences for the buyers.

President Robert J. Windler, of the Florists' Club, says that after New Year's he will call an officers' meeting and lay out a program of essays and discussions for each meeting till the end of his term in August.

Fred H. Weber and the Ellison Floral Co. say they had quite a good deal of party work and dinners during last week and are looking for a big rush of business for this week. J. J. B.

FORMALDEHYDE FOR STERILIZING

Can you advise me as to sterilizing a solid bed with formaldehyde? What quantity would be necessary for a bed 15x75 feet, and how soon after sterilizing would it be safe to plant lettuce plants? I use hot water heat and so cannot sterilize with steam. A. M. S.

Use one quart of formaldehyde to fifty gallons of water. Put it on with a sprinkling can, and do it slowly, so it will soak in deeply. I would advise spading up the soil first, so as to have it all ready to plant. Probably two quarts will answer your purpose. I would not put the plants in until next day, when the fumes are all out of the house. H. G.

TOMATO BLOOMS DROP OFF.

You will find enclosed a spray of my tomatoes. Please tell me what is wrong with them. What causes the blooms and buds to drop off as they do? In clear weather I keep a temperature of 71 to 72 degrees, with air on, and at night I run it at 60 to 62 degrees. In cloudy weather the day temperature is about 68 degrees, with air on. I smoke with tobacco stems. For a short time back I have noticed some thrips in the house and have given a medium strong smoking about every other night. My soil was mixed as usual for tomatoes and they are kept a little on the wet side. I hope you can state the cause and remedy at the earliest possible date.

M. E. A.

The tomato blooms were moldy when received, but they may not have been so when sent. They will often decay and rot off if they are wet in watering the plants in the short days in winter.

It is, however, more likely that the blooms are not fertilized or pollinated, as that is the cause in most instances. Go over your plants every day about noon, the hottest, driest time of the day, and tap each stalk several times with a little stick which has cloth wound around it, to prevent injury to the stalk. Give them several sharp taps near the blooms and you will plainly see the pollen falling from the blooms. Much of the falling pollen will drop on the protruding points and the blooms will thus be fertilized. Some growers use a camel's-hair brush, also, to touch each bloom, dipping the brush in a spoon which is held under the blossoms when shaken, to catch some of the pollen. This method is surer, but I have never found it necessary, if the simple tapping is followed as it should be each day. In the tomato both sexes are in the same blooms, so every one should make a fruit if fertilized.

Your temperature is good, but you cannot get the thrips with tobacco stems and may injure the blooms with the smoke, if it is too heavy. Nicotine extract, put on the pipes, will bring down the thrips better than anything else I know of. Do not wet the foliage when watering. H. G.

SEFTON FLORISTS' BOXES

CORRUGATED DESIGN STYLE AND FOLDING CUT FLOWER BOXES

Florists' success in shipping flowers depends to the greatest extent upon the point where their interest ceases in the sale of flowers. The progressive, prosperous florist retains his interest in a customer's order until it reaches destination, and for that reason he is careful to select the proper style and grade of box to insure safe delivery of his flowers.

Particular Florists are users of Sefton Corrugated Fibreboard Boxes for the shipment of Floral Designs as well as our superior line of Folding Cut Flower Boxes. They know from experience that Sefton Boxes combine high quality with low price and make neat, attractive packages which carry the flowers safely to destination. Write for our Flower Box Price List.

Attica, N. Y.—Anton J. Pauly reports that he will add 16,000 square feet of glass next spring, making a total of 42,000 square feet. Carnations are his specialty, but the new addition will be used for mums and sweet peas.

Nyack, N. Y.—De Pew Bros. grow large quantities of asparagus and smilax and are considered headquarters in this locality for greens. They say these items compare favorably in profits with carnations occupying the same space.

Seven Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Preparations for Christmas are completed and a big trade is looked for. While business has not been up to former years for the last two months, it is hoped that the Christmas trade will be up to expectations. The recent cloudy weather will cause a shortage in the market, especially on carnations, which will not be more than enough to go around. The best grades are expected to bring from $7 to $10 wholesale. Roses will be in better supply, Brides and Maids bringing $15 to $20 and Killarney, Richmond and My Maryland, $20 to $25. Beauties have suffered considerably from the cloudy weather, the better grades coming only in the long-stemmed ones, which wholesale at $12 per dozen.

Poinsettias are plentiful, ranging from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Paper White narcissi are quoted at $3 to $4 per hundred, and Easter and calla lilies go at $10 to $12.50 per hundred. Sweet peas are a little short at $1 per hundred. The orchid crop is a little limited, good blooms bringing $12 per dozen, but valley, lilies and violets are plentiful. In pot plants there is the usual lot of azaleas, cyclamen, poinsettias, Lorraine begonias, primulas, hyacinths, etc.

Various Notes.

H. W. Rieman has a lot of Proserpine tulips for the Christmas trade. He is

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First VicePres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE onion set market is quiet, as it usually is at this season, but prices are steady.

BURPEE'S general catalogue, the thirty-sixth Farm Annual, reached The Review December 18.

THE first of the 1912 general seed catalogues to arrive from the Pacific coast houses was that of C. C. Morse & Co., which was in the mail of December 13.

INCORPORATED:—The Peninsular Seed Co., Port Huron, Mich., capital $40,000; the Scott County Good Seed Association, St. Paul, Minn., the latter planning to hold an annual fair at Gordon, Minn., and having Henry Arens, J. G. Nachbar, J. E. Casey and John Krautkremer as incorporators.

THE L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis., issues what is called an advance edition of its catalogue, made up principally for the southern trade. It contains the vegetable and flower seed pages just as they appear in the regular catalogue, without the field seed and potato pages. The advance edition reached The Review December 19. The regular edition will be out about January 15. The front page carries a portrait of Mr. Olds. This is the twenty-fifth annual edition.

COMMERCE IN SEEDS.

Following is the record of the imports and exports of seeds in the month of October, 1911, with comparisons with the same month in 1910:

IMPORTS.

October, 1911	$ 874,374
October, 1910	1,817,685

EXPORTS.

October, 1911	$ 398,101
October, 1910	249,435

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending December 9 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Anise	41	$ 1559	Fenugreek	250	$ 1037
Canary	863	2524	Grass	511	5712
Caraway	537	3680	Hemp	250	977
Cardamom	2	106	Millet	5933	12237
Castor	2766	11269	Mustard	200	2025
Clover	4020	142581	Poppy	1007	9021
Coriander	1443	4446	Rape	100	617
Cummin	234	2142	Sugar beet		24228
Fennel	30	955	Other		28645

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $86,898.

AT GREEN BAY.

A new addition to the seed warehouse for the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., says the Green Bay Gazette, was built at a cost of about $12,000. This addition is 60 x 100 feet in size. Bins for about eighty or ninety pickers have been added. The sidetrack has been extended along the front of the addition, so that three or four cars of seeds may be loaded or unloaded at one time. A new automatic electrical elevator will be installed in the new addition, which with the old one will make the handling of seeds between floors much easier. A great deal of the seed which has been kept in other places will now be stored in Green Bay for cleaning and shipping purposes.

GRONINGEN A SEED CENTER.

Just as Essex and Lincolnshire are the seed growing districts of England, says a correspondent of one of the British trade papers, the province of Groningen will, in a few years, be the seed garden of Holland. When we look back for a period of only ten to twelve years, seed growing was limited to a few small gardeners around Winschoten, who were growing some acres of mangels, carrots, kale and other seeds for the seed merchants in Enkhuizen and Zwyndrecht.

How different now! Hundreds and thousands of acres of all kinds of vegetable and agricultural crops are standing for seed saving, supplanting the old crops upon the farms. Whereas seed growing in this district a few years ago was located in one or two places, now it is practiced by many farmers throughout the province, most of them growing on contract at a fixed price. There are scarcely any Dutch wholesale seed growers who have not seed crops in Groningen, and it would be difficult to find in this country any other district with such great variety of soils as we have in a limited area, comprising the heaviest clay to poor, sandy soil.

As Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, place a large portion of their contract orders in this district, they are intending to arrange a seed warehouse at Winschoten, so that they may clean the crops direct from the farms. This arrangement has become necessary, as farmers rarely deliver their harvested seed crops without needing recleaning. The correspondent believes if Sluis & Groot establish a branch of their business in this district, seed growing will make still greater development in the future, and other firms will follow and establish their business in the midst of the growing seed crops.

CALIFORNIA SWEET PEAS.

In the catalogue of an English seedsman George W. Kerr, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., found such aspersions cast upon California grown sweet pea seed that he was moved to write a long letter to the editor of a British trade paper. What he had to say of the quality of certain seeds sent out by the publisher whose catalogue aroused his ire is not of special interest, but what he said of California seed is worth reprinting:

"The introduction contains some rather sweeping assertions, some of these apparently being directed against the stocks of other sweet pea specialists, but the first to hold my attention was the following statement: 'The public grown sweet pea seed was better than well-grown English seed, but it is clear that the writer of the above has no earthly idea of the seed growing conditions of California, or such a statement would never have been made, for, as a matter of fact, the conditions there are ideal for the production of perfect seed, and as the temperature is equable, neither too hot nor too cold, the resulting crops are unsurpassed, having the highest germinating qualities and being full of vigor. The seed is planted during February, the temperature at that time and during the earlier stages of growth ranging from 40 degrees to 50 degrees, while during the summer and ripening period it seldom goes above 75 to 80 degrees. As a rule there are no rains after April, but during July and August heavy fogs come in from the sea each night, thus supplying all the moisture required for the growth of the plant and also preventing the pods from bursting and ripening prematurely. As regards the soil, it is questionable if it has its equal in the world, the depth of virgin soil in some localities being hard to determine, and as no artificial fertilizer of any description is used the sweet pea in California develops a natural growth, never being forced by stimulants, the results being that disease is practically unknown."

The French pronunciation for baggage sounds just like "by-gosh"—and since the French language is supposed to be the most beautiful, we see no reason why we should not say, "By-gosh, Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are the finest in the world." And so they are—more care and hard work is devoted to them than to any other brand known. From the selection of seed-bulblets to harvesting, nothing is left undone to promote quality. Naturally, it costs a little more to do it so good, but not one bit more than the goods are worth. Nothing better in the world in lily bulbs.

Wait for the Horseshoe Brand Man.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6- 7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case,	$15.00 per case;	full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7- 9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case,	16.00 per case;	full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case,	18.00 per case;	full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots	$0.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants	$1.00 to 1.50 each

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

A CO-OPERATIVE nursery is being planned at Lovell, Wyo.

ADAIR & SWAN is the name of a new nursery firm at Havelock, Neb.

THE Winfield Nursery Co., of Winfield, Kan., is now occupying new offices in the A. O. U. W. building.

OSCAR P. NICHOLS, for forty years president of the Davenport Nurseries Co., died at Davenport, Iowa, December 15, aged 82.

A CONTRACT for $3,656 worth of trees and shrubs for the state capitol at Madison, Wis., has been awarded to Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, N. Y.

CITRUS MEN MEET.

A called meeting of the Gulf Coast Nurserymen's Association was held in the rooms of the Citrus Club at Houston, Tex., December 9. The meeting was attended by the majority of the leading nurserymen of the coast country. Reports were made from every section of the orange and fig growing belt regarding the extent of the damage done by the freeze of November 30. After receiving many verbal reports and letters from the members of the association, the following official statement to the public was issued:

Reports from throughout the coast country indicate that all citrus groves three years of age and over, as well as fig orchards, were practically uninjured by the recent cold spell. Damage to younger orchards and to nursery stock has not yet been fully ascertained.

W. A. Stockwell, President.
I. M. Johnson, Secretary.

The consensus of opinion, as stated by the president and secretary of the association, that the older orange and fig trees went through the freeze without injury, is certainly encouraging, and shows the wonderful cold-resisting power of the Satsuma orange and the Magnolia fig. That the nursery stock is injured is no wonder, as the temperature fell to 20 degrees at a season before this stock had fully ripened its wood.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The Western Association of Nurserymen held its twenty-second meeting at Kansas City December 13 and 14, with an attendance of about fifty members. There was the usual program of talks on trade subjects, one of the great points of value in the association being the thoroughness with which it keeps its members informed of trade and crop conditions in the territory from which the membership is drawn. The national aspect also comes in for consideration and the federal quarantine bill got the same treatment that is accorded to it wherever nurserymen get together. A protest was framed against placing the very life of the nursery trade in the hands of any single department official at Washington.

Officers were elected as follows: President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; vice-president, F. A. Weber, St. Louis; secretary-treasurer, E. J. Holman, Leavenworth, Kan.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week was a busy one in supplies and greens. The wholesalers were rushed continually to get their orders out on time. Boxwood is proving more popular than heretofore, while other greens and decorative material are holding their own. More crimped wire rings for holly wreaths are being utilized than heretofore.

The cut flower market started this week with an active demand in almost all lines. The entire preceding week, on the other hand, was listless. The offerings were only ordinary in size and the demand as a whole was even less. Cloudy weather during that time has also given the growers a rough road to travel for the holidays. Even at that there promises to be more stock available than in other years, when the wholesalers always ran short of the call.

The rose cut promises to be good in all varieties except, perhaps, American Beauties. They seem to be shortening considerably and at the time of this writing are less in quantity than could easily be used. Carnations are coming in better each day. There will apparently be a goodly supply of colored ones for the holiday trade. Poinsettias seem to be at their best this year. Most of the bracts offered so far have been choice ones and if reports are accurate there are many more of a similar kind awaiting the grower's knife to start them into the market. Advance orders for them are large.

This week other lines began to grow active. The supply of lilies is normal and prices have found higher levels. Many good callas are included in the offerings. The demand for orchids, valley and double and single violets is so good that they are cleaning up quickly. Narcissi are dragging.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell finds a heavy call for poinsettias for the holiday week.

P. J. Olinger went to the greenhouses at New Castle December 15 to figure his prospective cut for the holidays.

L. H. Kyrk has for the last fortnight been offering a variety of double stevia that has made a hit with the buyers.

Wm. Murphy has been "shooting" large numbers of boxes to his out-of-town customers.

J. L. Mulford, of Lebanon, O., was killed December 10, when a stone wall fell and crushed him.

Clarence J. Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Fla., has been shipping excellent plumosus to E. G. Gillett.

The cut flower department of the J. M. McCullough Sons' Co. reports a strong demand for Killarney and carnations.

Geo. Magrie has easily disposed of a carload of holly.

J. T. Conger, the Hartwell florist, has an elegant house of Nonin chrysanthemums that are a clever ad, for passengers on the cars that pass his plant can see them easily.

Callers: Louis D. Singer, Lexington, Ky.; O. C. Heberling, Georgetown, O.; Mr. Anderson, the nephew of Fennel the orchid man at Cynthiana, Ky.; Charles Weltz, Wilmington, O.; John Evans, Richmond, Ind., and Chas. Dietrich, Maysville, Ky. C. H. H.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Everybody is waiting for the big rush that is sure to come Saturday, Sunday and Christmas day. Some large orders are being placed for cut flowers, but the big business this year is expected on plants. A week will tell the results. All retailers are stocking up heavily with all kinds of pot plants, such as azaleas, heaths, poinsettias, ardisias, etc. This stock is firm in nearly all cases.

Henry Heepe, of Akron, O., has been in the city buying Christmas stock.

F. M. Swanger, of New London, O., and Mr. Huscroft, of Steubenville, O., were recent visitors. F. A. F.

PACIFIC COAST.

Those on the Pacific coast will take special interest in the illustrations on another page of this issue, showing the store of the Hollywood Gardens, of Seattle, during the recent opening.

Ventura, Cal.—Mrs. E. E. Paquette is establishing a new flower store at 1118 Poli street.

Seattle, Wash.—The Seattle Landscape & Nursery Co. is building a greenhouse at 1255 North Broadway.

Stevenson, Wash.—W. T. Jackson won a silver medal for a fruit exhibit at the fourth national apple show recently held in Spokane.

The Dalles, Ore.—The Tackman Greenhouses have been purchased by a Mr. Gibson, who will conduct the establishment under the old name and will also make arrangements for an enlargement of the business.

Spokane, Wash.—Henry E. Reimers, of the Sunny Slope Greenhouses, has embarked in the retail business by taking over the store of Miss M. Armstrong, at 807 Riverside avenue. He will conduct the store under the name of M. Armstrong & Co.

Olympia, Wash.—C. Klam, proprietor of the Capital City Nursery & Greenhouses, says business has been fairly good this season, but not quite up to some other years. He reports great success in growing Gov. Herrick violets and likes them better than the Princess of Wales.

Elmhurst, Cal.—L. G. Gardner is building two more houses, each 28x200. On account of the annexation of this town to Oakland, the addresses of the residents have been changed in the official records. Mr. Gardner's new address, for instance, is 8403 B street, Station G, Oakland.

The Market.

With Thanksgiving over, the growers are now looking forward to the Christmas trade. Everyone seems well pleased with his share of the Thanksgiving trade, and business seemed, if anything, better than in previous years. While the stock was of excellent quality, with a good supply, there was no surplus.

Carnations are now of first-class quality and seem about equal to the demand, while roses are scarce and of a poor grade. California violets are more plentiful and are arriving in good condition. There will be few, if any, Christmas lilies and it looks now as if poinsettias would be scarce also. Many of the azalea shipments came through in bad condition, owing to the cold weather encountered while en route.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting on Thursday night, December 7. Much important business came before the club and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Henry Benthien; vice-president, A. G. Seamons; secretary, Fred Smith; treasurer, A. A. Hinz; trustee, Louis F. Tschunko.

A report of the last meeting of the club bowling team will be found on another page, under the head of "Bowling." J. L. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Everything is in Christmas array and all that is left for the final rush is trimming and arranging basket effects. Poinsettias are certainly the predominating flower of the season. The demand for red roses and carnations usually exceeds the supply, so all stock is being carefully looked after. Basket arrangements and fancy fern dishes are in great demand, the window displays being the best evidence of their popularity.

Holly is scarce, and the retailers get $1 per pound for the berried varieties, while the wreaths go at from $1 to $3 each. Beautifully arranged baskets and wreaths of ruscus have also proved good sellers; the brilliancy appeals to the artistic taste. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has been uncomfortably warm for several days, with a dry north wind blowing, plenty of dust on the city streets and everything quite the reverse of what it should be in the middle of winter. This portion of California is badly in need of rain and nothing less than a few good, heavy showers will restore general confidence and cause the florists, along with all other trades, to get their share of the money which would be spent with considerable prodigality if a few showers started the ball rolling.

Flowers of all kinds are not overplentiful, nor are they high priced or in as great demand as we should like to see them. When Christmas was only ten days away, the price of carnations was only from 30 to 50 cents per dozen, with almost any quantity in sight. Roses, with the possible exception of some fancy stock, were selling at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. These prices are fully twenty-five per cent less than they were one year ago, and the stock does not move so fast. Violets are good and are about the best selling flower. Orchids are more plentiful, but valley is scarcer. Other lines of stock do not show any material change.

Various Notes.

Otto Saakes, of Los Angeles, has departed for his home town after a short visit spent here.

Walter Edgington is no longer connected with J. A. Carbone, the West Berkeley orchid grower.

Fred S. Higgins is back with the Hackel Floral Co., on Powell street, after an absence from town of several months.

Chas. Bagnall is located with Clarke Bros., in their Oakland store.

T. R. Mansell, formerly connected with the horticultural department of the University of California, is on a six months' trip to England.

Carl Purdy, of Ukiah, Cal., is in town.

A visit to the new range of glass recently erected by the H. M. Sanborn Co. at Berkeley showed plenty of thrifty roses and a good cutting in sight for the holidays. G.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

Business generally, following the Thanksgiving spurt, has been quiet. A lot of fine chrysanthemums are still coming in and indications point to a fair supply for Christmas. Good carnations are meeting with a constant demand. The mild, dull weather is causing rather soft stock, and splits are more in evidence than at any time this season. Paper Whites and Romans are arriving in good shape, but as yet the demand is hardly equal to the supply. California violets are selling well among those who like this class of stock. Christmas trees and greens are, as usual, blocking up vacant lots.

Various Notes.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided to give three prizes, of $10, $5 and $3, respectively, for the best design for a florists' float, to be used in next season's Potlatch parade, competition in this design to be open to the world.

At the establishment of the Washington Floral Co., conducted by Mrs. L. W. McCoy, Joe Chalmers, the manager, has a splendid lot of poinsettias. They are preparing to meet a large Christmas demand.

L. P. Walz reports that orders for English holly are coming in. He has secured a good supply of the imported article. Locally, there is not quite the usual supply of berries on the trees.

J. J. Bonnell has just finished unloading five carloads of imported evergreens, roses, etc., from Europe. He pronounces the nursery business good and is rapidly filling up his new grounds at Kirkland, across Lake Washington.

The Burdett Floral Co. had a pretty display of Romans at their store on First avenue and Denny way last week. A massed effect in one window was especially effective.

John Holze, of the Queen City Floral Co., is sadly missing his "better half," who is away in the east, seeing her friends.

John Sahle, at Brighton, has a brother from the east visiting him at present. They made a little trip to Vancouver last week and report favorably of conditions there. T. W.

THE NEW YELLOW FORCING ROSE SUNBURST

This magnificent, giant yellow rose has been tested for three years in our benches; it stands head and shoulders above all other sorts of its color and will rank with American Beauty and the Killarneys in value and grandeur—because

It has a long, pointed bud, which can be cut tight for market. It is pre-eminently a long-stemmed rose. The stem is always stiff. It is free in bottom breaks. Is extraordinarily vigorous and healthy. Belongs in the class of Big Roses. Its keeping qualities rank with the best. Buds shipped from Richmond last December opened up perfectly in both Philadelphia and New York, where it scored 90 before the Florists' Club.

The color is orange-copper or golden orange and golden yellow, all intense shades, extremely brilliant in effect.

Come and see it growing; we have 8,000 of it benched.

Does splendidly out of doors; will rank high as a bedder. At the Chicago show, 1910, it was awarded the silver cup for the best new rose never before exhibited, and the judges unanimously gave it honorable mention additional. Has created a sensation wherever shown.

Raised by M. Pernet-Ducher, from whom we bought the American rights.

We have divided our stock with Mr. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., to give eastern growers a chance to see it growing. Will be distributed March 1 in America by C. H. Totty and The E. G. Hill Co. Mr. Pernet will distribute same date in Europe.

The American price is $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000 (own roots); $5.00 per 100 additional for grafts

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall Wednesday afternoon, December 13. President Trepess occupied the chair and there was a good attendance. Joseph Adler, James McCarthy and William Vert were elected to active membership and there was also one application.

There was keen competition for the gold medal offered by Felix Mense, for 100 violets. The winner was A. McKenzie, who also won the society's prizes for carnations, pink and white. Joseph Robinson received a cultural certificate for poinsettias. James McDonald received honorable mention for Enchantress carnations, Herman Boettcher for six heads of lettuce and M. Bosworth for American Wonder lemon. J. McQueen, J. Holloway and E. A. Reidenbach acted as judges.

A letter was read from Elmer D. Smith, offering a prize of $10 for six blooms of Artistic Queen chrysanthemums for the 1912 show. Treasurer Ernest Brown read his annual report, which showed that the society had experienced a prosperous year and that there was a good balance. It was decided to hold, if possible, the annual dinner January 25. J. Holloway offered a prize of $5, to be competed for at the next meeting, for twenty-five carnations, mixed. The exhibits for the society's prize in January will be for a vase of six spikes of antirrhinum, twenty-five sprays of sweet peas and one pot of cyclamen. E. W.

Kutztown, Pa.—Fred N. Baer has had exceptional success this season with Chadwick and Golden Chadwick chrysanthemums and has a souvenir postal, showing a lady and some of the blooms, that he sends to his friends. He tells them that the mums are Chadwicks, but leaves them to guess who the lady is.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Although the weather is unseasonable and the Christmas trade is still light, there were a few social functions and funerals which kept the trade busy last week. The mild weather has its advantages, however. It is less work to wrap plants and flowers and the growers are saving coal these days. The warm spell this week does not affect the price of flowers a great deal, for carnations and roses have gone up once more, as a preliminary advance before the holidays. Holly wreaths, wreaths of pine and laurel and all kinds of wreathing are selling best now.

Roses are in fine condition for Christmas. Killarney is selling best of any. Mrs. Ward is coming into market in much better condition, but the supply is nowhere equal to the demand. There are a few Bon Silene to be had. Richmond is much in demand. Radiance is scarce, but Antoine Rivoire is quite plentiful and in excellent condition. Carnations are abundant. Enchantress, Delight and Perfection are the best sellers. Chrysanthemums are still with us, but are poor in quality. Paper Whites, Stevia, Romans and valley are all abundant. Gardenias are at their best at present and go at a good price. Cattleyas are in demand and are again plentiful. Sweet peas and mignonette are coming in small quantities.

We are anticipating a big sale of fancy baskets of assorted plants for Christmas. Ardisias are much sought after this season, and the price is higher than usual. Everything points to a big holiday trade and there are numerous large orders booked for holiday parties, dinners, weddings and receptions.

Various Notes.

Ellwanger & Barry were awarded a contract by the capitol commission of Madison, Wis., for $3,656 worth of trees, shrubs and evergreens for the capitol grounds, to be delivered next spring.

J. B. Keller Sons have disposed of their old delivery auto and purchased a new Ford machine.

Mrs. Edwin Wilson has joined the bowling club.

The decorations in greens, wreathing and holiday dress for the various business houses have been unusually abundant this year, helping along the florists' business considerably.

Peter Hess and Walter Salmon are booked as extras at J. B. Keller Sons for the holidays.

Harry Williams is again in the florists' business.

The Bowling Club meets every Tuesday evening at the Elm alleys. The ladies are taking a great deal of interest in bowling this season.

Chas. Vick is working hard for the success of the various talks and the social evening held each month at the Florists' Association's club rooms.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

The weather last week was anything but encouraging for a lively Christmas trade, being warm, rainy and decidedly unpleasant. Of course it was a dull week among florists, who were making preparations for this week's rush.

Carnations will not be any too plentiful in this section. If this weather keeps up, there will be an extremely short crop, also, of roses. There will be a nice supply of blooming plants, which have come to be a great factor in the Christmas trade.

Various Notes.

T. B. McClintock has completed this fall quite a large cold greenhouse for keeping azaleas and roses and that class of stock, something that was much needed at his large place. He has connected this to a large boiler that heats his garage. Next spring he is going to build a range of houses in close proximity to this place. Mr. McClintock's carnations look especially fine for the Christmas trade. He also has elegant poinsettias, which will sell at sight. His sweet peas are commencing to promise quite a good crop.

Miss A. L. Besancon has formed a partnership with her brother and Mr. Boss. Mr. Boss had been manager of the Art Flower Store, which was owned by I. G. Marvin, of Wilkes-Barre. This company bought out Mr. Marvin and joined Miss Besancon's store with the Art Flower Store, and have made a fine, complete appearing place by turning the two into one. They have a greenhouse in the rear, connected with the store, which makes it quite convenient.

G. R. C.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.

The opening of the Oakhurst Greenhouses was held November 11 and may be called a great success. Many hundreds came to visit the newly erected greenhouses, and all were surprised to see what had been accomplished in a few weeks' time. The building material reached Spartanburg the first week in August and by the opening day sweet peas, carnations, roses and chrysanthemums were at their best.

The Review suggested a few months ago that a little souvenir be given on such occasions and we followed the advice. Each lady was given a little jardiniere. Ice cream and chocolate were served by ladies in the potting shed and, judging by the trade we are doing now, the little expense we made payed us well. We sincerely thank The Review for the suggestion.

THE EDGEBROOK GREENHOUSES AND NURSERIES

OF THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO., EDGEBROOK, CHICAGO, ILL.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Christmas rush promises to equal, if not exceed, that of last year. Everybody appears to have as much as he can attend to, even with extra help. The stores are all bountifully decorated, their wealth of red wreaths and bells making a great show. Made-up baskets, hampers and pans of poinsettias are much in evidence, some of the creations being quite pretty, and should sell rapidly.

The stock of cut flowers promises to be equal to the demand. After the experience of last year, when the market was cleaned up so thoroughly the day before Christmas, it is hard to predict that it will not happen again.

Prices on all stocks will probably range about the same as last season, with the exception of immortelles, which will not be handled so extensively on account of the high prices. Carnations will be high and scarce for Christmas, bringing from 4 to 8 cents, while good roses have been scarce and are bringing from 5 to 8 cents. Violets are bringing from $1 to $2 per hundred.

Greens are good and in big demand, but holly is not as good as last season nor as heavily berried. Mistletoe is good and well berried. There is a heavy demand for good ferns of all sizes. Cyclamens are not overplentiful this season and fine plants are hard to find at any price.

Various Notes.

James Hamilton, of Mt. Washington, is placing orders for material for another large greenhouse like the one he erected this season. It is one of the finest ever put up in the state and is used for roses. Mr. Hamilton is one of the largest growers of roses and carnations around Baltimore. Chas. M. Wagner is manager for him.

R. A. Vincent, Jr., & Son's Co. is shipping cannas by the carload and reports one of the best seasons this fall for early orders to be shipped at once. Their geranium stock is extra good and many orders for all kinds of bedding stock are being received. Q.

Mittineague, Mass.—George Cooley is installing a big new boiler in his greenhouses.

St. Stephen, N. B., Can.—J. R. Sederquest has moved into new quarters adjoining the Windsor hotel.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

This week is the third of three consecutive weeks of mild, springlike weather, the like of which has never been known in this neighborhood. Stock has not suffered, however, and Christmas prospects are as bright as the weather itself.

Canadian Queen roses have been coming in during the last fortnight with stems thirty inches long. Such magnificent blooms were never seen before in this country, and they owe their quality and appearance to the fact that the buds were all sacrificed six or eight weeks ago, so that the crop might come in about Christmas.

Various Notes.

Orchids are in great demand and the hydro-electric power from Niagara Falls, which has just been installed at the Dale Estate, is being used throughout the night in the orchid houses in an endeavor to assist conditions and at the same time test the value of an experimental theory. The huge cold storage premises in course of erection at the Dale Estate have been cork-lined, the inner walls and partitions receiving a coat of cement in addition. The beginning of the new year will see the building ready for the machinery, and when it is complete the 2,000,000 valley pips now on their way from Germany may be sure of the best attention. W. G. P.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., was elected president of the Kentucky Society of Florists at the annual meeting of that organization, December 11, at the establishment of August Baumer, in the Masonic building. H. Kleinstarink was elected vice-president; August Baumer, corresponding secretary; John Kleinsteuber, financial secretary; Gus Kleinsteuber, treasurer, and Joseph Lawson, trustee, to serve three years. R. W. Brown was elected an honorary member of the organization.

Much activity, it is expected, will be manifested on the part of Kentucky florists next year. One of the plans now considered, that seems likely to be realized, is a big flower show sometime next fall. The majority of the members of the society, it is stated, favor such an exhibition.

Westfield, N. J.—Chas. L. Doerrer reports a heavy call for decorative stock. He has a large plant and does an exclusive retail trade.

ARAUCARIA EXCELSA

We are well prepared for the Araucaria orders and are the leaders, as we have always been for the last 25 years. 6000 can be seen in our greenhouses, all sizes and prices. 5½-in., 3-year-old, 15 to 20 in. high, 3 to 4 tiers, only 50c; 6-in., 4 year-old, 20, 22, 25 to 30 in. and over in height, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; specimen plants, 7-in., 30, 35 to 40 in. high, 5 to 6-year-old, 6, 7 to 8 tiers, green from bottom up, at a bargain price seldom offered; just look, only $1.50 to $2.00. Worth double. Will you let such a bargain pass unnoticed?

We also have the stock—the best obtainable in Belgium—of Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca; short, bushy jewels—none better in the world. 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

Cyclamen Grandiflorum, 4-in. pots, 25c; 5¼-in., 35c.

Cineraria Hybrida, Aschmann's well-known strain, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00.

POINSETTIAS.

THE TOWN'S TALK.

Did you see those large 12-in. pans, made up of 3 large, 20 to 25-in. high poinsettias, trimmed with large Whitmani, Scottii and Glatrasii ferns, areca palms, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, cocos palms, etc., in Mr. McGinty's show window? "They came from Godfrey Aschmann's greenhouses; we paid only $2.50 each for them and sell them at a ten dollar bill." "Oh, I bought one not quite as big as yours, for which I paid Aschmann only $2.00," explained Mr. Miller; "I let it go for eight dollars. I thought that was a fair profit."

PANSIES.

Pansy Park Perfection is the best strain of giant show and fancy pansies, largest in size and of the greatest variety of rich and rare colors, the reds and bronzes in large proportion. The growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years. Samples of many reports: "Pansy plants arrived in best possible condition. They have the finest roots I have ever seen. I am well pleased." Fred Reichert, San Antonio, Texas. If you want more proof read the many testimonials in my Review advs. during the past 2 months. Over 75 varieties mixed. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5,000, $14.00; 10.000, $27.00. Special attention to southern orders and delivery in good condition guaranteed. Cash with order.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

HOME OF PANSIES.
Our strain of pansies is unsurpased. We have scores of testimonials. Here is what a few of my customers say—Audubon Park Association, New Orleans, La., writes: "Pansies received in good order. Thanks." J. M. Breckenridge, Savannah, Ga., sends us an order and says: "I bought plants from you last year and found them very satisfactory." The Pansy Floral Co., De Land, Fla., sends us an order and says: "Plants we got from you last year were fine." Industrial School and Gardens, Mobile, Ala., says: "The pansies you sent were in good shape when received and are doing nicely." They sent us another order. We have a large stock of Our Own Specials, Masterpiece, Perret, Trimardeau, black, yellow, blood red, etc., all kinds mixed, $2.50 per 1000· 5000 for $10.00.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, OLEAN, N. Y.

Think of the strain of pansies containing light, dark, lavender, violet, blue, bronze, royal purple, red, cerise, salmon, mahogany, yellow and red and gold shades, a dozen or more varieties in each shade, of immense size with great form and substance. They are MASTODON PANSIES. It has cost us hundreds of dollars and eighteen years' time to upbuild this strain and it is worth all it cost. We guarantee perfect order delivery everywhere and we guarantee satisfaction. Plants, 50c 100; $3.00 1000; $12.50 5000, prepaid.

BOSTON NOTES.

day trade. There was a choice lot of the yellow insignes, including Laura Kimball, Sanderæ (of these there were thirty-six plants in flower), Wm. Millie Dow and Brightness, also Leeanum magnificum, and other good sorts. Paper Whites, Romans, yellow trumpet narcissi and other bulbs were flowering in quantity, and some specially fine valley. In the carnation houses all varieties were looking well. More refreshments were served here and short, appreciative address made by President Miller and William J. Kennedy, after which the special was boarded for Boston, all voting the outing a highly pleasurable one in spite of damp conditions.

Various Notes.

Adolph E. E. Koch is selling the flowers grown by the Shepard's Garden Carnation Co. at the Boston Coöperative Market. Their specialties are carnations and valley. Of the former, Dorothy Gordon, Pink Delight, Beacon, Granite State, Enchantress and White Perfection are grown.

The Sutermeister Estate is marketing excellent double Von Sion narcissi, both cut and in pans, and quantities of Roman hyacinths.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, and O. Harrigan, of East Foxboro, are leaders in yellow marguerites and calendulas, and J. M. Cohen finds a quick sale for them.

A. F. Scott, of the Willow Hill Greenhouses, through Thomas Pegler, is disposing of quantities of Golden West mums and will have these for Christmas, also excellent marguerites and Bouvardia Humboldtii.

The grandest Richmond roses seen this season in Boston are from McAlpine's, Exeter, N. H. Many have 48-inch stems and some as much as 72-inch. Their pink and white Killarneys and Mrs. Wards are also splendid.

A. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, has excellent flowers of Enchantress, White Perfection, Queen and Winsor carnations.

J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, certainly can grow valley and their carnations are now good, the new Pink Supreme holding up well.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, last week had their first cut of the pretty pale blue iris, alata. This variety comes from Sicily. They also have Golden Spur and Trumpet Major narcissi, freesias and Tulip alba maxima, the latter fine in color. Skimmia Japonica and hollies are beautifully berried.

Visitors last week included Charles Loechner, New York; R. Muller, Rutherford, N. J., and J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y.

A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, has a nice cut of pink snapdragons, and among carnations has the old Splendor still in fine shape.

A. A. Pembroke picked 40,000 sweet peas last week. William Sim is also a heavy consignor of these, getting an average of 8,000 daily.

J. Newman & Son, on Tremont street, have their windows attractively arranged with ardisias, poinsettias and other bright flowers. Their December business so far has been of large volume.

The new salesroom of the Flower Growers' Sales Co. is light and commodious. The basement will be utilized for the sundries department, in which quite a trade is being developed.

H. L. Cameron, of North Cambridge, has a splendid lot of Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and cyclamen.

Galvin, on Tremont street, had an attractive window December 16, of Ardisia crenulata beautifully berried. A large vase of white antirrhinums in the center showed up the scarlet to good effect.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, was first in the market with Campernelle jonquils. He also has freesia and French bulbs in quantity.

The finest late yellow mums seen are the Bonnaffons coming in from Edgar Bros., of Waverly.

White Wonder, Gloriosa, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Pink Delight carnations from Frank P. Putnam, of Lowell, are fine.

The W. W. Edgar Co. reports that it looks now as if they will not have a flowering plant left at Christmas, so fast are orders pouring in. Some lines are completely cleaned out.

Welch Bros. are busy and never had such a call for Christmas greenery. They are well equipped for handling a tremendous Christmas trade.

W. N. Craig.

Monticello, Ia.—Increasing business makes it necessary for C. L. Van Meter to enlarge his establishment and he is now at work getting 5,000 more square feet under glass and will put in a new boiler to heat the additional space.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

After one solid week of rain and the most miserable kind of growing weather of which it is possible to conceive, you cannot expect to get a pleasant report from the growers. In fact, the last four weeks have been everything but what was wanted to produce a big Christmas crop, but, just the same, there will be plenty.

The retailers have had a pretty good week. The kermess, a dance which lasted for several days and which was conducted by the social set, for charity, made a large demand for the better class of flowers. This, with Christmas preparations, kept everybody busy. The green goods people were all on the move and the usual lot of Christmas trees are in the market, with greens of all kinds. Some good holly, with some that is not so good, is to be seen.

The wholesalers are having quite a busy time. Flowers are moving well, with the exception of lilies, of which there have been a few too many. Some fine Yellow Trumpet narcissi are to be seen; also Proserpine tulips with stems about six inches long. Florists' supplies, however, are the most active and the houses handling these goods are certainly moving.

Various Notes.

All of the stores are beautiful. The A. W. Smith Co. has a specially beautiful arrangement. The ceiling is draped with greens mingled with electric lights, which change in color, becoming white, red and light green at regular intervals. The store is decorated with large poinsettia plants over the balconies and a general variety of begonias and other plants.

Randolph & McClements' store seems to contain everything imaginable in the way of plants in baskets, as they make a special feature of plants for the holidays, believing they can make them take the place of cut flowers to some extent, but they are compelled to admit that the usual quantity of cut flowers is called for just the same. This firm has charge of a number of large decorations, which, in connection with Christmas work, is going to give them an exceedingly busy time.

The Zieger Co. has the usual decorations at both stores and reports bright prospects for Christmas, as trade for the last week has been in advance of that for any previous year.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has had a regular Christmas rush all the week and some of her combination plant baskets and other specialties are attractive enough to please the most exacting customers.

Ray Dashbach has made a number of improvements in his shop and reports a satisfactory amount of orders to date.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. are more than pleased with their prospects for the holidays. Orders are coming faster than they had any reason to expect.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. handles trees and green goods in connection with their regular flower business, and Mr. Ludwig is about the busiest man in town.

Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, Ind., sent a bunch of their new carnation, St. Nicholas, to the last meeting of the Florists' Club, where it received a special certificate. Hoo-Hoo.

Greenhouse Heating.

AVERAGE QUANTITY OF COAL.

Will someone kindly give an approximate estimate of the amount of coal required to heat and run for a season, at a temperature of 55 degrees, two modern, curved-eave houses, each 22 x 62, with a modern hot water boiler and egg coal, in this northern Jersey climate. F. M.

The quantity of coal required under the conditions named would vary, of course, with the severity of the winter, as well as with the exposure of the houses and the care and skill used in firing, but under average conditions it should run from twelve to sixteen tons for the five winter months.

A CONNECTICUT GREENHOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse, 30 x 200, five and one-half feet high at the sides and fifteen feet to the ridge. There are two feet of glass in the sides and glass in the west end. The location is quite exposed. I want a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. The house is built on a grade, with four feet of fall to the east, where the boiler will be located. I should like to ask how you would pipe this house for hot water? Do you think hot water would be better than steam? If you think steam would be preferable, will you please tell how you would pipe for steam?

R. B. V.

The first cost of installing the heating plant would be considerably less for steam than for hot water, but the fuel would cost from fifteen to twenty-five per cent more. Each method of heating has its merits.

To heat the house with hot water, the boiler should have a rating for about 2,400 square feet of radiating surface. The radiation required can be furnished by means of five 2½-inch flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns. Place a flow on each plate, another under the ridge, and the two remaining flows can be under the purlins. Each flow should feed a coil containing two return pipes.

If steam is to be used, put a 2½-inch flow on each wall, and with each of them feed a coil of five 1¼-inch returns.

HOW MUCH HARD COAL?

Under the best working conditions, how much hard coal should be required to heat with hot water, from November 1 to April 1, two greenhouses to a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees, for bedding plants, in this part of New York state, where the temperature occasionally goes to 20 degrees below zero? The houses are eight feet apart. One is 17 x 108 and four feet to the eaves. It is boarded on one side and has sixteen inches of glass in the other side. There is glass in both ends down far enough to be in a line with the glass in the side. The other house is 17 x 72 and eight and one-half feet to the ridge. The sides are three and one-half feet high and are boarded. There is glass in one end. While this may seem an unreasonable question to ask, yet I believe it is one that concerns every florist. Perhaps a symposium on the subject would be helpful.

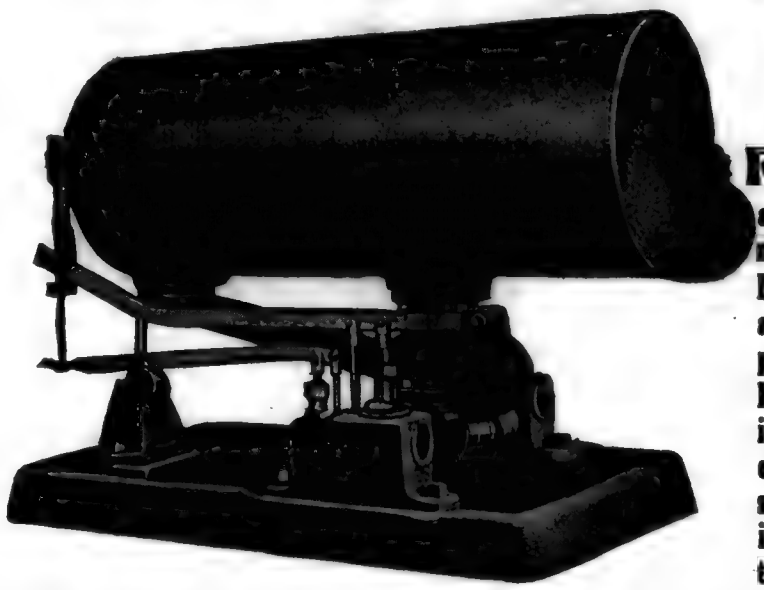
A. B. R.

A good deal depends on the severity of the weather during a given winter, as well as on the construction and exposure of the houses, the perfection of the heating apparatus and the skill and attention of the fireman. However, to heat two houses, 17 x 108 and 17 x 72, to 55 degrees, under the conditions mentioned and with other circumstances about average in character, will require from twenty to twenty-five tons of hard coal for the five winter months.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I see a great variety of questions asked and answered in the columns of The Review and I am taking the liberty of asking one or two on my own account.



I am building a greenhouse, 22 x 86 and nine feet to the ridge. I have an Ideal heater, for either steam or hot water, with 2,000 feet capacity for hot water, or perhaps a little more. It has seven sections. How do you figure the heating capacity of boilers? I am placing the boiler four feet below the floor of the greenhouse. I have 3½-inch mains and 1¼-inch returns. How many returns are needed and how should they be placed to give the most efficient service for general greenhouse purposes? I wish to grow carnations, geraniums and roses and I want my present plant to suffice until the demand requires a larger one. I am putting the house two feet below the level of the ground and am building a 4-foot concrete wall, with two feet of glass under the eaves. The house runs north and south, with ventilators on the east side. The heating plant is at the north end. The house is not at present protected on the west. My location is western Illinois.

R. C. C.

The capacity of a boiler should be, to a considerable extent, proportionate to the size of its grate, although this would vary with the amount of grate surface. In practice, however, it is found that when a boiler has horizontal sections the grate may be smaller than when the sections are vertical. The form of the sections and the thickness of the water columns must also be considered. Some manufacturers rate their boilers at 200 feet of hot water radiation for one square foot of grate, while others count on less than 100 square feet. The Ideal heater runs about 200 square feet of hot water radiation and 100 square feet of steam for each square foot of grate surface.

For the house described, the heater should have a rating for 1,200 square feet of water radiation. If open tank hot water radiation is to be used, three 2½-inch flow pipes and fourteen 2-inch returns will be desirable, but either with combination steam or using a generator for hot water, three 2½-inch flow pipes and sixteen 1¼-inch returns will give about the same temperature, though with a little more expenditure for fuel.

An Innovation in Steam Trap Design and Construction

are devoid of all unnecessary mechanism.

Every part designed, manufactured and assembled with the idea of permanence foremost.

Every tilt of the trap shows that it's working—draining every drop of condensation from the heating system and automatically returning it to the boiler—no pumps—no trouble.

Condensation is the purest kind of boiler feed water. Don't waste it. Return it directly to the boiler by "Detroit" Return Traps and prevent scale formation.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Last week business was dull, the weather bad, and consequently the trade in all lines suffered. The entire week was just the kind that the florist dislikes to see just before Christmas, as it was rainy and cloudy every day. These conditions put everything back, crops are exceedingly short, and the quality of stock shows the effects of no sunshine, so beyond a doubt stock for Christmas, especially roses and carnations, will be quite scarce.

However, there are some fine poinsettias in the market, which will go to help the Christmas receipts along. Narcissi, in white and yellow, are also in good supply, likewise Romans, while violets and lily of the valley will also be in evidence, but not overabundant. Trade this season in all lines of business is not coming up to the records of former years; business men are all complaining.

Various Notes.

Retail florists were busy last week making up holly wreaths and other green goods.

The Miami Floral Co. is cutting some fine poinsettias for the Christmas trade.

Louis Schellhaas, of Miamisburg, O., was in town December 18. He reports that he finds business in Miamisburg about the same as elsewhere.

Mr. Mann, from the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., was in town last week introducing their new rose, Sunburst.

Mr. Schwake, of the Chas. F. Meyer Co., New York city, was one of our visitors last week. While in Dayton he visited with George Bartholomew, and Mr. Bartholomew says: "Mr. Schwake's account of his recent visit to the valley fields was most interesting."

Other visitors were F. J. Farney, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and G. L. Huscroft, of Wm. Hagemann & Co., New York city. R. A. L.

Whitehall, Ill.—S. Rimbey, proprietor of the Whitehall Greenhouses, has completed a deal for the purchase of the greenhouses at Waverly and will consolidate the two establishments, either at Waverly or here.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

One quiet day in every two or three busy ones has been the rule of late. There is no surplus of stock, however, and we are sometimes thankful when there is no demand. Violets do not sell readily, but they are the exception. No one seems to want them. The violet peddlers who had been standing on the street corners had to leave town. They could not sell their stock, and were losing money.

Indications point to a scarcity of all kinds of flowers for Christmas, though the weather next week will control the cut to a great degree. Rose growers are hoping for cold, cloudy weather to hold back the roses, which are a little too far advanced. Carnation men are hoping for just the opposite—nice, warm, sunny weather to bring the backward blooms forward.

Wholesalers of Christmas plants are sold out, the demand having been unusually heavy. There is a quantity of Christmas greens of all kinds on the market and it would appear that this sort of stock is going to be overdone. The holly is good this year, especially that which is packed in paper-lined boxes. A few sheets of paper make a great deal of difference in any shipment to this dry climate.

Various Notes.

The Colorado Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting December 4. After the installation of officers, there was a report by the flower show committee, which showed that nearly $5,000 had been subscribed by the florists of the state. A committee, composed of Fred Hall, E. S. Kennedy and T. W. Hannah, was appointed to furnish the program at the next meeting. A. Gardner, of Greeley, and J. W. Smith, of Colorado Springs, were in attendance.

Mrs. Warren Smith has been ill with bronchitis, but is now able to be out.

Ben Boldt is the only one in Denver this year who has been really successful in growing poinsettias. It is needless to say that they were all sold early.

Visitors: Carl Hagemeyer, of the Deichman & Douglas Floral Co., Colorado Springs; J. W. Smith and Ed. Johnson, Colorado Springs; Wm. Butler, Longmont; A. Gardner, Greeley; S. Knudsen and Mrs. F. A. Haenselman, Boulder, Colo. M. R. J.

THE COLE GLASS CO., Lancaster, Ohio

SPRINGFIELD, O.

The year 1911 has not been one of extensive greenhouse building in this vicinity, but some enlargements of space and the usual amount of rebuilding and repairing have been noted in the course of a brief tour of inspection by your correspondent.

Charles M. Niuffer has erected two houses, each 20x100, enlarged and improved his potting shed, constructed a vestibule connecting the houses with his residence and secured the extension of the city electric light service to his place. These additions and improvements will permit increasing his output and add to his personal comfort in the growing of roses for local catalogue houses.

O. Jackson conducted us through the houses of the American Rose & Plant Co., which were found in apple-pie order under the capable supervision of Carl Glenn. Ferns are the specialty of this concern and a trade in 6-inch, 8-inch and 10-inch sizes is rapidly being extended. Nephrolepis Roosevelt is their leader, but a number of newer sports are now being closely watched and the management expects them to be winners. The packing and potting shed has been extended eighty-six feet, with a width of sixteen feet. Side walls of concrete, with steel posts for gutters, have been completed, on which four new houses, each 21x150, will be erected next spring. Delay in the arrival of material and the extremely unfavorable weather this fall have prevented their immediate completion.

The Good & Reese Co. rebuilt five of their older houses during the summer, following practically the same construction as used in the remainder of the range, except that the side walls, gutter posts and benches were constructed of cement instead of wood. This concern reports extreme difficulty in the digging of outdoor stock, so that a considerable quantity of shrubbery which should now be in cold storage will probably have to remain in the ground until spring.

The completion of the Indian Run sewer through State street brought this much needed improvement within 700 feet of the houses of the Leedle Floral Co., and the firm has just had a contractor lay a private line for this distance, with which the necessary conveniences have been connected and provision made for carrying away waste water from numerous down-spouts and other pipes.

TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

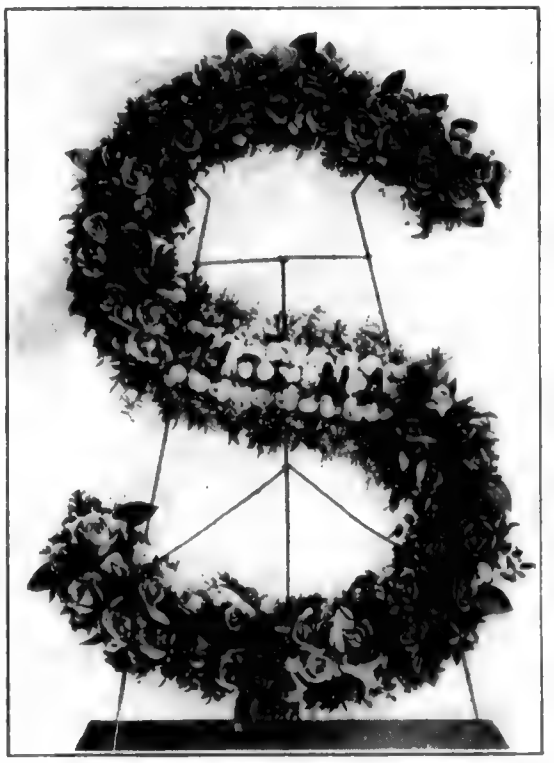
Wallingford, Conn.—Rowden & Mitchell are preparing a big stock of geraniums for spring trade. Some thousands of the popular S. A. Nutt are already spoken for.

THE CHRISTMAS BUSINESS

A NEW LEAF TURNED.

Business on a New Basis.

The Christmas business of 1911 has been the largest in the history of the florists' trade, but of even greater interest and vastly greater importance is the fact that it has furnished ample evidence of the dawn of a new era in flower selling. No longer are prices of cut flowers to be rushed to extraordinary levels for the holiday, to the accompaniment of a great accumulation of overripe stock by the growers, led on by the hope of realizing the extra prices. The depression that usually preceded and followed the holiday also has helped to so pull down the average value of the crop that many growers have ceased to crop their entire places for Christmas. Wholesalers have realized that the plantsmen have found their opportunity more through the action of the cut flower markets in years gone by than they have in the popular demand for the plants themselves—beautiful as are the best plants, the average flower buyer prefers cut flowers, especially for gift purposes. That has been abundantly demonstrated within the last week, for, although an enormous plant trade was done everywhere, the reasonable prices of cut flowers, the excellent supply and the good average quality resulted in a tremendous business being done with these, the retail profits being fully as good as ever have been obtained.



Less Stock Realizes More Money.

In practically all of the big wholesale markets of the country the supply of stock was below rather than above the quantity handled last year. The quality, however, was better and as a result lower prices gave a better average and a larger money return—the great gain came from the fact that under the new order of things it was possible to clean up the supply without the great disparity between the prices of the best flowers and the poorer ones. While the top prices were, in most cities, as high as in other years, the buyers who came early and made their wants known—and these consumed the great bulk of the supply—were treated in such a way as to cause them to add to rather than cut the original order. The advantages of first-class stock throughout, and of a good average price for all, were obvious.

How Specialties Fared.

Some of the big markets had all the stock they needed, but in most of them, especially in the west, the Beauty crops were light. Still, the Beauty is not what it once was as a Christmas flower and no great increase in the supply would have been needed to break the markets, as they have been broken in several recent years, especially in 1910. The decline in the demand for Beauties appears to have been coincident with the increase in the supply of and improvement in Killarneys. It appears that retailers have been able to make more money for themselves and give better satisfaction to their customers by pushing Killarneys, with the result that some of the largest stores now are using only small quantities of Beauties for Christmas.

Richmond was in large supply this year and in most cities the length of stem was the greatest ever known. The sale for these was enormous, but Killarney was in such large supply and so fine that it occupied the leading place. It was on roses that the principal evidences of moderation in prices were manifest. Carnations were not so plentiful as in recent years, the statement applying to every section of the country, almost without exception, and the demand was so strong that in most cities it at least held the prices up to what they have been in other years, if it did not carry them still higher. Red realized as good prices as ever it did, and other colors were scarcely less closely cleaned up. It was evident that the Christmas call is for good carnations if for any, as the smaller whites were the ones that did not sell. Fancy white went not badly. By far the greater part of the carnations now grown are either Enchantress or white, and bright pink is scarce.

The violet did not do so well as usual in most of the markets, the prices realized being considerably below those of last year, but it is thought that the flower has not lost anything in popularity. The Hudson river double violets now go all over the eastern half of the country. The decline in value of the crop was apparent in nearly every city, due as much to the fact that the weather was too warm for the stock to ship well as it was to the general market tendencies or any special factor affecting the violet. The singles sold better than the doubles in most markets, because of better quality.

Where stock is grown to be sold at retail a miscellaneous assortment is profitable, but such items as Paper Whites and Romans are not in request in the great cut flower markets at holiday times and find only cheap sale except in case of unexpected scarcity in other lines. The holiday demand is for the great staples.

The Plant Trade.

The flowering plants were better than ever this year and sold splendidly. Many retailers prefer to push them because they can be handled less hurriedly than is the case with cut flowers, and also for the important reasons that prices are established and moderate, while at the same time the plants add to the variety of the assortment it is possible to set before the public. But the plant arrangements are less mixed than they were in earlier years. What is wanted now is something good but simple, neither too large, too complicated nor too costly. The poinsettia, the cyclamen and the primula are the great sellers, but all other plants moved well at prices that paid the growers and gave the retailers good profits.

Weather a Big Factor.

The weather was a big factor in the great success of the Christmas business. Nearly everywhere it was bright and warm December 23, 24 and 25, ideal shopping days and a wonderful help in deliveries. Don't forget to thank the weather man.

"S" IS FOR SWITCHMAN.

Since time immemorial those who teach the young idea how to shoot have used a jingle as an aid to memorizing the alphabet. So great is the variety of freak designs the average retail florist is called on to make that there is one for almost every letter in the alphabet. When you get down to "S," it stands for switchman in the case of the design shown in the accompanying illustration, which was called for at the store of the Archias Floral Co., Sedalia, Mo., by a committee of the Switchmen's Union. When a customer insists that nothing will so well serve his purpose as a gigantic letter in flowers, the proper thing to do is to take his money and make up as good a design as the circumstances will permit—but you can't call it art, no matter how well you fill the order. In the present instance, the design gave excellent satisfaction to the customers, but nothing would have been lost had the easel been covered by some such method as winding with smilax.

A ST. LOUIS ESTABLISHMENT.

The illustration on page 12 shows the new establishment of C. Young & Sons Co., at Belt and Waterman avenues, St. Louis, where William C. Young, Jr., is in charge.

Just after the holidays, retail florists will appreciate to the full the facilities afforded by the show houses on either side of the store. It is an advantage in handling the extra business that comes at Christmas and Easter that is envied by the florist who is compelled to do business handicapped by no more space than is afforded by the average downtown store.

GARDENERS' ASSOCIATION.

President Thomas W. Logan has made the following appointments on the board of directors of the National Association of Gardeners, to take effect January, 1912:

To serve for three years — John Shore, Harrison, N. Y.; Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass.; Alexander McKenzie, Glen Cove, L. I.; William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; W. N. Craig, North Easton, Mass.; James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

To serve for two years—John Dodds, Wyncote, Pa.; T. J. Kempton, Baychester, N. Y.; Robert Angus, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Carl Schaffer, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; E. Wetterlow, West Manchester, Mass.; Robert Bottomley, New Canaan, Conn.; E. Trethewey, New York, N. Y.

To serve for one year—A. Bauer, Deal Beach, N. J.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; H. F. Witney, Fishkill, N. Y.; Alexander Fraser, Newport, R. I.; James Bell, New York, N. Y.; F. Kirk, Bar Harbor, Me.; Wm. Pirie, Buffalo, N. Y.

Xavier Schmitt, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been appointed assistant secretary, and W. E. Maynard, of New York city, organizer, for the coming year.

The officers elected for 1912 are: President, Thomas W. Logan, Jenkintown, Pa.; vice-president, Martin B. Tillotson, Great Neck, N. Y.; secretary, Martin C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; treasurer, Roy H. Caverly, Lowell, Mass.

Considerable outside interest has been manifested toward the national association since its last convention, which was held in Madison, N. J., in October last. The organization itself has become much interested in the contemplated national show, to be held in New York city in April, 1913, and some of its members are preparing to make large exhibits. A prominent gardener, superintendent of one of the largest private estates in the east, has already declared himself to Chairman Charles H. Totty, of the National Flower Show committee, as expecting to bring more than a carload of exhibits from the estate over which he presides, which is located in one of the states adjoining New York, to the 1913 exhibition. Some keen competition may also be looked for from the members of the national association at the next annual show of the American Sweet Pea Society, to be held in Boston, in July, 1912, this society having promised to provide liberally for special classes for gardeners.

A great growth is looked for in the National Association of Gardeners during the year 1912. President Logan will call a meeting of the new board of directors early in January, to meet in New York city, and some important matters will be brought up looking to the future development of this organization, which promises soon to become an important factor in the field of horticulture in this country.

M. C. Ebel, Sec'y.

GREEN CENTER IN VIOLET BUDS.

I am sending to you, by separate mail, a package of violets and leaves. Please tell me the name of this variety, for it is not Gov. Herrick or Princess of Wales. Gov. Herrick has darker and thicker foliage with me. This variety, when I bought it, was supposed to be Princess of Wales. Also tell me the best day and night temperature for this variety that I am sending. I am also enclosing a bunch of double violet buds. What is the cause of the double violets sending out such large, worthless buds with a green center, which never develop into good blooms? Are soot and hardwood ashes, mixed, good for the violets, if put between the rows? J. G.

The violets were so completely shriveled up as to be quite unrecognizable. Had they been in a tin or a light wooden box, with damp moss around the stems, they would have arrived in a fresh condition. The causes of the green center in double varieties are long spells of sunless weather and too low a night temperature. Hold them, as nearly as possible, at 40 to 42 degrees at night, with 5 or 6 degrees of a rise on dull days and 10 to 12 degrees of a rise on clear days, with abundant ventilation. Keep the surface soil scratched over and free from weeds and scum. Remove all dead and diseased foliage. Do not throw any rubbish below the benches; keep a pure, sweet atmosphere and your plants should improve. Wood ashes are not specially good for violets, but soot is useful, as well as top-dressings of sheep manure or well decayed cow manure. Feed sparingly, however, at this season.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKING HERE.

One of the chief reasons why the florists' business is among the best any young man can take up for his life work is that so large a proportion of those engaged in it are working for themselves. There probably is no other line in which so large a percentage of those in business for themselves have started as employees, or in which so large a number of those now employed will sooner or later be able to make a start on their own account. The importance of this recently was pointed out, in an interview, by David R. Forgan, president of one of the big banks in Chicago.

"If a young man starts out with the purpose of gaining a competence," said Mr. Forgan, "he should select a line of business in which, after it has been mastered, it is possible to start in a small way on one's own account with unlimited possibilities of growth. Success in railroading or banking, for instance, means only a good salary, while the profits go to the shareholders. Success in merchandising or manufacturing of any kind means that the profits go directly into your own pocket."

A florist is, usually, both a manufacturer and a merchant; therefore he gets both the manufacturing and the merchandising profit. This is true of all those who grow the stock they retail, and this includes the big part of the trade outside the principal cities. The florists' business is an individual affair. There are no great corporations to dominate the field. Such companies as there are in it are close corporations; they use no capital from outside; the stockholders are active workers and practically partners; the profits do not go to those who merely are investors; the money stays in the business, to make more money. The largest concerns in this trade today have grown in a few years from extremely small beginnings, and their success can be duplicated by any young man who has the qualities within himself.

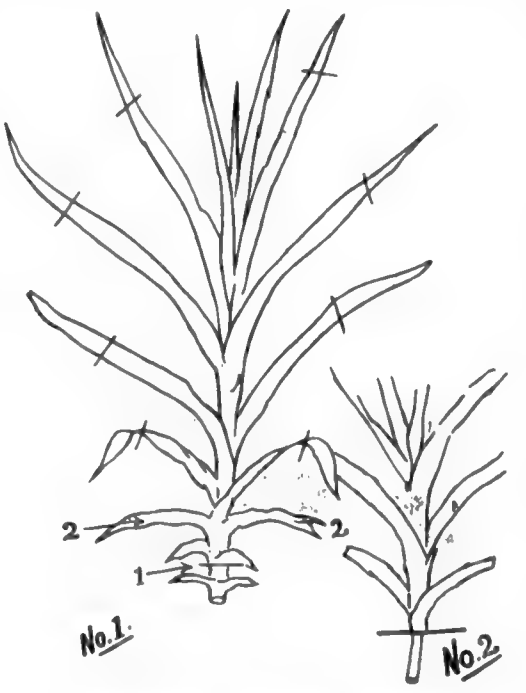
PROPAGATING.

The Early Cuttings.

It is time now, if you wish to practice early planting, to get cuttings of some of the slower growing varieties into the sand. Early housing is necessary these days if you want to keep up with the band wagon, and especially is this true if you are growing for the wholesale market, where it is ever a case of the survival of the fittest.

One thing I wish particularly to call to your attention, however, and that is, that if you propagate early, you must make up your mind to give the cuttings room and attention later, lest they become potbound and stunted and far inferior to cuttings which may have been propagated in March. If you are not prepared to give your young plants at least 2½-inch pots, and 3-inch will be necessary for some, then you would better wait at least another month before putting the cuttings into the sand. That would not necessarily mean that you could not have splendid success next season, but you could hardly expect to produce such elegant stock by early fall as we see nowadays at the shows.

Selecting the Cuttings.



Having provided a suitable propagating bench, with all that is required for properly caring for the cuttings, you are now ready to take the cuttings and prepare them for the sand. Every year there is considerable controversy between the buyer and the seller of carnation cuttings, as to what is the best kind of cutting. Some maintain that a heel cutting is the only kind that is fit to put into the propagating bench, and unless they see the heels on the cuttings there is trouble in store for the shipper. Others use the tops of flowering stems which have not begun to run up to bud. With those who propagate only for themselves it is entirely a question of which will make the strongest plant and give the best results, and, inasmuch as only about one and one-half as many young plants need to be produced as there are plants blooming on the benches, it is an easy matter to get all the good cuttings that are needed. Only in case a rare variety is to be worked up into as much stock as possible, is it necessary to take every good cutting available.

Two Necessary Precautions.

In our experience we have found that any kind of shoot will make a good cutting, as long as you will observe two things: First, no shoot which has lengthened out enough to show any considerable amount of stem between the blades is fit to propagate. This applies to the pip cuttings. Secondly, if you use only side shoots from flowering stems, only good sized, strong shoots should be used. The small shoots from the upper part of the stem will root readily enough, but will produce only small, weak plants, and those high-grade blooms never come from that kind of plant.

If you propagate only for yourself, you will find no trouble in getting all the cuttings you need from near the base of the flower stems, and all you need to be careful of is to avoid the small ones, as already mentioned.

Assuming that you will use this kind of cutting, I have drawn a rough sketch of a shoot of this kind; only this shoot had stood on the plant a short time after the bloom had been taken off and had grown somewhat in size and strength. Its extra strength has made of it an ideal cutting.

Trimming Carnation Cuttings.

Trimming the Cuttings.

In preparing this shoot for the cutting bench you will cut off the lower end of the stem, where you see line No. 1 drawn across in Figure 1. You will notice that this cut will be just at the base of the next pair of leaves, No. 2. It is just low enough to let the joint remain on the cutting and yet high enough to allow you to peel off all of the leaves at No. 2. It is essential that none of these leaves remain on the stem, as they will only rot and start fungus in your bench. After you have finished the lower part of the cutting, it will appear like Figure 2. Always finish the lower part first, and then go on up the cutting and trim the leaves back as shown in Figure 1.

We do not trim our leaves back as closely as many propagators do, because we think that the young plant will make quicker progress after it is rooted if not trimmed so closely. You will also notice that we cut off the heel, and I can see some growers hold up their hands in horror at this. Now, to start with, we do not choose the heel cutting because we want the heel, but because we want the young shoot which has many joints. We find, further, that we can root a batch more evenly and quickly when the hard heel is taken off. In fact, we find that a few varieties will not strike roots at all readily through the heel. Furthermore, you will find that when you leave the heels on, they will vary considerably in hardness in the same variety and the rooting will be uneven, resulting in an uneven lot of plants all the way through.

Having taken off a batch of cuttings, you will, of course, keep them moist and cool all the time until they are stuck in the sand. While preparing them we have a bucket of fresh water to throw them into as they are being trimmed. This freshens them up well.

Placing Them in the Sand.

Have your sand well moistened when packing it down, and firm it well. Then, with an ordinary table knife, draw a line straight across the bench and about an inch deep. Begin at the left end of the bench and begin each row at the back of the bench, working toward you. Stick the cuttings three-fourths of an inch to one inch deep in the sand, the idea being to place them just deep enough to hold them upright when watering, etc. The firmer the sand, the better they will stand up. When you have stuck the last cutting, stick in the label just in front of it. Start the next kind next to the label, filling out the row, and proceed with the next row as before. Some growers work the other way, but we find that under the above method we have the work better in hand and can do better and quicker work. We are always working away from it, instead of having to work over the cuttings as the others do. After you have stuck a batch of cuttings, you must give them a thorough watering, partly to moisten the sand and partly to settle the sand around the cuttings. After that they will need to be sprayed just enough to keep them fresh. But this point will be taken up in a future article.

Another thing you must bear in mind, and it is of the greatest importance. When selecting cuttings, avoid plants which are not healthy. There is no surer way of destroying the vitality of your stock than by propagating unhealthy cuttings. Especially is this true of that most prevalent disease, stigmonose. A. F. J. Baur.

CUTTINGS ARE GOOD.

I am sending a sample of a lot of unrooted carnation cuttings and would like to have your opinion of them. I sent for 3,000, paying $37.50 cash for them. I told the party to take them from the flowering stem and to be careful not to break the heel off. When I received them forty per cent were like the sample sent you. What do you think of it? G. A. R.

The cuttings forwarded were badly wilted, but I presume that your complaint is not of that nature. These cuttings, when properly rooted, ought to make you as fine stock as it is possible to get. They are healthy and strong. The grower who sent them to you should have taken them off without taking the heels with them, as you will likely take the heels off anyway. These stubs would produce more young shoots for him, which would make the finest of cuttings. You have no reason for complaint as far as I can see. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE.

Several years ago we had a bad case of fairy ring on our carnations and when we see something wrong with them we are afraid it is the old trouble. About ten days ago we noticed a good many shoots had brown tips and rough places on them. We picked off the worst shoots and burned them, then spraying with Fungine. We notice there are thrips on the plants and are now spraying regularly with a nicotine solution. Under separate cover we send you a few of the worst shoots we can find in the bench. Please let us know if it is fairy ring, or what it is, and what we shall do. So far it has not affected the blooms, for they are as fine as we could wish. E. R. G.

The light spots on the specimens forwarded are not fairy ring. They are caused by the common disease known as stigmonose. This subject has been treated fully within the last few weeks in my answers to inquiries and you will find directions for handling it in recent numbers of The Review. A. F. J. B.

COVERED WITH RED SPIDER.

I am sending you some carnations that seem to me to be affected with some kind of disease. If you can tell me what the trouble is and what to do, I shall be sincerely thankful. This is my first season in business and I am not an experienced florist. J. H. C.

The specimens forwarded were literally covered with red spider, and if all your plants are as badly affected as these, you will not be apt to find this a profitable season. At this time of the year it is an uphill job to fight this pest, when once it gets a firm foothold. When the weather is bright and one can syringe every day it is an easy matter to keep them in check, and experienced growers make special efforts to have their plants free from them when winter sets in. After that it is merely a question of prevention.

Salt water is perhaps the best weapon to fight them with now. Use a 2-inch potful of salt to each gallon of water and spray them thoroughly. After a day or two (try to select a bright day, in the morning), wash them off with the hose. After a few days, if some of the pests have survived, repeat the dose. Set your young plants as far away from these infested plants as possible, else they will become infested too. A. F. J. B.

WIREWORMS IN SOIL.

Kindly inform us as to the best way to get rid of wireworms in the soil. Would steaming the soil enough to kill them have any bad effect on it? We wish to use the soil for our young carnation plants. W. B.

By far the wisest plan would be not to use this soil for your young carnation plants. To apply remedies when it is too late to avoid trouble of this nature is well enough, but when you know of the presence of pests of this kind, by all means go around them. If you must use this soil, you can destroy the wireworms by sterilizing it. Others recommend the use of salt or salty fertilizers, such as nitrate of soda. A 4-inch potful of salt to a wheelbarrow of soil would not be apt to injure your plants, and it may destroy the worms. I would advise you to experiment along this line a little before you use it on your stock. Try it in stronger proportion too. A. F. J. B.

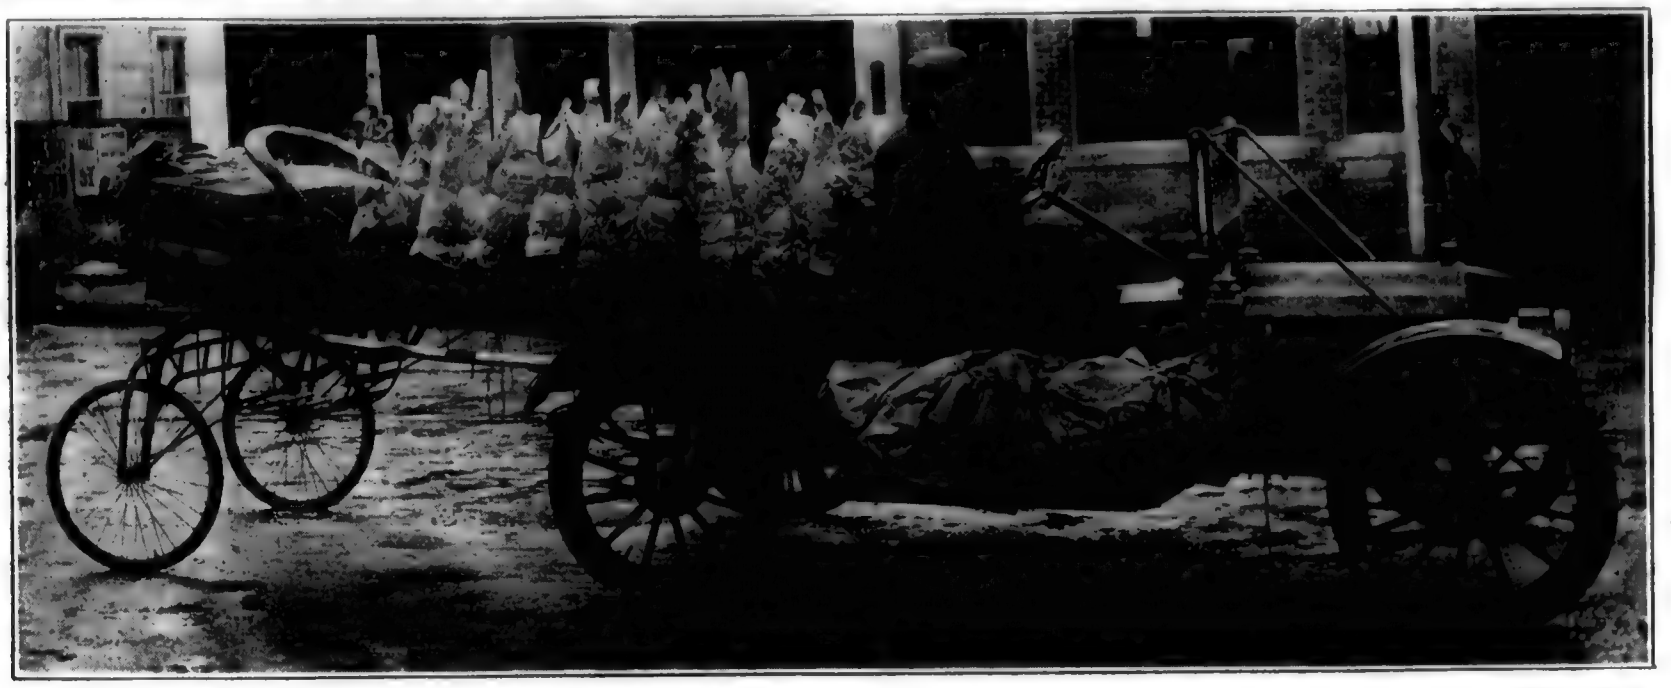
HOUSE OF MIGNONETTE.



The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken a few days ago at the Castle Grove Greenhouses, Danville, Pa. The mignonette in the house was planted August 15, and for a holiday crop stems were cut two feet long, with flower spikes seven inches in length. The variety is without name, being a selection from seedlings raised by J. J. Curran, who is seen in the picture.

ASTER BLIGHT.

Kindly give me information in regard to aster blight. My asters are on new land, but blighted somewhat. Will they be likely to blight if grown on the same land next season? Can the seed be treated with formalin? What varieties are best—pink, white and purple, or lavender—for florists' trade, and where may seed be obtained? Are coal ashes beneficial? Is hen manure or kainite a good aster fertilizer, and in what quantity? R. N. L.

It is hard to say what causes aster blight. It is a fact that seeds saved from badly affected plants, which were secured with some difficulty, germinated and produced perfectly strong and healthy plants the following season. As a general thing, new land is much less likely to give blighted plants than old ground. Again, plants raised under glass in heat are more delicate and more susceptible to blight than those started in coldframes or outdoors. A good many diseased plants are caused by too thick sowing and crowding in the seedling flats or after transplanting.

The ground in which asters are to be grown is better if plowed or spaded and liberally manured the fall previous to planting the crop. Fresh manure used just before planting would have a tendency to cause disease. I have had no experience in treating seeds with formalin, but the mere fact that seeds from diseased plants produced healthy plants the following season would rather indicate that the blight is not inherited. In the same way, seeds from melons which were practically destroyed by blight have given perfectly clean plants the next year.

Good aster seed is offered by many of the leading seedsmen in the columns of The Review. Excellent varieties to grow are: For very early, Early Wonder in white and pink; for early, Queen of the Market in pink, pure white and lavender; for main and late crops, Vick's or American Branching and Semple's. White is the most profitable color to grow; next to that, pink, lavender and deep purple. It is best not to grow many of the last color.

Hen manure is useful as a top-dressing when the plants are in active growth. It is better, however, to mix the manure with fine loam sometime previous to using it. Drop it thinly between the rows and later run the hoe or cultivator over the soil, to stir it well. A light coating of wood ashes before plowing will help the ground, but should not be applied more frequently than every third year. C. W.

LONG ISLAND FLORICULTURE.

The proprietor of the Elklawn Greenhouses is J. Ebb Weir, who also is proprietor of James Weir, Jr., & Son, Brooklyn, and the two establishments, while separate, are closely associated, the greater part of the output of the greenhouses going to the retail store.

"We have erected this past summer," writes J. E. Weir, Jr., manager of Elklawn, "three more Hitchings & Co. houses, material, painting, glazing and heating being done by Hitchings' men and our own doing the erection of the buildings proper. This makes the seventh Hitchings house in three years. At present we have two carnation houses, each 30x200, one 200-foot propagating house and five 100-foot houses containing bedding stock and a general trade line. The local trade, picked up without running after, which we had never believed amounted to anything, is getting to be quite a factor and growing fast. The only trouble is delivery. We have a machine for that and frequently have to go thirty to forty miles with a decoration. Am sending you under separate cover a photograph of a hurry-up order. This had to be delivered twenty-five miles away with about twelve hours given to pack and send it. The load weighed just 1,150 pounds, partly supported by the sulky and the rest by the machine.

"We take a lot of stock in The Review; we most generally find something in it that squares up a difficult point at about the right time."

A NEW CONNECTICUT RANGE.

When Otto Keser put up his range of glass at Portland, Conn., he started with the houses shown in the accompanying illustration, which are surrounded by several acres of choice land, planted with trees, shrubs and a variety of stock for his retail trade. A handsome dwelling and storage house is situated at the entrance and does not show in the picture. The place is called the Riverside Greenhouses.

St. Clairsville, O.—Elizabeth A. Mellor, who was formerly connected with the florists' trade, but withdrew from it several years ago, has again engaged in the business, with John E. Winters as manager.

THAT THREE-NAMED ROSE.

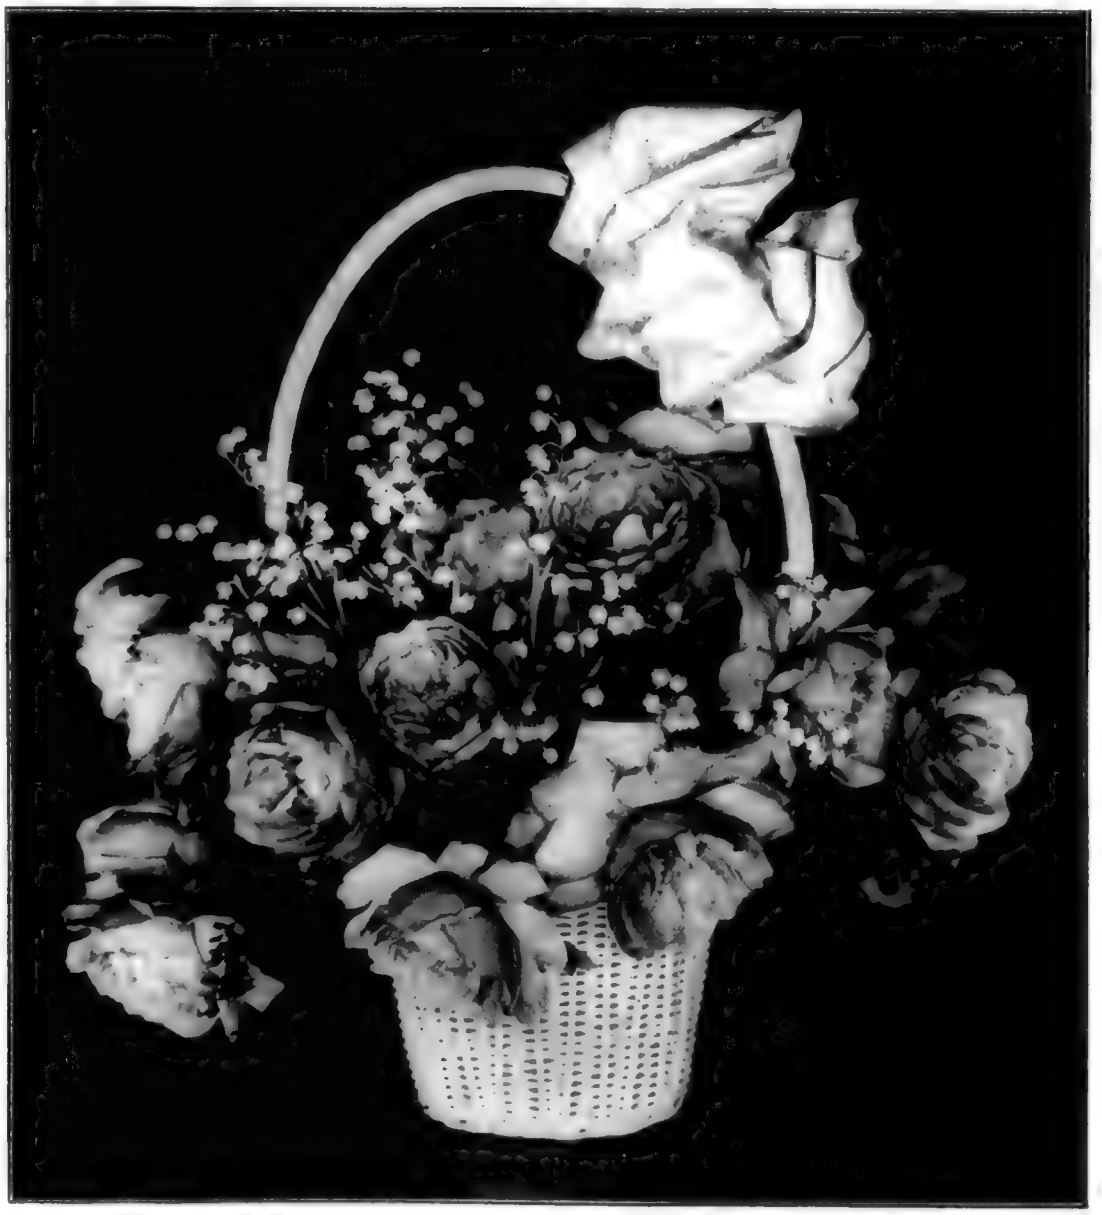
A western rose grower asks the publication of the following:

"Antoine Rivoire is the correct name of the rose frequently offered as Prince de Bulgarie or as Mrs. Taft. The spelling, according to the catalogue of the raiser, Pernet-Ducher, is as here given, not Revoire, as frequently written. There is another Pernet-Ducher rose named Prince de Bulgarie, but it is distinct from Antoine Rivoire. The confusion came about through the variety Antoine Rivoire, minus the label, getting into the hands of a Washington florist who gave it the name of Mrs. Taft. Then A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., got hold of it and it made a hit. Knowing that Mrs. Taft was not the correct name, and wanting to get it straight, Pierson sought to identify it and accepted the verdict of a celebrated French rose grower, to whom stock was sent, that it was Prince de Bulgarie. Later it was proved to be Antoine Rivoire. There now seems to be no question about it, so the trade should cease to use the names of Taft and Bulgarie for this variety (there being other though little grown sorts by both these names), and use only the name Antoine Riviore."

Submitting the proof of the above to A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., for verification of the statements of fact, Wallace R. Pierson writes:

"Replying to your letter of December 15, would state regarding the clipping relating to the rose Antoine Rivoire that while in the main it is true, I do not care to advocate a policy which we do not intend to live up to.

"This rose was called Mrs. Taft before we got it, and is known in the New York, Philadelphia and Boston cut flower markets as Mrs. Taft and is extremely popular. If we should advocate changing the name to Antoine Rivoire it would be a shortsighted policy. Whether the name is worth anything in the trade or not is the question, but the fact remains that this rose is advertised under that name, and known under that name. Our position in the matter of this rose has been stated quite clearly a number of times. The cut flower business is worth more to us than the plant business, and we intend to continue to call the variety Mrs. Taft to our cut flower trade. Had we been the first people in this country to handle the rose we would have called it by its correct name, but as it is we are only calling it by the name by which it is best known.



"The spelling is undoubtedly correct in this article—Rivoire—although the catalogues of different rose men do not agree regarding this. This article states: 'There now seems to be no question about it, so the trade should cease to use the names of Taft and Bulgarie for this variety.' I would state in this connection, however, that there is still some doubt regarding the correct name of this rose, and would refer you to the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. Alexander Montgomery, Jr., was here a short time ago and stated that a French rosarian visited his father recently at the Waban Rose Conservatories and saw this rose growing and flatly denied that it was Antoine Rivoire. I would also refer you to Mr. Heller, of the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind. In conversation with him at Cincinnati he told me he had imported roses supposed to be Antoine Rivoire on six different occasions. Twice he received this rose, twice he received a rose similar to it in all general characteristics, this second variety being in our opinion Prince de Bulgarie, and twice he received stock of this rose and another lot of Bulgarie mixed, and he is of the opinion that the stock of the two varieties was mixed in Europe, as they are alike in all general characteristics.

"We are cataloguing this rose under the name Mrs. Taft, with the name Antoine Rivoire in brackets."

Apparently the end to be desired is that the trade should know that, in this country, the names Taft, Bulgarie and Rivoire all call for the same rose, for, if the time ever should come when they do not call for the same rose, there will be "confusion worse confounded."

EELWORMS IN ROSE SOIL.

I should be pleased to have you give me a little information in regard to my American Beauties. The plants are all new. We are cutting a good crop. The benches are five inches deep and are filled with a compost consisting of about one-fourth well rotted manure and three-fourths soil. The roots are mostly near the surface and a close examination seems to show that they are infested with eelworms. Here and there a strong, healthy plant turns yellow, then loses its foliage and dies, seemingly without any cause. We run the houses at a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees and a day temperature of 64 to 68 degrees. The plants are watered as evenly as possible and are not affected with spot or mildew. Can you suggest a remedy? E. M. S.

Basket of My Maryland Roses and Valley.

Sterilization of the soil with steam before planting is the best way to get rid of eelworms and other pests infesting the soil. This, of course, can not be done when the plants are in the benches, and the next best remedy is carbon bisulphide. Bore holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way with a sharp pointed stick. This is best done when the soil is damp, as the fumes of the carbon are then more penetrating. Pour a small teaspoonful of the carbon into each hole and at once cover it. Go over the benches in this way carefully and you should kill out the eelworms. The carbon costs 25 cents per pound can at retail. Naked lights should not be placed near it, as it is rather of an explosive nature. The carbon will not harm the plants. C. W.

KAISERIN ROSES FOR EASTER.

Would a house of Kaiserin roses, rested immediately after Christmas and pruned back hard, be in crop for Easter? They are 2 and 3 years old and are big plants. Would you advise a thorough or only a slight rest for them before pruning? J. W. M.

A slight rest and not a thorough one would be best. Kaiserin is not a winter rose or even a spring one and gives its best returns in hot weather. It hangs fire longer than most of the other roses used for forcing. While you can probably get a moderate Easter crop, you will be more certain of a good crop by giving a longer rest and holding them for Memorial day, a time when the flowers are just as valuable as at Easter. C. W.

GLADIOLUS THE BRIDE.

Will Gladiolus The Bride, if planted now in a lettuce house between the lettuce, be in bloom for Easter?

J. W. M.

Gladiolus The Bride, planted now in a lettuce house, where the usual night temperature is 40 degrees, would not be in flower for Easter. It is late now to start these small-flowered gladioli. The proper time is during October or the first half of November. The bulbs by this time must have lost much of their vitality. Gladioli such as The Bride, Peach Blossom, etc., to flower early in April, should now be well sprouted, and in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees after January 1 will flower from March 25 to April 10, according to the nature of the season. Bulbs planted now would not flower before early May in a lettuce house temperature. C. W.

BAYS AND RHODODENDRONS.

Would you please tell me how to propagate bay trees, and what time of year, and how to propagate rhododendron or rose bay? J. W. N.

The bay, Laurus nobilis, is propagated from well ripened cuttings four to five inches long, placing them in clean sand and keeping close and moist until rooted. Practically all bay trees used in America are imported from Belgium. They are planted out there in prepared beds, lifted and stored over winter in light sheds just clear of freezing, and then planted out again in spring.

Rhododendrons are propagated from seeds, layers and by grafting. For our American climate R. maximum or R. Catawbiense are the best stocks to use. R. ponticum, much used in Europe, is not hardy here and any plants imported which are grafted on that stock will have but a short lease of life outdoors. Grafting is the usual form of propagating adopted. Little of this is as yet done in America, owing to the low prices at which good European grown plants can be procured and delivered here. Side grafting is generally adopted, occasionally cleft grafting. The stocks should be in pots in a cool greenhouse. Cut the leaves halfway back on the scions. Early spring and late summer are the two best seasons to do the grafting. The stocks should not be cut back when grafting is done; wait a year for this; and care must be taken to shade the plants and keep a close and moist atmosphere until the graft has united with the stock. C. W.

BOUGAINVILLEAS.

I have several large plants of Bougainvillea Sanderiana growing in the center bed in my greenhouse. They are well established, having been planted three years, and have made fine growths, running to the ridge, sixteen feet high, but they do not bloom. The growths are strong and vigorous. The soil in which they are growing is fairly rich, but I have used no manure or fertilizer of any kind. Can you inform me what I should do with them to induce them to bloom? W. H. H. R.

Bougainvilleas planted out as yours are should flower freely. The most probable cause of their not blooming is that they have been kept continuously not affected with spot or mildew. Can you suggest a remedy? E. M. S.

Sterilization of the soil with steam before planting is the best way to get rid of eelworms and other pests infesting the soil. This, of course, can not be done when the plants are in the benches, and the next best remedy is carbon bisulphide. Bore holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way with a sharp pointed stick. This is best done when the soil is damp, as the fumes of the carbon are then more penetrating. Pour a small teaspoonful of the carbon into each hole and at once cover it. Go over the benches in this way carefully and you should kill out the eelworms. The carbon costs 25 cents per pound can at retail. Naked lights should not be placed near it, as it is rather of an explosive nature. The carbon will not harm the plants. C. W.

KAISERIN ROSES FOR EASTER.

Would a house of Kaiserin roses, rested immediately after Christmas and pruned back hard, be in crop for Easter? They are 2 and 3 years old and are big plants. Would you advise a thorough or only a slight rest for them before pruning? J. W. M.

A slight rest and not a thorough one would be best. Kaiserin is not a winter rose or even a spring one and gives its best returns in hot weather. It hangs fire longer than most of the other roses used for forcing. While you can probably get a moderate Easter crop, you will be more certain of a good crop by giving a longer rest and holding them for Memorial day, a time when the flowers are just as valuable as at Easter. C. W.

GLADIOLUS THE BRIDE.

Will Gladiolus The Bride, if planted now in a lettuce house between the lettuce, be in bloom for Easter? J. W. M.

Gladiolus The Bride, planted now in a lettuce house, where the usual night temperature is 40 degrees, would not be in flower for Easter. It is late now to start these small-flowered gladioli. The proper time is during October or the first half of November. The bulbs by this time must have lost much of their vitality. Gladioli such as The Bride, Peach Blossom, etc., to flower early in April, should now be well sprouted, and in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees after January 1 will flower from March 25 to April 10, according to the nature of the season. Bulbs planted now would not flower before early May in a lettuce house temperature. C. W.

BAYS AND RHODODENDRONS.

Would you please tell me how to propagate bay trees, and what time of year, and how to propagate rhododendron or rose bay? J. W. N.

The bay, Laurus nobilis, is propagated from well ripened cuttings four to five inches long, placing them in clean sand and keeping close and moist until rooted. Practically all bay trees used in America are imported from Belgium. They are planted out there in prepared beds, lifted and stored over winter in light sheds just clear of freezing, and then planted out again in spring.

Rhododendrons are propagated from seeds, layers and by grafting. For our American climate R. maximum or R. Catawbiense are the best stocks to use. R. ponticum, much used in Europe, is not hardy here and any plants imported which are grafted on that stock will have but a short lease of life outdoors. Grafting is the usual form of propagating adopted. Little of this is as yet done in America, owing to the low prices at which good European grown plants can be procured and delivered here. Side grafting is generally adopted, occasionally cleft grafting. The stocks should be in pots in a cool greenhouse. Cut the leaves halfway back on the scions. Early spring and late summer are the two best seasons to do the grafting. The stocks should not be cut back when grafting is done; wait a year for this; and care must be taken to shade the plants and keep a close and moist atmosphere until the graft has united with the stock. C. W.

BOUGAINVILLEAS.

I have several large plants of Bougainvillea Sanderiana growing in the center bed in my greenhouse. They are well established, having been planted three years, and have made fine growths, running to the ridge, sixteen feet high, but they do not bloom. The growths are strong and vigorous. The soil in which they are growing is fairly rich, but I have used no manure or fertilizer of any kind. Can you inform me what I should do with them to induce them to bloom? W. H. H. R.

Bougainvilleas planted out as yours are should flower freely. The most probable cause of their not blooming is that they have been kept continuously moist at the root and growing, whereas they need to be kept tolerably dry at the root, to ripen their wood after the flowering season has passed. I would advise keeping them much drier at the root, starting now. Never mind if much of the foliage falls; that is only to be expected. Prune back the plants well before starting them into growth again. Give the soil about them a good loosening up, remove the upper portion and give a top-dressing of loam, sand and cow manure. Syringe freely until the plants break, but don't water too freely until growth is well started. If rested, pruned and started up thus, you should have no trouble in getting an abundant bloom on them. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Antirrhinums.

Where late mums are being cleared, snapdragons make an excellent succession crop. Some growers dot gladioli among them, but it is far better to keep the two crops separate; one only spoils the other. Be sure to give the soil a liberal manuring and spading over before planting the snapdragons.

Blooming plants which are now giving a fine crop of spikes will require occasional waterings with liquid manure, and a top-dressing of bone or sheep manure lightly scratched in about them will be appreciated.

There is a great and growing demand for rooted cuttings of antirrhinums. People are only beginning to appreciate them as winter flowers. Pink sells much the best, then white and yellow. As all flowering shoots carry an abundant crop of cuttings, it is possible to do a lot of propagating without in any way sacrificing flowering shoots, as for instance with carnations. These root readily with carnation cuttings. Do not allow too many shoots to grow up from each plant if you want fancy spikes. If, however, you have a better sale for small or medium spikes, you can let them all grow.

Wallflowers.

Now is a good time to place a batch of wallflowers in a cool greenhouse. They dislike much heat and the flowers are entirely lacking in substance when grown warm. Wallflowers are a popular market flower in Europe, their delightful odor being pleasing to practically everyone. Here we, unfortunately, cannot grow them outdoors except in the warmer states, but there is a good demand for bunches of them in the big flower markets in winter and early spring. All the up-to-date retailers keep a steady supply on hand when obtainable. The popular colors are blood red and golden yellow. In order to secure the big wallflower plants, which will give a wealth of flowers in winter, the seed should be sown in May or June, not later. Too often the sowing is delayed until August, and the plants started this late, while they will flower, are too small to be profitable.

Marguerites.

For winter flowering it is neither practical nor profitable to have the marguerite plants in benches, unless they are unusually shallow and the plants have them well filled with roots before winter. Marguerites, to flower them early, should have their roots confined in pots or narrow boxes. These can be stood on a bench with soil below them, so that they can root through. They will then give a good winter crop of flowers. Where flowers are needed through May and June, it is a good plan to bench them, as by this method strong stems and fine flowers are to be had. Plants in pots for Easter flowering will still need some pinching. This may be discontinued after January 10. Give them any necessary repotting, using a rich compost, and be sure to always give them an abundance of water. The new double white variety, Mrs. F. Sander, has undoubtedly come to stay. It is an even better winter bloomer than Queen Alexandra, from which one should judge it was a sport, and makes a nice pot plant.

Freesias.

Never mind if you did not succeed in getting your freesia crop in for Christmas; the chances are that if you had grown them warm some would have opened, and it would have caused the stems to become weak and the flowers soft. First-class freesias, especially the variety Purity, are always in demand at good prices through January and February. Keep the pans, pots or flats close up to the glass. Water abundantly and feed frequently but in weak doses; heavy doses of liquid manure will cause the ends of the leaves to turn brown, thus largely disfiguring the plants and entailing a lot of trimming to make them salable. Heavy fumigations, especially with tobacco stems, will cause the same browning, as will hydrocyanic acid gas. If the freesias are cut with long stems close to the ground, it will not pay to carry them over another year; if, on the other hand, the foliage is not sacrificed, they will produce splendid bulbs which can be relied upon to flower freely the following year.

Easter Lilies.

Now that Christmas crops are out of the way it is possible to take out the lilies, which are probably crowded on some of the benches or below them, and give them every possible attention and care from this time on. Longiflorums should be through the soil now. In the case of multiflorums a temperature of 55 degrees at night will suffice, while Formosas will do nicely at 50 degrees as a minimum, but with giganteums, which after all are the leading variety grown for Easter, the plants do much better if given warm treatment from start to finish. Give these, therefore, 60 degrees at night and if they are backward 65 degrees will be better. If, perchance, the plants are already four to six inches high, let them have the cooler end of the house. Remember that for two months now we shall have the lowest temperature of the year and if you want your plants in flower at Easter, which comes April 7, or nine days earlier than in 1911, buds must be showing plainly in the last week of February.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

IT MAY BE A SPORT.

We are sending under separate cover some samples of chrysanthemums. The pink ones are supposed to be Enguehard, which we grew for two years. In the third year the white ones appeared and we have been growing them since that time. We should like to know whether the white mum is a sport or a variety that is known in commerce. The type seems to be well established and it is a good, strong grower. We have never grown it to a larger size, as this is a good size for our trade.

W. A. W.

The blooms were completely gone when the samples reached me; so I did not have an opportunity to see them at all. If the foliage is identical with Enguehard in every respect and the flower is the same, flowering at the same time, it is evidently a sport. I do not know that Enguehard, so far, has sported white. As a rule pink varieties do not sport white, but of course there are exceptions to every rule.

Next year W. A. W. can, if he wishes, readily ascertain whether or not it is a sport of Enguehard, by sending it to the committees appointed by the Chrysanthemum Society to judge seedlings and sports. If six flowers are sent, accompanied by one of the parent flower, then its identity can be readily established.

The reason I think it entirely possible it is a true sport, is because this year we are distributing a bronze sport of Enguehard, called Antique, and when a plant begins to show a sportive tendency it often sports at practically the same time in widely scattered places and also sports in one or more colors. The bronze sport came two years ago and it is quite possible that a white came at the same time.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cypripedium Leeanum.

Next to insigne, and immediately following it in flowering, comes C. Leeanum. The flowers of this cypripedium, while not borne on quite so stout stems as insigne, are really handsomer and worth more money, as their dorsal sepal, with its great breadth, and their attractive, showy flowers at once rivet one's attention. Cypripedium Spicerianum x C. insigne produced this fine market variety, and anyone wanting a companion to C. insigne should get some of C. Leeanum; it is of easy culture, flowers freely and as an individual plant is even better than C. insigne, unless some of its choice yellow forms are included. Both C. insigne and C. Leeanum do better in fibrous loam than in fern root. I give them a night temperature of 60 degrees in winter and provide a little shade even in the middle of winter. The great enemies of cypripediums are thrips and red spider. These soon disfigure the Leeanums, but if a generally moist atmosphere is kept, a high night temperature guarded against and the plants sprayed on clear days, these pests should not trouble them when once they are located. Sponge the affected plants carefully with soap and water. Aphine has also been found to be good.

Odontoglossum Crispum.

The past hot summer was extremely trying on these semi-alpine orchids and the improvement many have been making for two or three years preceding was largely lost. Now, thanks to cool weather, the plants are again picking up and will, failing unforeseen contingencies, give a fine crop of flowers the coming spring. While the odontoglossums want little of our broiling summer sun, they should, during our winter months, get as much of old Sol's rays as possible. It is utterly wrong to give them a dark north space, where in midwinter no sun will strike them for months. It is also a mistake to give them so low a night temperature. We can educate them to 50 or even 55 degrees, and, given this night temperature and plenty of sun, it is really astonishing how much progress they will make. The leaves should take on a bronzy hue. This makes them harder and better fitted to stand our, to them, severe summers. It is better to make but sparing use of sphagnum moss for surfacing the pots, as it is liable to bring a crop of the small shell snails, which raise havoc with the young flower stems as they appear. Wrap the base of each stalk in cotton-wool, as a preventive of their attacks. A night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees suits odontoglossums better in midwinter than one 5 degrees or more lower.

Cœlogyne Cristata.

The new bulbs of Cœlogyne cristata are now well made up and flower spikes are pushing from their bases, strong bulbs bearing two spikes in many cases. Though C. cristata requires a liberal water supply while growing and enjoys occasional doses of liquid manure, it should now have a much reduced supply of water—not, of course, to the extent of causing any shriveling of the bulbs. This orchid is one which dislikes a high temperature and no attempt should be made to force it into flower. The colder end of the cattleya house is the warmest location it should have in winter, while in summer it does better with the really cold orchids, such as odontoglossums and masdevallias. For general work, few orchids are as valuable as C. cristata, and as it is inexpensive and easily grown, any country florist able to grow a few varieties should include it. There is an extremely poor type, characterized by round bulbs, which flowers sparsely and carries small racemes of narrow-petaled flowers. There is a lot of this in cultivation, but it is of little value. The Chatsworthi type is the one to grow; this has long, oval bulbs and broad-petaled flowers, carried four to seven on a raceme. The variety C. cristata Lemoniana, with pale lemon lip, and C. cristata alba, pure white, follow the Chatsworthi variety in flowering and should always be included.

Pans and baskets are better for cœlogynes than pots. Fill these half full of broken crocks and let the other half be fern fiber, with some sphagnum and charcoal added. Raise the plants well over the tops of the pans. When breaking them up, use wire pegs to firm them. The plants will not flower much the year after being repanned, so it is not wise to overhaul the whole of the plants in one season.

SWEET PEAS DO NOT THRIVE.

I have some sweet peas, winter varieties, which, when sown in a bench in my carnation house in August, germinated satisfactorily, but when about two or three inches high they began to lose their leaves and wither away. I have resown them, and, although not so bad, they do not seem to thrive. The soil is a light, sandy loam, with a little lime added, and they have been carefully watered. I should be glad to receive any information on the subject.

S. J.

It is possible that the trouble may be in the seed rather than in the compost. If rather old, the seed may germinate but may never display much vitality. Try sowing the seed in flats of pure sand, and later pot the plants off singly, using sandy loam to which has been added some old hotbed manure or mushroom manure. Do not use any fresh manure. Avoid chemicals. Do not use any lime in the soil. This should not be necessary, and if used in excess it is much more harmful than helpful, as it releases the ammonia from the manure in the soil, leaving it much impoverished.

C. W.

SWEET PEAS TURNING YELLOW.

I am enclosing a couple of Christmas Pink sweet peas. Will you be kind enough to state what causes the back of the flowers at the top to come with a sort of yellow tinge on the edge of the pink? They will not bleach out in the sun and will not open right. I was troubled all of last winter in the same way. The white sorts do not do it so badly. Is it caused by fumigating? They were in good condition until about two weeks ago. They come all right in the spring of the year.

C. S. L.

The most likely cause of your trouble is a too low night temperature. This should be kept at 48 to 50 degrees as a minimum during winter, for plants that are flowering. The trouble is likely to be aggravated during long spells of cold, sunless weather, and if you can give a little more heat it will improve them. Do not force them in any way; temperatures of 55 degrees on dull days and 60 to 65 degrees as a maximum on sunny days are about right. Ventilate freely on every possible occasion. Do not use tobacco stems for fumigating. Tobacco dust answers well; also some of the nicotine papers. No scorching will result if these are used.

SOIL AND THE FLORIST

SOME ELEMENTARY FACTS.

[A paper by Harry F. Good, of Springfield, O., read before the Springfield Florists' Club, December 11, 1911.]

Soil consists of the disintegrated material of the hard crust of the earth, mixed with decayed vegetable matter. This disintegration is effected partly by the chemical action of oxygen, carbonic acid and the other acid or alkaline substances brought by the atmosphere to bear upon rocks, and partly by the wearing action of water in a fluid state or in the form of glaciers, or by its bursting force when frozen in deep clefts.

Soils produced by running water, floods and tides, are found along the banks or at the mouths of rivers and are generally called alluvial soil. Those produced by glacial action are called drift soils. Both of these forms of soil are generally found at great distances from the rocks of whose disintegrated materials they are composed. By far the greater amount of soil has been formed by the weathering of rock under atmospheric influence and is generally found close to or overlying the rocks from which it has been produced.

Just beneath the stratum of earth which supplies nourishment to plant life is a mass of earth or rock which is unmixed with decayed vegetable matter and is known as subsoil. This subsoil may or may not be similar in its geological constitution to the soil, and, owing to the absence of vegetable matter, is generally lighter than the latter.

Fertile Soils From Barren Rocks.

Every species of rock has produced its soil, but the older formations, from their greater hardness and power to resist atmospheric action, produce, in proportion to their exposed surfaces, less soil than do the secondary or tertiary groups.

The fertility of the soil has no relation to the chronological succession of the strata of the earth's crust. Igneous rocks, or those produced by fire, generally produce a fertile soil, though such rocks seldom become thoroughly disintegrated. Metamorphic rocks, or those stratified rocks which, under pressure, heat, chemical action, etc., have changed from their original structure, as limestone to marble, furnish an extremely poor quality, as do also the Silurian systems. The Lias, Oölitic and Wealden systems produce clay soils of considerable fertility, but of the densest texture and an intractable character. Soils formed from the cretaceous or chalk group are variable in quality, but when mixed with sand or clay they display considerable fertility, their greatest fault being that of not sufficiently retaining moisture.

The Constituents of Soils.

Soils, however they may vary in their geological character, are all resolvable into a few elements; namely, the various compounds of alumina, iron, manganese, the four alkaline metals, the seven alkaline earths and the four organic, elementary substances. These eighteen bodies supply, singly or in combination, all the constituents necessary to the growth of plants, each of them having its own portion of the plant to sustain. The silica, or non-metal element, produces strength and rigidity in the stems. Alumina gives tenacity to the soil, thereby rendering it a stable support. Manganese perfects the seeds, iron absorbing oxygen and ammonia from the atmosphere and giving it up as required by the plant. Of these ingredients, silica, alumina and lime, along with the matter derived from organic bodies, constitute the bulk of the soil. The other ingredients exist only in minute quantity and hence is derived the common, quadruple division of soils into siliceous or sandy, argillaceous or clayey, calcareous or limy soils, and humus or vegetable mold.

The Weekly Florists' Review

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

Mechanical Condition of Soil.

It is not sufficient that soil possess all the ingredients necessary for rendering it fertile, or that these ingredients are in a sufficiently pulverized state to enable them to be absorbed. There is, besides this, a mechanical condition necessary. A soil which possesses too great a proportion of silica is too little retentive of moisture, and has not sufficient texture to be an effective support of tall plants. A soil in which calcareous matter abounds is too dry, while one in which alumina predominates is generally too retentive of moisture, and a great excess of alumina renders soil so extremely tenacious as to be almost incapable of being reduced to a proper mechanical state. The soil which is the most perfect is composed of about equal proportions of silica and alumina and is known as loam; it is called sandy or clayey loam, according as the silica or alumina predominates.

Relation of Soil to Subsoil.

But the physical quality of soils does not wholly depend upon their composition. They are largely affected by the depth of the soil itself and the quality of the subsoil. Should the soil and subsoil both be retentive, or both porous, the ill effects of these states as to dryness or moisture are largely increased. If porous and retentive soils of good depth rest upon subsoils of a contrary nature, the defects of the former are, to a considerable degree, amended. Hence we see that the advantages and disadvantages of these conditions must, to a large extent, be judged by the prevailing character of the climates. A porous subsoil in a cold and moist district is generally preferable, and vice versa. Each class of soil, when it possesses proper chemical ingredients in quantity sufficient for the wants of plants and of a texture favorable to their growth, excels for certain species of plants. Clay loams are unequal for production of wheat and beans; sandy loams are suitable for barley, rye and root crops, while a combination is well suited for other cultivated crops or for permanent pasture.

Vegetable Mold, or Humus.

Besides the calcareous or marly soil, which is sometimes classed as sandy soil, we have the humous soil, which has characteristics all its own. It is not devoid of consistency, like the sandy soils, or retentive of moisture, like the clayey soils, but in its natural state is spongy, of a dark color, and when dry becomes inflammable. It consists wholly, or to a great extent, of vegetable matter and is found in perfection in the flat bottom lands of America, in our ancient forests and in the peat beds of many parts of the world. In its decomposed state it is the richest of soils, but in peat form it requires long and continued drainage and the application of decomposing agents before it can be rendered fit for use in the production of crops.

Improvement of Soil.

It may be plainly seen from the foregoing that the improvement of a soil is effected either by supplying the substance required by plants, by altering its depth and texture, or by removing excess or supplying deficiency of moisture. The first is done by the addition of manures to the soil, care being taken that the manure contains the proper ingredients and in such a condition as to be assimilated by the plants, either directly or indirectly through the soil and by the more thorough exposure of the soil to the action of the atmosphere. Thus, a soil which gathers a coat of leathery scum or moss over it is injurious to plant growth, because the soil in the pot can not properly come in contact with the properties in the atmosphere. The second form of improvement is effected by the mixture of marl or clay with sandy, chalky or peat soils, and of lime ashes or burned clay with tenacious clay soils, or by mixing the subsoil with top soil if it differs in quality. This subsoil should be brought to the surface and exposed to the action of the frost. The third is accomplished by drainage and by sprinkling or irrigating.

[To be concluded.]

BOSTON.

The Christmas Market.

Everyone concedes that it was a great Christmas. Wholesalers, retailers and growers all are pleased, and that is saying a good deal. Never was December warmer than in 1911. This was a wonderful help to shippers, and to the plant growers it was a veritable boon. It has become somewhat hackneyed to say it was a plant Christmas, but certainly more of these were sold than ever, and about every plant specialist is tired, but happy.

Poinsettias were in great demand. The short, stocky ones were what people wanted. There was less call for the single plants in 6-inch pots. Azaleas sold well, there being a big call especially for the dwarf varieties, Mme. Petrick and Hexe. Lorraine begonias were rather overdone. The new Glory of Cincinnati was seen in quantity and sold well. As it is a better house plant than Lorraine, it will be more seen in 1912. The only objection to it is that the leaves are brittle and break in packing. Primroses, cyclamens, ardisias, cypripediums, berried hollies, aucubas, skimmias, Erica melanthera, solanums, Otaheite oranges, nephrolepis, crotons, palms and araucarias were leaders among plants.

Coming to cut flowers, there were some fine Beauties. The best easily made $12 per dozen. In Richmonds, some were offered with stems as long as ninety inches. The top grades of these were offered at $9 a dozen, but a more popular grade was that selling at $15 to $25 per hundred. In addition to Richmonds there were some fine Rhea Reids, which realized fancy prices. Killarneys sold well, but, as is usual at Christmas, White Killarney was rather hard to move. There was a steady call for Hillingdon, Ward, Waddell and Safrano, but no great advance in prices.

Carnations were not in as heavy crop as anticipated and sold remarkably well. Fenn, Beacon, Scarlet Glow, Victory, Octoroon and some fancy pinks made $12 per hundred, some a little more. White was, of course, the hardest to move, but from $6 to $12 were the ruling prices on carnations. Some whites and pickled goods had to go as low as $4. Violets made $1 and $1.50 per hundred. There was a heavy lot of sweet peas at $1 and $1.50 per hundred.

Valley made $3 and $4 per hundred, poinsettias $2 to $6 per dozen, cypripediums $8 to $12 per hundred, cattleyas $5 to $9 per dozen. Percivaliana making the lower price. Antirrhinum was extra fine at $4 to $12, and there was some splendid mignonette. Marguerites sold well, especially yellows. Paper Whites and stevia were each inclined to be druggy December 23. Yellow trumpet narcissi made $5 to $6 per hundred and tulips $4 to $5. There was some fine freesia at $6 to $8 per hundred. Gardenias were in fair supply. The best quality flowers made high prices. For asparagus there was a very heavy demand, also for adiantum and hardy ferns, while the call for wreathing was phenomenal.

Prices still held up well December 26, but continued mild weather will soon cause a drop.

Various Notes.

W. J. Thurston, the courteous manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, was the surprised but delighted recipient of a beautiful gold watch and chain December 23, subscribed for by the growers, salesmen and other habitues of the market.

W. C. Stickel, of Lexington, has extra fine carnations this season. His varieties are Fenn, Pink Delight, Lady Bountiful, White Wonder and Beacon.

The Montrose Greenhouses had an extra heavy cut of roses for the holidays. Three Killarneys, light pink, deep pink and white; Mrs. Aaron Ward, Perle, Richmond and Lady Hillingdon are their specialties.

Among the best of the late mums seen for Christmas were Intensity, Nonin and Enguehard from H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park.

H. M. Robinson & Co. were fairly swamped with business, which far exceeded all previous records. In addition to their heavy cut flower and plant trade, the demand for wreathing and other greens was enormous and taxed their resources.

W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale, had a beautiful lot of poinsettias for the holidays, as well as fine cyclamens, Lorraines and azaleas. He also had a good pick from his carnation houses.

Penn, on Bromfield street, hired two nearby stores for the plant trade. These additions, with a much enlarged main store, proved none too much space. Their plant trade was tremendous, due in considerable measure to heavy advertising in the daily papers.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, had a heavy holiday pick of high grade carnations. His varieties were Pink Delight, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon and Fenn. The two latter realized top notch prices.

MacMulkin, on Boylston street, had his annual attractive scarlet window for Christmas. His plant trade was heavy.

Carbone's, on Boylston street, was a veritable hive of industry. In addition to a tremendous plant and cut flower trade, a heavy business was done in Italian ware, in which Mr. Carbone specializes. Some fine pink bouvardia seen here was grown near Philadelphia.

"Practically sold out of everything carrying a flower or berry," was the comment of H. H. Bartsch, of the W. W. Edgar Co. This firm had by far the heaviest Christmas trade on record.

The Waban Conservatories had a fine cut of high grade Beauties, as well as splendid Richmond, Killarneys, Hillingdon and other sorts. Mr. Montgomery is enthusiastic over Hillingdon and says it will produce ten flowers to one of Mrs. Ward.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be January 23. Installation of officers will be followed by a fine entertainment. It will be ladies' night and regular business will be shortened as much as possible.

Welch Bros. had a banner Christmas business. Their only trouble was in being able to secure sufficient material with which to fill their orders.

A free exhibition of 400 photographs of the flora and scenery of western China, taken by E. H. Wilson on his last trip, will be held in Horticultural hall, December 27 to 31.

Albert Roper's new pink seedling carnation, resembling Pink Delight in color, but more in the style of Enchantress, realized the highest price of any of its color and equaled the finest scarlets. It makes an immense flower.

E. H. Borowski, of Roslindale, as a grower of Lorraine begonias is in the first rank. His plants this season were unusually fine.

The Rosary, on Boylston street, J. J. Casey proprietor, and Arnold & Petros, across the way on Huntington avenue, each had attractive window displays and a fine Christmas trade.

Sidney Hoffman's immense store on Massachusetts avenue was the Mecca for a host of buyers. Auto trucks were kept busy trying to keep up with the deliveries.

The H. E. Fiske Seed Co. did quite a business in Lorraines, azaleas, bulbous plants in pans and other seasonable flowers, the windows looking as attractive as those of the regular florists.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. did a heavy Christmas business in all lines of flowers, plants and sundries. The finely equipped and convenient new salesroom at 1 Park street, is now completed and is found a great convenience.

OBITUARY.

Victor Lemoine.

In the death of Victor Lemoine, at Nancy, France, December 12, the floricultural world loses one of its most venerable and venerated men, for M. Lemoine was 89 years of age and had, in his long life of gardening, developed more new and valuable varieties in more different families of plants than probably any other of the keen minds that have been turned in this direction. His tastes were cosmopolitan and, taking up first one genus and then another, he wrought wonder after wonder. To catalogue even a small part of the plants raised by him and put in commerce by his firm would give these pages the appearance of a botanical dictionary — they number many hundreds and include some of the most important plants in the American trade today. Of these may be mentioned Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. The gladiolus received a large share of his attention, as did the begonia, clematis, deutzia, lilac, peony, hydrangea, weigela, delphinium, pyrethrum, pentstemon, streptocarpus, mimulus, spiræa, pelargonium, abutilon, lobelia, primula, montbretia and many more.

Victor Lemoine was born at Delme, France, October 21, 1822. His ancestors for generations back had been gardeners. After completing his education at Vic-sur-Seille he devoted several years to traveling and then worked successively for Bauman, at Bollweiller, Louis Van Houtte, at Ghent, and Miellez, at Lille, France, and in 1850 established himself in a small way as a florist and landscape gardener at Nancy. There he was a member of the town council from 1871 to 1888. June 13, 1885, he was made a knight and April 3, 1894, an officer of the Legion of Honor. He was a member of all the great international horticultural bodies and was the first foreigner to receive the Veitch Medal of Honor from the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain. Only a few weeks ago the trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society awarded him the George Robert White Medal of Honor for the current year, as the person who has done the most during the year or in recent years to advance the interests of horticulture in its broadest sense.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It was the banner Christmas of all the years, from the retail florists' standpoint. From Saturday morning until Monday night there was no cessation of activity, and when the evening shadows fell December 25 there was nothing much left to sell. The weather was perfect and so mild that plants were delivered without wrapping. Flowers of every kind were purchased at reasonable rates and, with the exception of a few sleepy carnations and colorless roses, the stock offered by the wholesalers was superb.

Business in the wholesale market was dull indeed until the Friday before Christmas. Prices were discouragingly low. The advance then began, and yet values never went beyond reasonable levels and there were no complaints, by the buyers, as in other years. American Beauties sold at the retail stores at $25 a dozen for the best. The finest Richmonds retailed at $12 and Killarneys and the new varieties of roses at $10. From these levels down to about the basis of any good Saturday during the winter season the cut flowers were distributed. The plant trade was enormous. The usual combinations in baskets, boxes and hampers were in evidence. Even palms and ferns sold well. Azaleas were all disposed of. There was nothing left in plants to sell by noon of Christmas, and the demand for cut flowers continued to the end.

The new roses were especially popular and the supply far too small for the demand. All the choice carnations sold at good figures, the red varieties especially so, while Enchantress and the Wards were not far behind. There was not much sleepy and common stock, the most of the shipments being creditable and profitable to the growers.

The variety and quality of the orchid shipments has never been excelled at this season. Prices were held at a reasonable figure, and nothing much was left. Gardenias were in great demand and the best stock was firm at $50 per hundred. There were a few mums, as anticipated, and these were speedily sold at good prices. The usual flood of narcissi, hyacinths, stevia, daisies, wallflowers and mignonette appeared and sold slowly at no increase above the regular prices. Lilies never went above 10 cents, and most of the supply sold at from 6 cents to 8 cents, while 4 cents was top for valley. Violets found a resting place at 75 cents, few selling above that figure. The supply was abundant and the tendency of everything immediately after Christmas, as usual, is toward a lower level.

The plantsmen everywhere announce a complete and satisfactory clean-up. Their prices were reasonable and the local demand absorbed nearly everything they had to offer. Because of this out-of-town shipments were light. The remarkably mild weather was worth many thousands of dollars to the growers, in the light cost of packing and delivery.

All things considered, the Christmas of 1911 may be put on record as the best this city has ever known.

Gardeners' Reunion.

The reunion of the gardeners, old and new, at Thum's, December 21, proved a great success, over 100 attending, many from up the Hudson, from Long Island and as far south as Philadelphia. Nearly everybody bowled from 3 p. m. to 8 p. m., at which hour the call to dinner was sounded. Glen Cove beat Elberon in a bowling match, 758 to 745. Prizes for the highest scores in three games were open to all, and the arrangements of the committee, Messrs. Manda, Marshall and Donlon, were perfect. Prizes were donated by C. H. Totty, Revere Rubber Co., Carroll Elliott, Rickards Bros., Joseph Manda, W. E. Marshall & Co., Burnett Bros., Aphine Mfg. Co., and others. Everybody took part in the contests and bowling continued after the banquet until nearly "sun up" in the morning.

Letters of regret were read from Messrs. Watson, Henderson, Fordham and O'Mara. John Everett was made chairman of the committee, having in view a yearly reunion of a similar character. Ex-president Bartholomew was in the chair and called on Charles Weathered to act as toastmaster. Mr. Weathered was in his happiest mood and kept everyone good natured with his witty sallies: The toasts were:

"The S. A. F.," responded to by C. H. Totty.

"The Old Guard," responded to by Ex-president John Shore.

"The Gardeners," responded to by Wm. Scott, of Elmsford, and Wm. Duffy, of Glen Cove.

"The New York Florists' Club," responded to by Jos. Manda.

"The Press," responded to by J. A. Shaw and W. E. Maynard.

Other speakers were Messrs. Logan, Robertson, Everett, Donlon, Griffin, Gommersell and Duff. The Rickards brothers and W. E. Marshall sang sweetly, and Frank McNichol, of Cedarhurst, made music with the bagpipes.

Various Notes.

The men who make a specialty of Christmas trees, roping, holly and wild smilax have had a wonderful season. The evergreen decorations of the store fronts by the Kervan Co. and Cotsonas & Co. were practical illustrations of possibilities that bore much fruit. Holly became scarce as the week advanced and prices boomed for anything of quality.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht had on exhibition two new roses which they call Siebrecht's Yellow and My Sweetheart, the latter a small and modest pink, especially suitable for debutantes, they say, and resembling Bon Silene.

The rose and carnation conventions at Detroit will see a large representation from New York and vicinity, the party leaving at 5 p. m., Tuesday, January 9, by the Wolverine express on the New York Central.

E. G. Hill and Elmer Smith, while in the city before Christmas, were the guests of Chas. H. Totty, who initiated them in the mysteries of the great white way.

J. K. Allen disposed of several hundred poinsettias in pans and pots for Christmas. His Richmond roses, grown by Robert Schultz, Madison, sold at high water mark, 50 cents each being paid for the best of them. Bobby sent over 3,000 of all grades to the market.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to the family of Frank Petroviski, whose sudden death occurred last week following an operation for appendicitis.

The Geller Florists' Supply Co. shortly will remove to much larger quarters. Mr. Geller says this has been made necessary by the rapid increase of his business during 1911.

Lord & Burnham Co. has the contract for five houses 33x150 at Albion, N. Y., and four houses of similar size at Medina, N. Y., for the Bert Olney Canning Co., of Oneida, these to be devoted to the growing of tomato plants during six months of each year, and to cut flowers, probably chrysanthemums, the balance of the time.

The Greater New York Florists' Association, of Brooklyn, will have its second annual dinner early in February. The committee appointed includes Hugo Jahn, R. G. Wilson, Geo. Laird, J. H. Van Mater and Wm. A. Phillips.

J. F. Marsden, of Far Rockaway, sails for England January 10. His mignonette and carnations are handled by Badgley, Riedel & Meyer.

J. J. Coan, manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., is greatly alarmed over the illness of his mother, at her residence, Short Hills, N. J.

At the great poultry exhibition in Madison Square Garden last week the Stumpp & Walter Co. made one of the most elaborate displays, including everything required in the hen raising business, from food to incubators, several of the latter giving practical demonstration of their utility, new live chicks appearing every hour while the exhibition lasted.

Walter Mott, representing Wm. Elliott & Sons, is making a canvass on Long Island this week.

R. G. Wilson, the Brooklyn retailer, says this was the best Christmas he ever has known, not only for himself but for every retail florist in the City of Churches. His best selling carnation was Brooklyn, in the general dissemination of which he retains a one-third interest with Messrs. Totty and Weber.

The wholesale florists in Brooklyn were completely sold out at noon on Christmas.

Gunther Bros. had their usual side line for the holidays and disposed of several hundred cases of selected holly, realizing from $4 to $5 a case. They say they could have disposed of double the quantity.

Lecakes & Co. had a force of nearly fifty busy day and night on holly wreaths and laurel and pine roping and disposed of every yard of it.

William Kessler's daily sales during Christmas week averaged four figures in blooming plants and Dreyerii ferns, in addition to the cut flowers.

Charles Millang says it was the best Christmas in twenty-five years.

Woodrow & Marketos are much elated with their first Christmas, and disposed of a tremendous lot of plants.

Lion & Co. have removed to 213 Fourth avenue, where they have greatly improved facilities in the new wholesale silk district.

The prize bowling contest for a Christmas turkey was postponed and a handicap match for a bottle of Scotch medicine took its place December 22 between Messrs. Holt, Chadwick, Kakuda and Scott. Holt carried off both the honors and the bottle. J. Austin Shaw.

...NEWS NOTES...

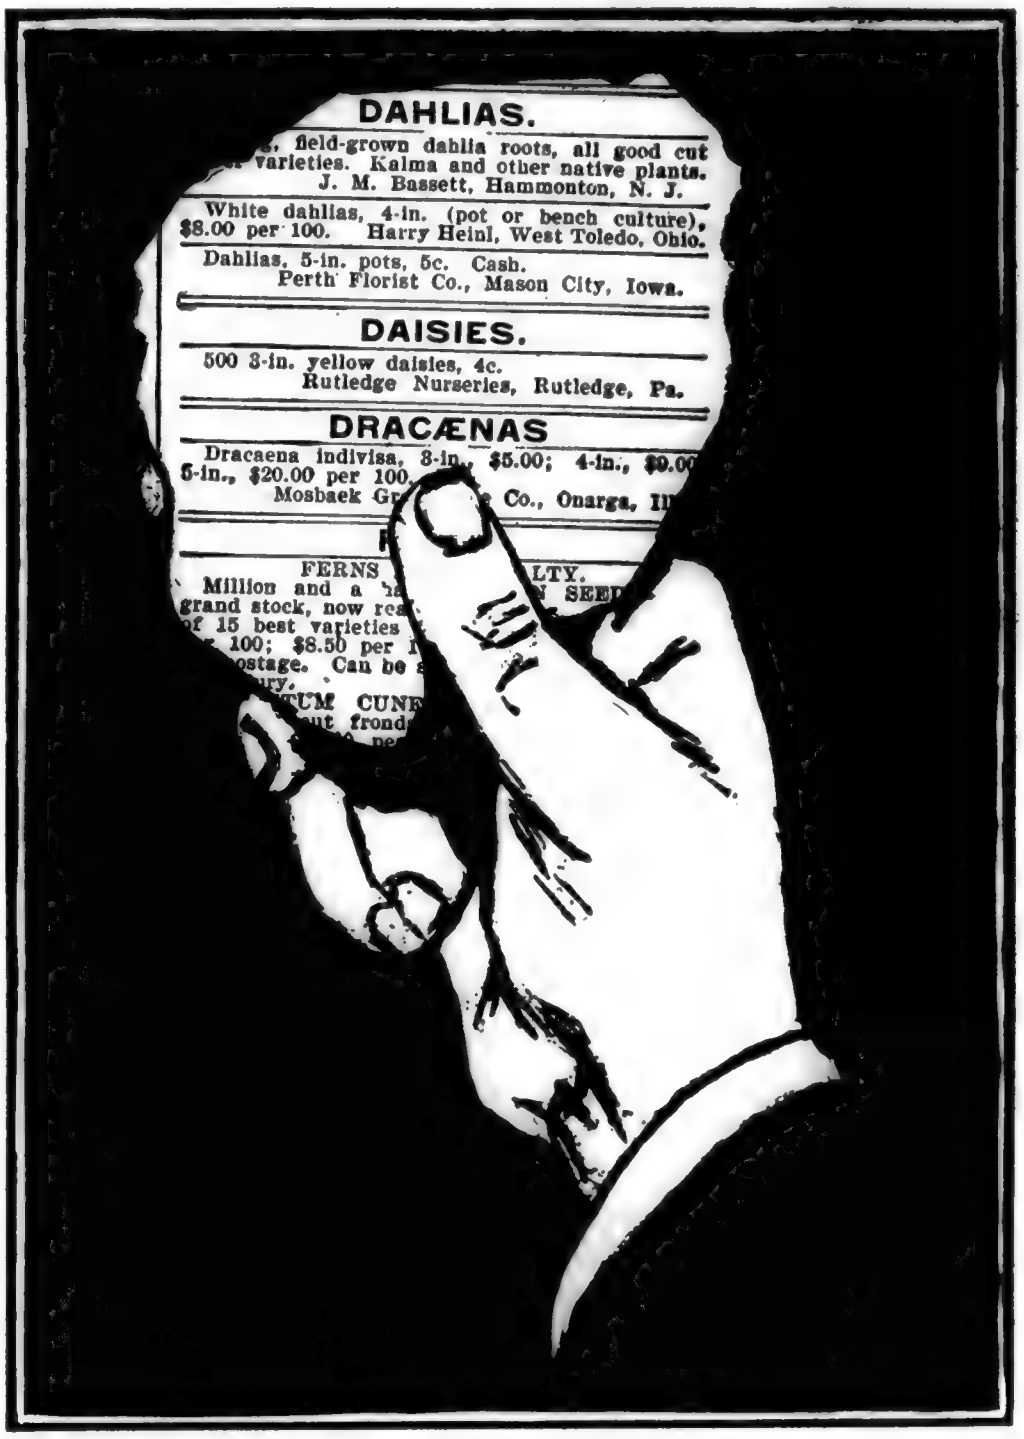
East Hartford, Conn. — Frank W. Richardson is seriously ill at his home, having recently undergone an operation, but is said to be doing as well as could be expected.

Des Plaines, Ill.—C. C. Wakeling, formerly with Hoerber Bros., has taken the position of foreman for the Kemble Floral Co., at Oskaloosa, Ia., and has moved his family there.

Adrian, Mich.—Wm. Wickham reports that Christmas trade was good. Wreaths of all kinds sold out by Sunday night. The supply of holly and boxwood was sold out early. The demand for potted plants was about the same as last year.

Bridgeton, N. J.—Theodore E. Edwards has secured temporary quarters for use as a salesroom until the store he occupied before the fire can be put in suitable condition. His holiday trade was continued without interruption.

Iola, Kan.—John W. Primmer, on East Lincoln street, added two new houses, each 21x112, last summer, and is using them for carnations. In his other houses he grows a general stock. There is a ready sale here and in the neighboring towns for all his output.



Beardstown, Ill.—Frank Bros. say that business has been dull through the autumn in every branch of the trade, but that it is improving now, especially in funeral work. The chrysanthemums were fine this year, but met with a slow sale all the way through in the cut flower line, though the pot plants moved a little better.

Falls City, Neb.—Simanton & Pence have two houses of roses that are especially fine. Their stock includes some Bride, Maid and Ivory, but they expect to omit these three varieties next season and grow the two Killarneys instead. Besides the roses, they grow a general line of stock and they have a total glass area of about 25,000 square feet.

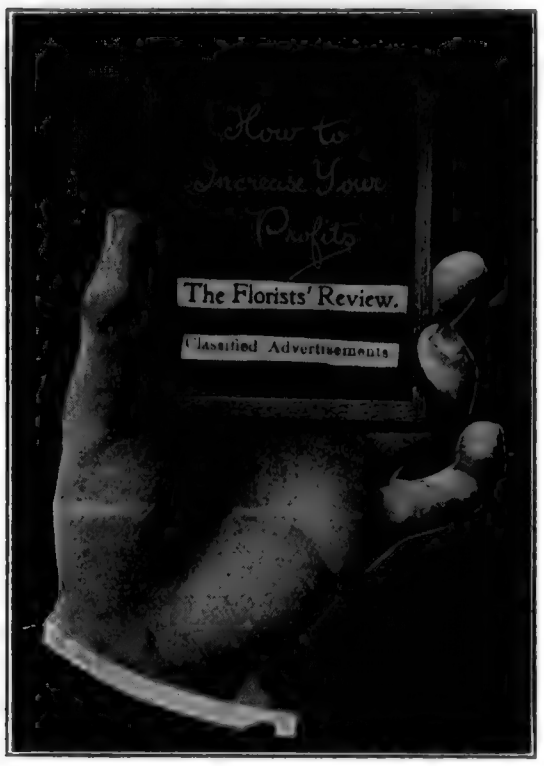
Hutchinson, Kan.—Geo. M. Schurr, of Schurr's Greenhouses, is much pleased with the heavy volume of trade. He has increased his area of glass this season. He has also built a brick smokestack and remodeled the heating system. Though he began business here with a small capital only four years ago, the value of his present establishment proves that his income has been good from the start.

Buffalo, N. Y.—It is stated that Frank P. Baum, the aged Kingsley street florist who died under peculiar circumstances in the Dudley House, in Salamanca, November 17, was robbed of $6,000 on the night of his death and was probably poisoned. Accordingly, a warrant was issued for the arrest of the alleged thief, but at last report he had disappeared and the detectives in charge of the affair had found no clew to his hiding place. Frank J. Baum, who now has the management of the wholesale business once conducted by his father, is pushing the prosecution of the case.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

Lexington, Ky. — Miss Fannie D. White sold 1,500 poinsettias for Christmas and could have used quite a few more. The holiday business was quite the best ever.

Missoula, Mont.—December 21, just in time for the Christmas trade, the R. & S. Flower Store was formally opened. The proprietors are Miss E. Reimers and F. X. Scully.



Baraboo, Wis.—E. T. Ross, though he has been in business here only a few months, has already won a good amount of patronage. He has a neat new greenhouse and office at the corner of East and Eighth streets and a store on Oak street. His boiler is large enough to provide heat for more houses when they are needed.

Cold Spring, N. Y.—J. S. Cunningham says he will never again defer the planting of his carnations to give place for mums, though the demand for the latter was entirely satisfactory. His crop of Enchantress was in fine shape for the Christmas rush. In addition to performing the office of sexton and undertaker, Mr. Cunningham has just been elected chairman of the board of assessors.

Sedalia, Mo.—The Archias Floral Co. has fitted up a cut flower department in the store of the Archias Seed Co., having put in a handsome McCray refrigerator. Two new 25-foot greenhouses have just been completed at the range at tne edge of town.

Cleveland, O.—The J. M. Gasser Co. reports having the best Christmas trade in ten years, but could not get enough pink and red roses to meet the demand. Everything cleaned up well except violets, which dragged a little and had to be forced, although the stock was exceptionally fine.

Haverhill, Mass.—More than $10,000 loss was sustained by Charles H. Kaulbach in a fire that destroyed his home, leveled a large barn to the ground and burned the heating plant and part of his large greenhouses December 11. The fire started in the steam-heating plant in a small building connected with the greenhouses, and it is supposed was caused by an overheated boiler. The wind was blowing from the west at the time and this kept the flames away from the greenhouses, in which there were many valuable plants, the stock being valued at $5,000.

The Review brings results.

That 1912 may be as good a year as 1911 is as much as most of us need hope.

Let the public know that New Year's flowers do not cost so much as Christmas flowers cost.

New Year's is the cut flower day. The plants were sold at Christmas and are out of the running.

Now for Easter, but let's not look so far ahead we neglect to push a little in the interval. Really, it's the steady business that counts.

They will tell you that the automobile has added to the complexity of life. Well, so has it made a new use for holly wreaths—fine little ones to hang in the limousine's windows.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

You all have heard the retailers complain at having to work day and night before a holiday—but did you ever hear what the man said whose trade that year didn't require any night work?

The shortest day of the year was December 22, nine hours and fifty-five minutes, but the next day's greater length was imperceptibly longer so far as the florist was concerned. Ironical, isn't it, that the busiest days of the year also should be the shortest?

CLEAR YOUR SURPLUS.

It is extravagance to let small surpluses go to waste—they easily can be turned into cash by means of an inexpensive advertisement in The Review.

The two-liner did the biz all right. Sold out the bulbs and it is taking a lot of time to answer correspondence from those whose orders I can not fill.—S. C. Mellinger, Calla, O, December 26, 1911.

The Annual Proceedings and Bulletin of the American Rose Society for 1911 has been received from the secretary, Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y. It is a well printed and freely illustrated volume of ninety-six pages and contains the report of the rose society's participation in the National Flower Show at Boston last March, the papers read at the annual meeting, a list of members, list of registrations and the preliminary premium list for the Detroit exhibition, not to speak of some poetry on the rose that evidently appealed to the estimable and indefatigable secretary.

DATE OF EASTER.

The date of Easter, 1912, is April 7. Paste it in your hat.

WHY FLOWER SHOWS FAIL.

You ask "what is the matter" in reference to lack of interest in flower shows.. I will answer: It is because the succession of beautiful displays in retailers' shop-windows furnish the public with a free, continuous flower show of great merit, even in the smaller cities. Orchids, roses, begonias, carnations and many other floral treasures are set before the people daily as they pass the florists' windows. Anyone may go in and out a dozen times a year and study one floral wonder after another as it promptly appears in its season.

Homer Reed.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Taking it by and large, the Christmas of 1911 can be recorded as one of the most generally satisfactory in the history of the Chicago wholesale cut flower market. Supply and demand were much more evenly balanced than in the last two years. The only conspicuous shortages were of Beauties, Richmonds and red carnations, the only surpluses small white carnations, Paper Whites, Romans, lilies and such unimportant items; white carnations were in much smaller surplus than usual and White Killarney cleaned up without serious difficulty. While some houses found it necessary to shade prices on white, the regular Christmas rates held right through much better than in recent years; there was nothing like the eleventh hour collapse of the last two Christmases.

It is just a little early to make comparisons with previous years as to money value of sales. While good average prices right through the three or four days of heavy selling insure an excellent money total, still the highest record usually is made in times of abundant supply, when every buyer's ideas can be met, when the salesmen can keep selling, selling, selling—and even have a little left to sell. While few houses handled as many flowers as last Christmas, still the better average prices make sales compare, on the whole, not badly, and probably the increase is as great as the increase in glass since last December.

The weather conditions for the ten days preceding the rush were unfavorable to the production of stock, so that roses and carnations were not so plentiful as had been expected. It is estimated that Beauties numbered about half last year's record supply.

New Year's

Time to Turn Over a New Leaf If You Haven't Bought of Us In 1911

Why be satisfied with anything but the best? The quality of the stock we handle is the marvel of the market. And we have quantity of everything the trade requires in quantity. If you have not dealt with us, why not open an account for 1912? Write us about it TODAY.

BEAUTIES

We Filled Every Order for Christmas

We have the patronage of the most critical buyers—the stores that handle nothing but the best. Wouldn't YOUR trade appreciate our grade of goods? A large cut for New Year's. Plenty of medium and shorter stems.

VIOLETS

Supply and Demand Both Center Here

Those who know this market recognize our house as Violet headquarters. Single or double, you will need a big lot of Violets for New Year's Day. You will get the cream of the crops if you order of us.

Orchids

Our Cattleyas are of the very choicest quality. If YOUR trade knows Orchids, you should show these.

Valley

Call on us for all the Valley you need—we always have it. Why not place a standing order?

KILLARNEYS

White and Pink

These are in good crop and we can supply as fine stock as this market ever saw, in quantity, for New Year's and for weeks to come. In fact, we never have been so well fixed to fill all orders as we shall be this January.

CARNATIONS

We have a heavy cut of Carnations, and the quality is right up to top notch—no danger of not getting your order filled if you send it to us.

Open all day Sunday, Dec. 31

WM. SCHLATTER & SON 422 Main St. Springfield, Mass.

Always mention the Florists' Review when writing advertisers.

Most houses were short and the few that had a surplus above orders saw no necessity of making much concession to other wholesalers, and many orders were shipped short. Considerable quantities of New York and Pennsylvania Beauties came in and the good ones sold well at prices a shade below what was asked for local stock. Richmond never has been in such large supply for Christmas, but there was nowhere near enough to go around. Killarney, which some of the wholesalers substituted to the extent that they cut the Richmond orders, was just about equal to the market's needs, such price cutting as was reported probably having had some special purpose. White Killarney was a little long. Some houses cleaned up at close to listed prices, but others found it expedient to make concessions. No other rose was in sufficiently large supply to call for special comment.

Red carnations were, as always at Christmas, short of the demand, even at the price, and there was no surplus of Enchantress, some orders going out short because stock was not to be had at the moment. There are various reports as to white. Some were short of the fancy grade and say they could not pick them up. Others had called in, early in the week, all the white they could, and got them out of the way. Yet others had more small whites than there was demand for, making some cheap sales to clear, or even carrying over from the shipping days, when clearances usually are the most complete. Thus the report on carnations depends altogether on who is talking. Such carnations as were carried over to December 26 cleaned up at fair prices.

Violets are an unimportant item with a majority of the houses, but a decidedly important one with several. Reports are various and yet more or less in accord. Most of the violets go to big users, one local store taking 65,000 from one house. They did not pay so much as last year. One large buyer asserted he did not pay over $10 per thousand for singles. It is said small sales of doubles were made as low as 50 cents and there were plenty of sales at 75 cents, but the quality was in keeping with the price. Doubles were extremely poor, many rotted and mostly shakers. While a few sales of specials were made at $2, the bulk of the doubles sold at $10 to $15 per thousand. Singles were of better quality and made better prices, on the average, but few sales in quantity were above $1.50 per hundred.

Poinsettias were more abundant than at any previous Christmas, some extra fine, some cut from pans that had turned out unsalable. On the better grade excellent values were offered, but beyond what are called for by advance orders poinsettias are a rather difficult proposition. The stevia sold would have loaded a hayrack. Cattleyas were only slightly short of the demand, at the price. Lilies were not wanted. Valley just about cleaned up. Paper Whites and Romans were moved with difficulty if at all. A little freesia came in, but the buyers balked at fancy figures. Sweet peas were fewer than had been expected, because of dark days. Mignonette and bouvardia sold well when good.

One of the specially notable features was the high quality of the stock this Christmas, aside from the double violets. There was scarcely anything that showed the marks of pickling. It certainly was the market's best record in this important respect.

December 24 and 25 were ideal for the retailers, so far as weather goes, and had a great deal to do with the satisfactory clean-up that was made. All the retailers seem satisfied. Most of them say the business started early and stayed late, many keeping going till well along in the evening of December 25.

Everything was cut so close last week that not much came in the morning after Christmas. After two beautiful days the weather had turned dark and rainy, but it was thought by most of those in the market that when the growers got down to business there would be a good cut ready. In days of old prices held at the Christmas level until after New Year's—but they don't any more. They promise to do better this week than they did last year and a good New Year's market is expected, for New Year's rapidly is coming

YOU DO THE SELLING—WE SUPPLY THE STOCK

THE STOCK THAT MAKES EASY SELLING FOR YOU

In 1912, as always, the interests of our patrons will be our first consideration. We take more pains than any other house in Chicago to see that every order is filled exactly as wanted. We have all leading varieties of Roses and Carnations, and all other stock in season.

into its own again as a flower day; it will be a big flower day as soon as the public finds out how prices fall after Christmas.

Various Notes.

James Dempsey, who was 19 years of age and had worked for Andrew McAdams for about four years, died December 20, after a short illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held December 23.

It will surprise a good many wholesalers to learn that the store that probably is the largest buyer in this market says Christmas stock, on the average, did not cost quite so much as last year. It was practically all ordered in advance, the buyer not visiting the market from December 19 to 26.

Fire attacked the Buckingham place houses of the George Wittbold Co., Thursday afternoon, December 21, when the Christmas rush was at its height. A house of Boston ferns was completely destroyed and one of the boiler sheds was badly damaged. The heating apparatus escaped without serious injury, however, and the stock in all the other houses was saved. The loss was about $1,500, with no insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. has installed a new water supply system, using a gasoline engine for power.

A. Henderson & Co. are this week closing their first year of business, more than satisfied with the progress made.

It is expected that quite a party will go to Detroit on the night of January 9, to attend the rose and carnation show. P. J. Foley, chairman of the club's transportation committee, doubtless will have an announcement to make in due time.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., has been ill for several days, but staid by the ship until the Christmas rush was over, after which he laid off at his home at Batavia for a few days.

C. M. Dickinson and C. L. Washburn each spent the late hours of Saturday night in decorating churches to which they donate the Christmas greens, one at Park Ridge and one at Hinsdale.

Ed Benthey was one of the Christmas extras at C. A. Samuelson's, where a big business was done.

The engagement is announced of Miss Ella Schafer and George Gobel. Miss Schafer is with Bassett & Washburn and Mr. Gobel is the market representative of the Adams Express Co.

H. Van Gelder says the Percy Jones Christmas was far ahead of any other, though stock and orders have dovetailed better, the shortage being roses and the surplus small white carnations.

Now that the Christmas rish is over, Kennicott Bros. Co. is preparing to re-

F. C. Hoerber says the holiday business ran ahead of his rather sanguine expectations.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports having cut 4,500 cattleyas, Percivaliana and Trianæ in the week before Christmas—and then they ran short.

E. C. Amling says December 23 was considerably the largest day in the history of his house. John Michelsen says they handled slightly more than 300,000 violets in the three days before Christmas.

Kyle & Foerster report as a Christmas visitor, John Holden, of Rensselaer, Ind.

For Christmas C. W. McKellar had some large consignments of eastern Beauties that were of excellent quality.

Adam Zender says that in so far as he can see growing conditions have been exactly like other years, but that he never has had such a fight against mildew as during the last few months. Constant vigilance has been the price of keeping his stock clean.

A. L. Randall Co. was in trouble December 23, when the Beauty train was late, not getting the shipment to the store until 8:15 p. m. A large number of orders were held up. In the next sixty minutes the tickets written for outgoing boxes amounted to $2,000.

J. P. Risch says that his fears of the effect of dark weather were groundless so far as Weiland & Risch were concerned, their crops coming as nearly right for Christmas as they ever expect to get them.

Mrs. D. E. Freres was her husband's chief assistant in the store during the holiday rush.

Wietor Bros. far eclipsed all previous Christmas records. In addition to large cuts of roses and carnations, they had quite a few Merry Christmas mums, the only mums noted.

The venerable but indefatigable Mr. Weiland was down from Evanston early December 24 buying boxwood and said he never had seen anything like the way it was selling. Twelve cases had then been worked up, with the two busiest days yet to go.

Christmas kept A. T. Pyfer so on the jump that his office saw him not the day following.

Winterson's Seed Store sold practically every sprig of Christmas green, including larger quantities than ever of the baby trees.

Zech & Mann say the best part of Christmas was that the buyers were right back next day for more, indicating excellent results for the retailers.

O. W. Frese indicates that the Chicago Flower Growers' Association is well satisfied with its first Christmas.

Mrs. P. L. McKey is convalescing from an illness with pneumonia that at one time was critical.

John Kruchten says the number of calls for gardenias is something surprising, far exceeding the supply.

M. C. Gunterberg, J. A. Budlong and John Sinner all say Christmas business exceeded expectations and that the others who sell on the same floor also were pleased.

Except for a small section on the east side of the building, the addition to the Geo. M. Garland shop at Des Plaines will be practically complete by the first of the year. The floor area has been practically doubled and new machinery is being installed, giving this company a fully equipped factory for greenhouse iron work.

Nathan L. Robinson is a new grower among the colony at Des Plaines. He has just started operations on the Jefferson road with a greenhouse 20 x 50.

Mrs. W. E. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's, receives her birthday presents December 26.

Some of the downtown retailers complain that Christmas coming on Monday cut a big hole in their sales, for the business center is not a particularly lively place on Sunday. But the Fleischman Floral Co. advertised boldly that the store would be open all day Sunday, with the result that a big automobile and telephone trade was done. The store has five trunk line phones.

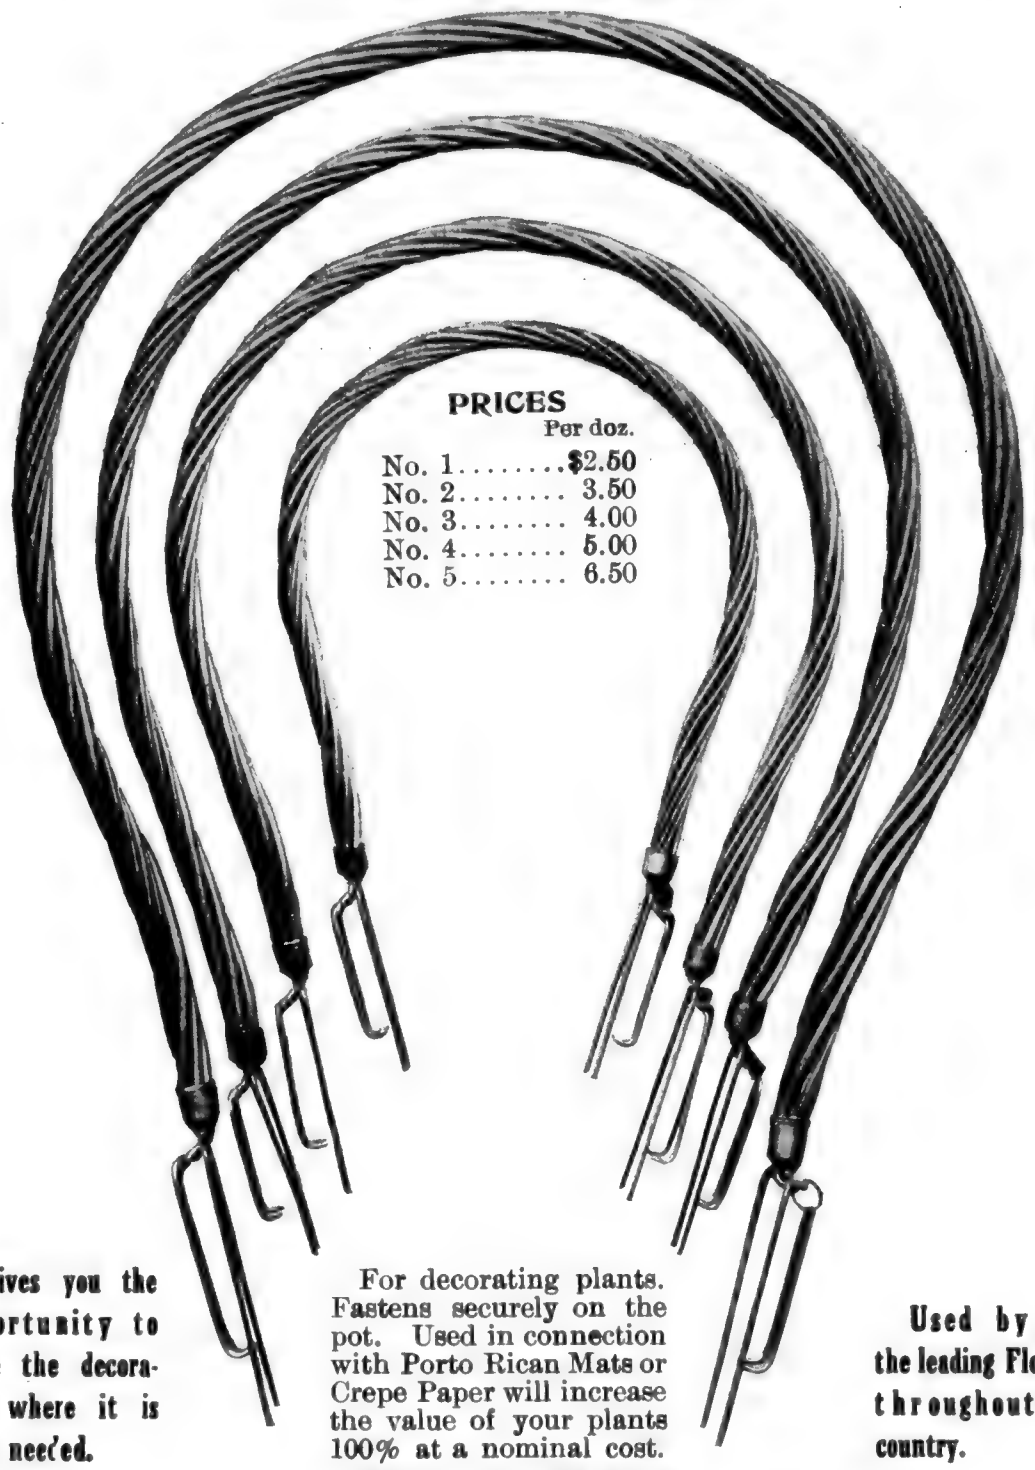
W. W. Barnard Co. reports an exceptionally satisfactory season on Christmas greens. Seldom if ever has a closer clean-up been made.

W. E. Lynch Floral Co. had a fair cut of carnations for Christmas the first crop. The stock is consigned to Vaughan & Sperry.

At Crown Point Alois Frey is doing especially well with pink antirrhinums. He ships direct to some of the leading retailers.

A. L. Randall Co. reports a tremendous increase in the supplies department in 1911, and especially in ribbons.

Peter Reinberg has the biggest job of his life for 1912. He is devoting the greater part of his time to his duties as chairman of the council committee that will solve the traction problem, involving many millions and Chicago's future.



At E. H. Hunt's Paul Bryant says the Christmas business in supplies broke all records for the house.

E. Wienhoeber became ill the week before Christmas and was at the store only once or twice during the rush. William Wienhoeber said the business began much earlier than usual and therefore made a better total than in any preceding year. The greater part of the sales were plants or Christmas greens.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Christmas business was, on the whole, quite satisfactory. Everything in the way of available colored stock cleaned up nicely and white flowers went fairly well. Some of the last, however, accumulated toward the close and were carried over into holiday week.

In the Christmas green line business was excellent. The prices were not quite up to last year's figures. Some extra cars of holly that came in at the last minute gave a fresh supply of that commodity that some of those who were wide-awake, or had the time and inclination, utilized to a good advantage. One of the florists was selling wreaths and bunches of holly as fast as part of his force could work them up.

Prospects for New Year's business indicate that there will be a fair supply of everything in demand but American Beauties. These were short for Christmas and will probably be the same for New Year's day.

In the Christmas business, besides the Beauties, Richmond also ran short and Killarney tended the same way. In white flowers, Paper Whites were never so slow in moving at Yuletide as they were this year. While many were used, a considerably greater quantity was available. Valley also sold slowly, but managed to make a fair clean-up by Tuesday of this week if it was still good. A few violets were left over.

Various Notes.

Wm. Gardner came down from New Castle to spend Christmas.

C. E. Critchell says that this year's holiday business was by far the best he ever had. The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange says "good; very satisfactory indeed with us." Wm. Murphy, J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., L. H. Kyrk, P. J. Olinger, E. G. Gillett and Peter Weiland are all well satisfied with the way their stock moved.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Christmas, 1911, marks the turning of a corner in the history of the cut flower market. High holiday prices are a thing of the past, barring something unusual. The best judges agree that this is a decided step forward, placing the cut flower market on a firmer base throughout the year.

The volume of business transacted at Christmas was ahead of previous years, not only in the quantity of flowers handled but in their total value. This means that more flowers, marketed at slightly lower prices, realized more money than the Christmas cut has done in the past. Weather conditions were most favorable from a shipping and delivery standpoint; plants could not be frozen, nor did they require much packing. This applies even more strongly to cut flowers. The intermission of Sunday between the last day of business and the holiday was a distinct advantage, enabling the retailers to get their orders in shape without hurry and take more orders on Christmas morning, a thing they often have been unable to do. The clear weather on Christmas morning was also a distinct advantage; belated shoppers, tempted by the fine morning, were able to secure their gifts.

Beauties were in heavy supply, particularly the upper grades, fully seventy-five per cent of the stock offered being classed as specials or extras. The best were sold at from $9 to $12 per dozen, frequently in hundred and occasionally in thousand lots. They were not particularly strong at times. Richmond was the strongest of the other roses, although there were probably ten times or more Killarneys used than Richmond. The long, fancy Richmond seen in recent years were missing, most of the better grade being too short to rival Beauties. Killarney seemed more popular than Maryland, although the latter had backing. White Killarney and even Bride were sold in fair numbers, but white is not so popular as pink at Christmas.

Carnations were probably the strongest feature on the list, yet there is no question in the mind of those who have studied the market that carnations would have brought more money had they been shipped regularly. There were not enough on Thursday for the shipping orders; there were not enough on Friday; there were entirely too many on Saturday, and some, unfortunately, bore evidence of having missed the trains on previous days. The prices realized by carnations were equal to last season. While the prices on roses are not equal to last season's, as the price list will show, the average prices are better, because there was nothing left over except a few white. A tour of the wholesale houses immediately after Christmas found little left but white; white roses here, white carnations there, Paper Whites, Romans and stevia.

Cattleyas were surprisingly weak. There was a big supply and prices receded. Gardenias, too, fell away. Small orchids were in demand but the supply is not sufficient to cause much anxiety. Valley was in heavy supply and brisk demand. Bouvardia, although a small factor, was the strongest feature of the list, after carnations. Violets experienced heavy trading. The supply of fresh, high grade stock was unequal to the demand at the last. Callas are popular for church decoration but unfortunately the growers persist in holding them until too late for use. The supply needed on Thursday or Friday arrived Saturday.

Poinsettias, while largely used, were not in active demand. They were popular and brought good prices but there always seemed to be more poinsettias in sight than the market required. Good judges say that the leftovers undoubtedly will be required for holiday decorations. Paper Whites were dull as dishwater; it was difficult to sell them at ridiculously low prices. Romans were almost immovable; they seemed to have had their day. Sweet peas were sold in great quantities at prices below those of last year, the fancies selling more readily than the ordinary grade stock. Daffodils have arrived, making a pleasing change, for yellow is scarce. Daisies were in moderate request.

Green sold about as usual at the holidays, which means that a certain amount is required to go with the flowers, and no more, for people do not especially want tender green at Christmas.

The shipping orders generally are said to have reached their destinations in good condition, the improvement in

The Plant Market.

The demand for Christmas plants both flowering and foliage has been equal if not ahead of that of last year. The wonderful stride made by plants in popular favor could not possibly have continued as in the past. To equal or slightly surpass last year's great record is an achievement of which the plantsmen may well be proud. The poinsettia probably was the most popular Christmas plant, particularly for baskets. Begonias and cyclamens sold in large numbers, the new Glory of Cincinnati proving a great favorite. Azaleas have hardly held their own; in some quarters they were well received, but, generally speaking, the azalea is not considered a satisfactory blooming plant for Christmas. The number of ferns sold, particularly of the Boston family, was wonderful, while foliage plants, notably palms and dracænas, crotons and pandanus, had a share in the Christmas stock. Christmas plants have certainly come to stay and it is within the power of the plantsmen to increase their use by judicious selection and cultural skill.

The Christmas Windows.

Some ideas gathered from the displays of a few of the shop windows in the central part of the city just before the holidays may be of interest. The Christmas color was beautifully brought out in an effective arrangement of our greatest rose at the Bellevue Stratford. J. J. Habermehl's Sons had there a profuse decoration of American Beauties, arranged to show flower and foliage to advantage. There were Beauties of different grades, tied with graceful bows of that ribbon that for so long taxed the inventive ingenuity of the specialists to produce; in a word, tied with Beauty ribbon.

Charles Henry Fox made a handsome display of Scotch heather, set in his long handled tubs adorned with Christmas red ribbon, tub and bow setting off the dainty grace of the heather as a proper frame does a pretty picture.

Pennock Bros. had ferns and fruit in Japanese baskets of Christmas red, with red ruscus and greens galore. The fruit was Otaheite oranges in green wicker baskets, with ribbon of an orange shade, a perfect match.

H. H. Battles displayed pink begonias in birch baskets, perfect specimens, covered with a mass of bloom.

The Century Flower Shop specialized in araucarias, sometimes called Christmas trees; also in baskets of birch bark.

Frank L. Polites intensified the Christmas red of the poinsettia with the purity of the Easter lily and the grace of Paper White narcissi.

leyense. The witchery of their soft green was contrasted with a few Richmond roses and in some with the deep hued Cypripedium insigne.

A Historical Sketch.

David Rust read an interesting paper at the December meeting of the Florists' Club on the club's history during the twenty-five years of its existence. The paper had been carefully prepared and was listened to with marked attention by the large number of members who were present. The early records of the club's doings came from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's minutes. Later, when the club's machinery was in running order, all the information came from the secretary's books, with occasional descriptions added by the speaker. The officers, the essays and the essayists, the conventions held here and at Atlantic City by the Society of American Florists, the fire that destroyed the club's home in the old Horticultural hall, and the social events, all came in for their share of attention.

Robert Craig, as the foremost member in florists' circles, was the first president. He held that position for a number of years, until it was thought wise that this principal office and that of vice-president should rotate yearly or biennially. The offices of secretary and treasurer, on the other hand, have been filled by only a few members, the general feeling being that the club's interests were best served by keeping a good man steadily in those positions. The club's secretaries during the last quarter-century have been D. D. L. Farson, Edwin Lonsdale, Henry F. Michell and David Rust. The treasurers during the same period were Thomas Cartledge, J. William Colflesh and George Craig.

Perhaps the development of the club and of floriculture was best shown in the essays and those who delivered them. Robert Kift was scheduled to deliver the first essay, on "Cut Flowers, How They Should be Cut, Packed and Handled." Mr. Kift announced, when the time arrived, that he felt unequal to the task assigned him, whereupon the club voted that such modesty would cost $500 in future to each offender. Mr. Kift read the paper at the following meeting. Then there were papers on "The Faker, a Menace to Our Business"—it should certainly have been profession—and on "What is the Cause of Bullheads in Perle Roses?" and kindred subjects that have ceased to be issues. Then there was a discussion on "Has the Grower or the Retailer the Best End of It?" the former being assigned to Robert Kift and the latter to Edwin Lonsdale. Another burning question of the good old days was, "Is it Practicable to Dispose of Flowers Through a Commission House?" Perhaps this question, gravely asked and as gravely answered, will show quite as clearly as any other the progress that has been made during the last two decades.

Certainly Secretary Rust deserved the hearty plaudits showered upon him at the conclusion of his address.

Various Notes.

W. E. McKissick, of Washington, D. C., spent a couple of days in this city looking over the market immediately after Christmas.

Charles E. Meehan says that the Pennock-Meehan Co. will push Budlong's Double White Killarney and Totty's Sunburst, believing them both worthy of places among roses grown for cut flowers.

Edward Reid had the pleasure of receiving congratulatory telegrams sent on the arrival of his Christmas flowers at far distant points.

Princeton proved a popular rose this reason and Berger Bros. were gratified by its reception among flower lovers.

The next Michell lecture will be on poultry, January 4, at 3 p. m., delivered by an eminent poultry expert whose name I wrote and unhappily cannot decipher. Then, the hall will be enlarged and improved. The poultry show follows a week later, when 400 coops will be filled.

Arthur A. Niessen says the Christmas business was handled quietly and satisfactorily, although it was much larger than in the past. The increased facilities helped. Daffodils are the latest arrival at his company's store.

George Auegle says that the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. had a satisfactory Christmas, the supply being mainly of the better grades of flowers.

Frank J. Farney arrived from Chicago last week; he stopped writing friendly good wishes long enough to give a cheery greeting.

Narcissus Grande Soleil d'Or, from Walter P. Stokes, of the Floracroft Greenhouses, Moorestown, N. J., made its appearance just before Christmas. Commercially speaking, it is a golden Paper White and very pretty. Perhaps the phrase seems an Irish bull, but it is descriptive.

M. Rice & Co. have leased a three-story building, 120 Camac street, directly in the rear of their own building. The two buildings will be connected by bridges and alterations will be pressed to completion to give quickly the room needed for expansion.

THE ACTION OF LIME.

I should like to ask whether air-slaked lime is as good a fertilizer as stable manure for tomatoes and early cucumbers, grown outdoors. Which will bring the better results?

O. C. M.

Lime is not a fertilizer. It acts on the constituents of the soil, making available as plant food substances that would otherwise not be in shape for the plants to assimilate. It is of value to all soils, but particularly so to soils that have been manured heavily for years, as in such soils there is likely to be much material that is not available. It should not be applied at the same time as a fertilizer, and you should use the stable manure heavily for your garden truck.

H. G.

SCORCHED LETTUCE LEAVES.

Under separate cover I am sending you a couple of lettuce leaves. Will you kindly tell me what causes the rust or dry rot on the edges of the leaves? It does not come till the lettuce gets nearly grown or ready for market. Sometimes a whole bed of it is affected. Any information you may give me as to the cause or remedy will be thankfully received.

W. E. G.

It is hard to tell just what caused these leaves to turn dry and brown at the edges. It can be caused in several ways. Too heavy a fumigation of tobacco smoke or cyanide might cause the trouble. It might also be caused by a soft, weak condition of the leaves, as often is the case after a spell of cloudy weather, when the sun suddenly comes out and withers the leaves slightly, and, on account of being soft, they burn at the edges. In a cool temperature or on cloudy days the evaporation from the leaves is much slower, so that the roots do not take up so much moisture to send up to the leaves and the circulation of sap is slower; hence a sudden change affects them too quickly, before the flow of sap is sufficiently increased, so as to feed the leaves fast enough to prevent wilting. In such cases, when the sun comes out unexpectedly after a cloudy spell, it is advisable to run the houses much cooler than the ordinary bright-day temperature.

SEFTON FLORISTS' BOXES

CORRUGATED DESIGN STYLE AND FOLDING CUT FLOWER BOXES

Florists' success in shipping flowers depends to the greatest extent upon the point where their interest ceases in the sale of flowers. The progressive, prosperous florist retains his interest in a customer's order until it reaches destination, and for that reason he is careful to select the proper style and grade of box to insure safe delivery of his flowers.

Particular Florists are users of Sefton Corrugated Fibreboard Boxes for the shipment of Floral Designs as well as our superior line of Folding Cut Flower Boxes. They know from experience that Sefton Boxes combine high quality with low price and make neat, attractive packages which carry the flowers safely to destination. Write for our Flower Box Price List.

Christmas trade in most instances was much better than last year. Stock of the better grades was sold clean and brought good prices. Roses sold especially well this year, bringing from $3 to $6 per dozen retail. Carnations were not more than enough to go around, bringing $1.50 and $2 per dozen. American Beauties brought $12 to $18 and $24 per dozen. Violets did not move so well as last year, bringing $3 to $4 per hundred. Valley, Paper Whites and hyacinths retailed at $1 per dozen. Quantities of poinsettias were sold at from $3 to $6 per dozen.

Potted plants sold exceptionally well this year, azaleas, cyclamens, Lorraine begonias, hyacinths and primulas being moved in quantities. The higher priced plants and made up arrangements were quite in demand this season.

Various Notes.

Irwin Bertermann received a Christmas present that he should be proud of; it was twin boys.

Chas. Schwake, with C. F. Meyer, called on the trade last week.

Geo. Welmer has taken a position with E. A. Nelson.

A. Wiegand & Sons report the best Christmas trade they have had, an increase of twenty-five per cent over last year. This firm had a heavy sale of blooming plants, especially azaleas and made up arrangements.

C. A. Rieman, of Connersville, and Mr. Meiklejohn, with H. F. Darrow, were visitors last week.

John Rieman says that his Christmas trade was up to expectations, everything being cleaned up with the exception of a few violets.

Mrs. E. A. Nelson, who has been ill, is able to be about again.

Bertermann Bros. report an excellent Christmas. Roses, carnations, holly and blooming plants sold well with this firm.

Baur & Steinkamp had a fine cut of carnations for Christmas, Mr. Baur says the best that he ever has had.

H. L. W.

MADISON, N. J.

M. C. Ebel, head of the Aphine Mfg. Co., is busily engaged in experimenting with a new product which his company expects to place on the market shortly. He has named it Scaline, the material being a combination insecticide and fungicide, a combination of oils and sulphur. It is intended for destroying San Jose scale, the cottony maple aphis and other sap-sucking insects infesting fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs and hardy plants generally, and at the same time as a remedy for the control of the various fungi affecting trees and shrubbery. Mr. Ebel contends that his material can be applied as safely in the growing as in the dormant season.

Seven Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

The Market.

The holiday trade is on in full blast and nobody has any complaint to make, unless it be on account of lack of time or on account of the bad weather. Despite several rainy days preceding Christmas, nearly all the local florists were rushed. As a rule, stock was equal to the demand, although no flood of flowers was noticed. There was a profusion of holly, wreaths and other Yuletide greens available, but the Christwas rush pretty well cleaned out the supply.

Most of the stores were so crowded for several days that it was difficult to get into them and almost impossible for your correspondent to obtain satisfactory interviews with the proprietors. The latter simply threw up their hands, exclaiming, "Too busy to talk." Christmas trees were plentiful and went well, some of the stores reminding one of young forests. Pine cones, red berry-bearing plants of various kinds, and other brilliant scarlet decorative articles have been displayed freely in windows, in show cases and on the walls and ceilings of stores.

Roses have not been too plentiful. More Beauties might have been used. Carnations are bringing 10 to 12½ cents each. Poinsettias have gone well. Violets have been selling well and bringing good prices. Orchids have been high. A few Nonin mums have been on sale for Christmas. Potted plants of all kinds have been in great demand.

Various Notes.

One of the features of the holiday season is the establishment of J. H. Small & Sons in their new store, at Fifteenth and H streets. This firm was promised its new quarters by November 1, but was delayed nearly two months by the failure of contractors to work on time. As it is, the interior finish is not complete, but temporary arrangements were made to accommodate the firm, beginning with the holiday rush. Located at one of the best corners in the new business section of Washington, and in the Woodward, the newest and one of the biggest office buildings in town, the Small store has ten huge windows facing on two streets and on the building arcade. Inside there are 4,000 feet of floor space, besides much cellar space below. The floor is of patent German cement, which is waterproof. There are huge refrigerators on either side of the office, and others in the cellar. It is planned to have these cooled by air from a chemical refrigeration plant, no ice being used. In this respect the new store takes after the Small store in New York. The new store lends itself remarkably well to decoration. The firm will probably retain its old quarters at Fourteenth and G streets throughout the winter.

W. R. Smith, superintendent of the botanical gardens, who has been confined to Providence hospital for several weeks with a serious illness, is back at his little cottage in the garden to spend the holidays with his family. He is reported to be in pretty good condition,

The Market.

Christmas trade was good here this season and everyone reports the heaviest business for several years. While stock was not plentiful, the prices were up and this made up for the falling off in quantity. Roses were of good quality as a rule, but there were hardly enough to go the rounds; however, they brought good prices, especially the fancy stock. Beauties were up too high for any great quantity to move and consequently the number was comparatively small. Carnations, as usual, were more in demand than any other stock and brought good prices, the quality being especially good considering the amount of cloudy weather we have had. The supply consequently was at a minimum and everything cleaned up in good shape.

Violets were in good demand and the quality was excellent; as a result they sold out early. Valley was fine and fairly plentiful and narcissi sold well. Cut poinsettias were in demand and there was quite a large supply of them. There were numerous calls for chrysanthemums, but only a few were seen on the market.

There was plenty of holly on the market, but the bulk of it was of poor quality; holly seems to be getting worse and worse every year on this market. Holly wreaths and festooning came in for their share of the call and a large quantity was disposed of. There was a fine lot of pot plants in the market and they moved quickly at good prices. Azaleas were among the best sellers and some exceptionally good plants were to be seen. Poinsettias were quite plentiful in both cut flowers and plants and were all cleaned up early. Begonias were plentiful and sold well, but at figures far too low for the quality of stock. Cyclamens proved good sellers and some fine plants were on the market.

Various Notes.

Wm. Metzmaier reported heavy business in plants, cut flowers and Christmas trees.

Sherman Stephens says business was rushing for several days at his place.

Graff Bros. say it was the heaviest Christmas ever experienced.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First VicePres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. B. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., is at Lompoc, Cal.

The house of Chr. Olsen, Odense, Denmark, will in the coming season celebrate its silver jubilee in the seed growing business.

Now the seed trade can settle down to preparations for seed selling — the fall bulbs and the Christmas greens are out of the way.

The California seed growers say that, with the short crops abroad, it is not a matter of great difficulty to get business this season.

In spite of all the talk about the scarcity of peas, it is the beets and carrots that are getting the biggest boosts in most of the retail catalogues.

D. H. Browne and C. H. Browne now are the proprietors of the Arkansas Valley Seed House, Lakin, Kan., the former having taken the place of Wm. Logan.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin, No. 455, entitled "Red Clover," by J. M. Westgate and F. H. Hillman, with notes on the insect enemies of red clover by F. M. Webster.

W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has obtained possession of its new building on West Madison street and the new front is going in. The remodeling will be so thorough that it will be several weeks before removal will be begun.

The Binding-Stevens Seed Co., of Tulsa, Okla., has opened a store in the Poland building, on West Main street, Ardmore, Okla. The new store will be conducted under the name of the Ardmore Seed House, with L. J. Orth as manager. The Binding-Stevens Co. also has branches at Muskogee and Wichita.

There will be a great increase this year in the acreage of peas in Montana, Idaho and, to a less extent, in Utah. Three years of bad crops in Michigan and Wisconsin have caused the trade to look about for new fields and the notes in The Review have turned the eyes of many toward the Star of Empire, which "westward takes its way."

THE POTATO CROP.

The people of the United States eat more than a million bushels of potatoes every day in the year.

In taking the last census, statistics were gathered with regard to the potato crop of 1909 and these have just become accessible.

The land in potatoes increased from 2,939,000 acres in 1899 to 3,669,000 acres in 1909, an increase of 730,000 acres, or 24.8 per cent. The percentage of increase in production was much higher, the actual production in 1909 amounting to 389,195,000 bushels, as compared with 273,318,000 bushels in 1899, an increase of 115,877,000 bushels, or 42.4 per cent. The average production per acre, perhaps in part by reason of temporary weather conditions, increased from 93 bushels to 106.1 bushels. Along with the increase in acreage and production went an even larger relative increase in the value of the potato crop, which increased from $98,380,000 to $166,424,000, an increase of over $68,000,000, or 69.2 per cent. The average value of potatoes per bushel thus increased from 36 cents to 43 cents, or about 19 per cent. The production of potatoes in 1879 was 169,459,000 bushels, as compared with 389,195,000 bushels in 1909. The increase in the thirty years was thus nearly 130 per cent. Population during the same period increased about 80 per cent. This is the only important food crop which has increased faster than population.

It is interesting to note that while the percentage of increase in the last ten years is far the greatest in Idaho and New Mexico, New York is the great potato state, producing nearly 13 per cent of the country's crop, with Michigan and Wisconsin producing

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The Christmas rush of 1911 is a thing of the past and it undoubtedly was a grand one. The raising of prices on cut flowers for this holiday, during recent years, has stimulated the plant trade to a noticeable extent; it was poinsettias, azaleas, begonias, cyclamen, primulas and foliage plants, wherever one looked and a visit around on Christmas morning found all stock cleaned up.

Although the demand for cut flowers was great, the supply in every branch, with the exception of American Beauties, was likewise, and it is a pleasure to state that there was no pickled stock to speak of. Stock was held back somewhat, but more judgment was used, thus giving satisfaction to both wholesaler and retailer.

Killarney played a leading role in the rose class, while the favorite carnation held its own. Violets also were in good demand and cleaned up well. Although the supply was plentiful Christmas morning, there was no stock left at closing time. With the wholesalers the rush began Thursday and wound up Monday noon with local trade. The retailers began deliveries Saturday, and were kept busy all day Sunday and the best part of Monday. With mild weather prevailing during this siege, the matter of delivering was not a serious proposition.

Christmas green goods were plentiful and sold well.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

For several years past the writer's brain has been working criss-cross, cater-cornered, on the bias and otherwise in regard to Harrisii Lily Bulbs; in fact, so much so that his thoughts became frappeed, and in order to get the straight of it he went down to Bermuda last July.

Bermuda is one of those garden spots of the world. If you don't believe it—just go down there. Years ago, when Harrisii were gathered from the gardens of private places, where they had been established for years, there were no better Lily Bulbs known. The greed for gain and quantities brought inferior stock there to be planted, resulting, eventually, in almost ruin to the business. Something cheap was wanted and, of course, the quality had to suffer to make the price.

In Bermuda there is a Botanical Garden, and very near this garden is located the only florists the islands can boast of. This firm of florists is composed of two hale and hearty fellows by the name of and, incidentally, they are the most progressive and conscientious growers of Harrisii Lily Bulbs down there. These brothers know something about the trouble a florist has in forcing Lily Bulbs, and they undertook to produce stock which would make good. It has taken several years, much work and no little money, but they are the nearest to success now of anyone else in the islands.

They do not sit behind a desk and whine their orders to their help—they are out in the fields among them. They have a store in Hamilton, but you are not apt to find them there—you must go to the farm—look in the fields or packing sheds. Their bulbs are all hand weeded, not once or twice, but six times during the eight months' season. They are systematically planted in beds 3 feet 6 inches wide, and six rows to the bed. The digging is begun in July, but most are allowed to thoroughly ripen, and dug early in August—time enough.

We have made a contract with Messrs. Stephens Brothers covering a period of years—for our mutual benefit and for the good of the trade. Every bulb packed and sent out as Horseshoe Brand Harrisii will be from the very best fields and strictly up to size. The prices are as reasonable as can be made—as follows:

"NOT HOW CHEAP—BUT HOW GOOD"

RALPH M. WARD & CO.

12 West Broadway, NEW YORK

Sole American representatives for Mr. Seitaro Arai, Yokohama, Japan; Mr. Martial Bremond, Ollioules, France; Messrs. Stephens Brothers, Paget, Bermuda so many people remember the departed ones by bringing cut flowers, holly and other wreaths.

Walter M. Maas & Co. secured two extra stores for their Christmas trade, which they filled up with blooming and other plants. There wasn't a thing left after the rush and, with a good demand for cut flowers, they feel more than satisfied.

The M. A. McKenney Co. was so busy Christmas noon that it was not advisable to ask many questions; both plant and cut flower trade were fine.

The Currie Bros. Co. had a fine selection of stock at their greenhouses for the event, but when called upon they said that business was enormous and that they were sold out.

Made-up tubs of crotons, dracænas and ferns played an important role at J. M. Fox & Son's store. This is not saying that was all they offered, for every possible nook was utilized in trying to place the large quantities of well grown blooming and foliage plants. The cut flower trade with them also was brisk.

The force of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. looked rather tired Christmas morning, and when questioned as to the volume of business done, claimed it was the best yet. Their large supply of stock cleaned out in great shape.

Gust. Rusch & Co. said that business was fine and away ahead of expectations. Their store was jammed full in the morning, but night found them cleaned up in great shape.

"Better than ever," was the report of the Holton & Hunkel Co., who moved large quantities of finely grown pot plants at their Humboldt avenue place, and roses, especially Pink Killarney, from the Brown Deer place. Their supply of American Beauties was far from satisfactory, but they were much pleased with the way violets moved.

"Very, very fine; could not have been better," were the comments heard at the salesrooms of the C. C. Pollworth Co. December 25. The carnations and roses were right in crop at their greenhouses and the quality was fine. Their large lot of plants had dwindled down to a small number by Sunday night.

"In the cut flower line, Pink Killarney was more in demand than most other stock for the Christmas trade," so says the East Side Floral Co. Plants were also an important factor with them. E. O.

GLADIOLI A SECOND YEAR.

Can I force Peach Blossom, Bride and Bridesmaid gladiolus bulbs two years in succession? F. E. W.

These gladioli will make up bulbs considerably larger than those imported from Europe, but even when gradually rested and every care taken of them they have failed to flower satisfactorily. Probably if you cut your flowers short-stemmed and did not sacrifice the foliage, they might do well a second season. As it is, however, about everyone wants flowers on long stems and we cannot give them these without in large measure ruining the bulbs. This applies also to the large-flowered types of gladioli, as well as to freesias and some other bulbs. C. W.

Chanute, Kan.—The city council has voted to grant to James Truitt & Sons permission to lay a pipe line for the purpose of conveying gas to the firm's greenhouses, on North Steuben avenue.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6- 7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7- 9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots . . . . . $0.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants . $1.00 to 1.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 10-inch plants . . . . 2.50 each

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

THE Wyoming Plant & Seed Breeding Co., at Worland, Wyo., is making preparations to add a nursery department to its business.

M. G. BLACK, manager of the Vine Hill Nurseries, at Mount Pleasant, Tex., has purchased a 400-acre farm two miles south of town and will make use of the ground in extending the company's business. The total area of the nurseries is now 556 acres.

AT a recent meeting of the Illinois State Horticultural Society, held at Champaign, a committee was appointed to obtain funds for the protection of orchards and nurseries from San Jose scale. The members of the committee are W. A. Aldrich, W. S. Perrine and J. C. B. Heaton.

THE Nursery Farm Co., with headquarters at Corpus Christi, Tex., has had a party of surveyors in the field running the levels for a levee along the Nueces river for a distance of eight miles. This will be completed in March and will reclaim about 6,000 acres of valuable land. 2,000 acres of which will be in crop this coming year.

AT the recent meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen, at Kansas City, W. P. Stark, ex-president of the American Association of Nurserymen, and Prof. S. J. Hunter, of the University of Kansas, were appointed to go to Washington to oppose the Simmons bill, but to work in the interest of a law which shall afford all the benefits of federal inspection and regulation without placing control of the trade's source of supply on raw material uncurbed in the hands of one individual.

PEONIES FOR DECORATION DAY.

I should be pleased to have a list of the best market varieties of peonies, early enough to be in bloom for Decoration day in southwestern Pennsylvania. I. V. K.

Among peonies suitable for Decoration day blooming, the first and earliest is Umbellata Rosea, otherwise known as Sarah Bernhardt, the earliest of all the Chinensis class—too early, in fact, for ordinary seasons, but always to be depended upon in a late season, when other varieties fail. Among the well-known standard varieties I would suggest: Festiva Maxima and The Bride for white; Edulis Superba and Alexander Dumas for pink. The crimson varieties, as a rule, are late; the earliest, perhaps, is Rubra Triumphans. This is nearly semi-double and for that reason is not so desirable for cut flowers. Other standard red varieties, such as Delachei, Louis Van Houtte and Felix Crousse, are usually too late for Decoration day. La Fontaine (Dessert) and Raphael (Dessert) are two very early red varieties that will be useful for Decoration day when the stock of them is more plentiful. Mme. Mechin and Pierre Dessert are two desirable crimson varieties that can usually be depended upon. Grandiflora Nivea Plena, white, and Therese, pink, are both very early and will be desirable when the stock is more plentiful.

CYANIDE FOR WHITE FLY.

I want to give my experience in fumigating a greenhouse. I had a good deal of trouble with white fly, so I found out what I could about hydrocyanic acid gas. My first attempt to use it was not a success, but I continued to experiment with it till I got good results. I have read A. L. Merrill's account of his experience, in The Review of December 14, page 42, and I believe he used the gas entirely too strong.

The size of my greenhouse is 20x50 feet. The side walls are four feet high and the height to the ridge is ten feet. There are a great variety of plants in the house, including carnations, geraniums in full bloom, Lorraine begonias, ferns, palms and lettuce. To fumigate this house, I use two 2-quart jars. In each jar I put one inch of water; then I put in each jar one ounce of sulphuric acid. When I am ready to get out, I put one ounce of cyanide of potash in each jar. Then I close the house and leave it for the night. When I open it in the morning I sometimes find that there are a few flies left; in that case I give them another dose in the evening. In nine cases out of ten, however, one fumigation is sufficient. I never spoiled a plant.

PACIFIC COAST.

Newport, Wash.—Ralph D. Kaler, who conducted business here under the name of Newport Floral Co., has sold his establishment to August Erickson. Mr. Erickson has already added a new section, 20x73, to the greenhouse. He will grow lettuce and other vegetables.

Marysville, Cal.—Mrs. E. L. Alexander and her sister, Mrs. Andrews, have purchased twenty acres of ground near this town and will engage in business as florists and gardeners, under the firm name of Andrews & Alexander. Mrs. Andrews is thoroughly experienced in the work. They will find a convenient market for their crops both here and at Sacramento, by means of an electric line which runs close to their place. They will erect a lath house, a greenhouse and some other buildings.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

As I write we are in the midst of the Christmas rush. While it is too early to determine the final result, indications are in favor of a record business. Stock is plentiful; that is, potted stock, poinsettias having the first call. Still, azaleas, Lorraines and cyclamens play an important part, with quality up to the standard. Basket arrangements prove popular. Roses and carnations, especially of the brighter colors, are the best sellers, yet when the smoke clears away there will be nothing left. By special effort, mums are available in unusual quantities, retail prices ranging from $4 to $9 per dozen. Christmas coming on Monday gives the florists more sales days, as well as extra time for delivery, yet Saturday is expected to be the banner day.

Various Notes.

Randolph Gibson has taken over the A. H. Tackman greenhouses at The Dalles.

Mrs. Chas. Whiten, of Astoria, was in town this week to arrange for additional stock for the holiday. E. R. C.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.,

The Market.

The Christmas business was considerably the best that ever has been enjoyed by the florists of Los Angeles. The demand began to be felt earlier than usual and continued steadily through several days, culminating in a grand rush that swept away every flower that was offered. The total sales were an exceedingly satisfactory percentage ahead of last year.

Cut flowers were not equal to the demand and calls were made on the San Francisco market to supply the deficiency. Good plants were scarce, there being an unusually large increase in the call for blooming stock. Everything was sold out by Christmas morning but a few azaleas, and these as a rule were plants that could hardly be classed as good. The Los Angeles retailers are not adept at making up the baskets of mixed plants that are so largely sold in the east, for the demand has not heretofore run heavily to these, but this year's experience no doubt will

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean for Thanksgiving and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash., November 30, 1911.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

lead to better things in the line of plant combinations for another Christmas.

The weather was ideal for the trade, being cool and bright, and all the leading stores worked day and night from Friday to Monday to keep pace with the demands of their customers. R.

SEATTLE.

Club Meeting.

There was a large turnout at the last meeting of the Florists' Club, with the growers, as usual, predominating. What is the reason that the retailers do not come in larger numbers to these beneficial meetings? Three new members were admitted. A preliminary schedule of the chrysanthemum show for next year was presented by the committee, and passed.

The club has decided to hold a rose show in the coming summer and a committee was appointed to draw up a prize list. Most of the premiums will be open to amateurs. If properly conducted, there is no reason why the show should not be successful. In a community such as this, the failure heretofore to have anything of this sort does not reflect much credit on florists or others, who ought to have the beautification of this naturally picturesque city at heart. Roses grow here with probably less trouble and in more profusion than in most other places and there should be a great display at the club's exhibition.

Various Notes.

The bowling club was in session after the florists' meeting. Jack Sahle proved himself the champion for the evening.

Henry Bornhoff, of the Fairview Esquimalt Greenhouses, Victoria, B. C., was in the city for a few days, visiting his old friends.

Sandahl & Sons, Inc., had a large decoration for an Elks' silver wedding last week.

Mr. Risdon, Sr., has returned from Los Angeles, finding it too hot in that city. His many friends are glad to welcome him home.

Peter Saal has decided to take a vacation trip to the old country. During his absence his plant at Bellevue will be managed by Mr. Petrie, his brother-in-law. T. W.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

We have had some miserable weather during the last few weeks. Cold, dry north winds and frosty nights have made a combination hard to beat in the way of making stock scarce and customers disinclined to brave the elements and do their Christmas shopping early. At the time of this writing we are within a few days of that memorable occasion and things are looking brighter from all sides. That there is no excess of stock goes without saying, and prices have taken quite an upward turn since the first part of the week. There has been such an amount of out-of-town shipping for the last ten days that things begin to look a bit serious for the low prices we have enjoyed during the last month.

Carnations and roses show the greatest tendency toward scarceness. Violets up to this time have been plentiful, but they also, owing to the unfavorable weather, give great promise of not being in sufficient numbers to fill requirements. Daffodils and narcissi are making a good showing, with plenty of Romans both cut and in pots. Valley is a shade scarcer and orchids apparently more plentiful. Red berries hold the balance of power and never have they been in better color or quantity. The public never seems to tire of them at this season and their cheapness and ready sale make them one of the heavy factors to be reckoned with. Aside from Christmas orders, there is a goodly supply of funeral orders divided among the stores.

The Market.

There has been little change in market conditions during the last week. The weather continues fine and there is apparently a good supply of everything for Christmas. Poinsettias have come on in fine shape and are of excellent quality. Roses are scarce, but of good quality. The carnations are beginning to show the effects of the warm, cloudy weather and some of the growers are bringing in rather weak, soft stock. The stores generally report a good holiday business, though it is too early yet to estimate results exactly.

Holly seems to do well here, but local growers heretofore have not given much attention to the growing of that kind of stock. No doubt some enterprising florist will take that up on an extensive scale in the near future, and there is no apparent reason why enough holly for the local demand at least should not be grown here, instead of having to depend on the imported stock, which generally reaches here in poor condition.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club bowling team, in the last city league contest, took three straight games from the "crack" Gas Co. team, and then, just to show that they could do it again, they beat the P. O. team, also of the city league, three games. "Some bowlers," these local florists. They are matched to play the Seattle club sometime after the holidays. I wonder why Seattle wanted to wait until after New Year's. The following are the totals for the last three games: 776, 788, 805.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held January 4, 1912. J. L. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Christmas Trade.

Everyone in the trade seems more than satisfied with the business he did during the last three days of the Christmas rush—Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The west end establishments did an enormous business in both plants and cut flowers. Judging from the reports that can be gathered this early, the four wholesalers were all busy during the whole week attending to shipping orders and the local trade. The weather for delivery was just right and little wrapping was necessary on plants or boxes of cut flowers. The large establishments say that they "had it easy this year," as they had three days for delivery. They say the demand for plants was away above that for cut flowers and it is certain that the show houses of the west end florists do look empty.

In the plant line bright colors prevailed all over. Poinsettias, Lorraine begonias, azaleas, dwarf holly trees and cyclamens had the call over anything else in the plant line. The principal show houses were packed with these early in the week. Along Grand avenue, both north and south, a great show was made, and all of the florists on that thoroughfare say that they were never so busy, and they are still hustling at this writing to get their orders out.

The florists in the downtown district, too, say that business was beyond their expectations. They had all they could do and all carried a fine, large stock of plants and cut flowers. The wholesale markets had a fine lot of all seasonable flowers and everything that was good was cleaned up early at good prices.

One noticeable feature this year was the price of California violets. As a rule, the prices did not go over $1 per hundred, in either small or large lots. Of Romans, Paper Whites and valley there were more than enough for the demand. Roses sold high—$20 to $25 per hundred for fancy stock and from $6 to $10 for good grades. American Beauties were scarce in this market; long, fancy Beauties sold at $12 per hundred, and $8 per hundred was asked even for short culls. Carnations were all cleaned up. The top price was 8 cents and as low as 5 cents was paid for small, common stock. There were more cut poinsettias in the market this year than ever. The best brought $3 per dozen. Greens and holly sold well all over the city.

No doubt stock will be scarce all the week and prices will remain about as they were during the last week. There is a prospect of a good New Year's business. J. J. B.

New Castle, Ind.—James McLaughlin, who during the last two years was connected with different florists' establishments here, has gone to Petersburg, Ill., where he is engaged in the same kind of work.

THE NEW YELLOW FORCING ROSE SUNBURST

This magnificent, giant yellow rose has been tested for three years in our benches; it stands head and shoulders above all other sorts of its color and will rank with American Beauty and the Killarneys in value and grandeur—because

It has a long, pointed bud, which can be cut tight for market. It is pre-eminently a long-stemmed rose. The stem is always stiff. It is free in bottom breaks. Is extraordinarily vigorous and healthy. Belongs in the class of Big Roses. Its keeping qualities rank with the best. Buds shipped from Richmond last December opened up perfectly in both Philadelphia and New York, where it scored 90 before the Florists' Club.

The color is orange-copper or golden orange and golden yellow, all intense shades, extremely brilliant in effect.

Come and see it growing; we have 8,000 of it benched.

Does splendidly out of doors; will rank high as a bedder. At the Chicago show, 1910, it was awarded the silver cup for the best new rose never before exhibited, and the judges unanimously gave it honorable mention additional. Has created a sensation wherever shown.

Raised by M. Pernet-Ducher, from whom we bought the American rights.

We have divided our stock with Mr. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., to give eastern growers a chance to see it growing. Will be distributed March 1 in America by C. H. Totty and The E. G. Hill Co. Mr. Pernet will distribute same date in Europe.

The American price is $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000 (own roots); $5.00 per 100 additional for grafts

DETROIT.

The Market.

At this writing it is impossible to state with any degree of correctness just how Christmas business in Detroit compared with previous years, still the writer feels safe in saying that on the whole business was far ahead of any preceding year. Christmas, falling as it did on a Monday, greatly facilitated matters for the retail florists. Buying on Sunday was comparatively light and thereby gave those in charge of the delivery end a chance to get nicely caught up. Many of the cut flower orders were also for Sunday delivery, thus relieving the Christmas morning shipping.

Violets, which sold so well Thanksgiving, were in poor demand. In plants, begonias did not sell. Never before were boxwood wreaths sold in such large numbers and holly wreaths also sold well. The weather was ideal for delivery, as the thermometer hardly got below the freezing point, but with not a flake of snow for weeks the Christmas aspect was somewhat lacking.

Christmas trees may still be seen by the hundreds on every available corner in the business districts; although no doubt the demand was as heavy as formerly, the supply was far greater than for several years.

Various Notes.

Autos played a most important part in the delivery end; in fact, some of the firms used no horses at all.

A. Miller, of Chicago, spent the holidays in Detroit, lending a helping hand at some of the stores.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange was fairly swamped with orders, but they nevertheless were able to fill all with their usual carefulness.

Just what the New Year has in store we do not know; chances are that New Year's trade will be lighter than usual, as there will be no parties New Year's eve.

A special meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Thursday evening, December 28, to complete arrangements for the big January show and convention.

The Market.

The week before Christmas was the worst that ever happened as far as weather conditions were concerned. It was dark and rainy almost every day except Saturday, which kept back trade until the last minute, but from such reports as have come in I believe the retail trade was up to former years with every one, and much better with a few. Plants were the principal feature until Saturday and they really never had finer or more beautiful ones to offer. Each year the plantsmen seem to grow better plants and make more beautiful arrangements and there has been a continued effort put forth to make them take the place of cut flowers, but while there are more plants sold early in the week, when it comes right down to the last day nothing but flowers will fill the bill.

The wholesale houses report a good Christmas and say that though business was late in coming in, the result was up to their best expectations, especially on such stock as could be sold at reasonable prices, and there were no exceptionally high prices asked for anything. Stock in general cleaned up nicely except for quite a lot of Paper White narcissi and poor violets.

The green goods men cleaned up nicely, but most of their stock sold at low prices.

The growers had a hard time of it with only part of one day's sunshine in three weeks and raining most of the time, which had a bad effect on Pink Killarney, taking most of the color out of it and shortening up the cut to a great extent. However, they had a good cut, everything considered.

Hoo-Hoo.

Milford, Mass.—W. D. Howard, of the Morningside Greenhouses, has built a garage at the rear of his home, on South Main street, to accommodate his two automobiles.

Holyoke, Mass.—Gallivan Bros. are planning the erection of two more greenhouses, each 35x200, on their land at Smith's Ferry in the spring. One of the houses will be used for chrysanthemums. The firm already has greenhouses both at Smith's Ferry and South Hadley Center.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Christmas trade was exceptionally good this year, and the public began to shop early, selecting plants and leaving orders for cut flowers a week in advance. The weather during the week was mild, but this did not serve to bring down prices at all. Flowers and plants were quite the thing as gifts this year and all the florists were kept busy.

There were no chrysanthemums for the holidays and roses were held at a stiff price. Beauties brought as high as $20 per dozen. Killarneys touched $5 and Richmonds went up to $4. White Killarneys were excellent, but Wards were somewhat scarce. Tafts were few, but the quality was good. Red Killarney was a great favorite during the last week. Lady Hillingdon was fairly good, but yellow roses were thrust aside by the Christmas trade.

Carnations were par excellence, bringing from $1 to $2 per dozen. Cattleyas were in great demand and so were cypripediums. Violets were sold in great quantities at $3 per hundred. Plants and fancy baskets were sold in great numbers, and a fancy dress ball, various receptions and dinners made the Christmas week a busy one.

Various Notes.

The Lamberton memorial greenhouse at Highland park, which has been closed for three weeks for the rearrangement of flowers, was reopened Christmas day with a beautiful display of seasonable blooms. Christmas flowers have a prominent place in the display, including the big red poinsettia, which has come into universal favor in recent years, and the ardisias, with their bright red fruit. Besides these, there is a large collection of camellias, including white, red and pink varieties. Other plants that are in flower are cyclamen, cinerarias, Chinese primroses in many varieties, begonias, bouvardias, strobilanthes, lilies, marguerites, orchids and oranges with flowers and fruit. E. C. A.

Lowville, N. Y.—F. B. Pfister recently completed a new iron-frame greenhouse, 28x100, for roses. He says prospects are bright for a good winter's business.

POINSETTIAS.

THE TOWN'S TALK.

Did you see those large 12-in. pans, made up of 3 large, 20 to 25-in. high poinsettias, trimmed with large Whitmani, Scottii and Giatrasii ferns, areca palms, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, cocos palms, etc., in Mr. McGinty's show window? "They came from Godfrey Aschmann's greenhouses; we paid only $2.50 each for them and sell them at a ten dollar bill." "Oh, I bought one not quite as big as yours, for which I paid Aschmann only $2.00," explained Mr. Miller; "I let it go for eight dollars. I thought that was a fair profit."

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

From all reports, the business done this Christmas was greater than in any previous year. The weather was fair and warm and it seemed more like Easter than Christmas. The day was ideal for delivering, as no plants had to be wrapped. The demand for roses and carnations was far greater than the supply. Potted plants were in demand and everything went.

Roses sold up to $3 per dozen and carnations up to $1.50 per dozen. Violets sold well and were in good supply. An especially noted fact was that magnolia and boxwood wreaths with bunches of immortelles were in far greater demand for cemetery work, as were the ready made designs of prepared flowers. Immense quantities of holly were used and this was well berried and of good quality this year.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons did more business than at any previous Christmas. They cleaned out on roses, carnations, violets and flowering plants and could have sold more. They cut about 4,000 roses, 2,500 carnations and 3,000 violets. C. L. Niednagel says it seemed that they made more magnolia and boxwood wreaths than in all other years combined. The full force was kept busy early in the week making them up.

J. C. Elsperman had a much larger business than at any other Christmas.

Royston & Fenton could have sold many more roses if they had been able to get them. Mrs. E. L. Fenton and Edgar, Jr., left December 24 for a week's visit in Cincinnati.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. enjoyed an immense business and from Thursday till Monday worked night and day. They did not cut enough roses or carnations and bought heavily of these. They had lots of stevia, sweet peas, violets, etc., for which there was a big demand. Geo. Blackman says that they had a great call for magnolia wreaths, also boxwood. The assortment of plants was extra good.

Ben Kramer says that business was extra good and he sold out of everything.

Louis Fritsch was decidedly busy. He had a nice cut of carnations and bought several hundred roses. He had a good assortment of pot plants and enjoyed a good demand for them.

Nellie Goodge did not have enough stock to supply the demand.

Henry Seymour sold all that he had on hand. E. L. F.

PANSIES.

Pansy Park Perfection is the best strain of giant show and fancy pansies, largest in size and of the greatest variety of rich and rare colors, the reds and bronzes in large proportion. The growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years. Samples of many reports: "Pansy plants arrived in best possible condition. They have the finest roots I have ever seen. I am well pleased." Fred Reichert, San Antonio, Texas. If you want more proof read the many testimonials in my Review advs. during the past 2 months. Over 75 varieties mixed. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5,000, $14.00; 10.000, $27.00. Special attention to southern orders and delivery in good condition guaranteed. Cash with order.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

HOME OF PANSIES.
Our strain of pansies is unsurpased. We have scores of testimonials. Here is what a few of my customers say—Audubon Park Association, New Orleans, La., writes: "Pansies received in good order. Thanks." J. M. Breckenridge, Savannah, Ga., sends us an order and says: "I bought plants from you last year and found them very satisfactory." The Pansy Floral Co., De Land, Fla., sends us an order and says: "Plants we got from you last year were fine." Industrial School and Gardens, Mobile, Ala., says: "The pansies you sent were in good shape when received and are doing nicely." They sent us another order. We have a large stock of Our Own Specials, Masterpiece, Perret, Trimardeau, black, yellow, blood red, etc., all kinds mixed, $2.50 per 1000; 5000 for $10.00.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, OLEAN, N. Y.

Think of the strain of pansies containing light, dark, lavender, violet, blue, bronze, royal purple, red, cerise, salmon, mahogany, yellow and red and gold shades, a dozen or more varieties in each shade, of immense size with great form and substance. They are MASTODON PANSIES. It has cost us hundreds of dollars and eighteen years' time to upbuild this strain and it is worth all it cost. We guarantee perfect order delivery everywhere and we guarantee satisfaction. Plants, 50c 100; $3.00 1000; $12.50 5000, prepaid.

Quick Budding and Stiff Stems

Get into the market with better blooms—Sheep's Head Brand of Pulverized Sheep Manure will prove a money maker for you. Unsurpassed as an extra stimulant to plants, pots or beds. Will not cause black spot like stable manure. Free from weed seeds—always ready.

Carnations, roses, chrysanthemums and violets are particularly benefited. Send for booklet,

"Fertile Facts"

It shows you the dollars and cents view and points out the actual profits from using Sheep's Head Brand, and shows you how to prepare soils so that they will retain soluble plant foods near the surface of the ground within reach of the rootlets of growing vegetation. We will send you a copy of this interesting and instructive book free. Write to-day.

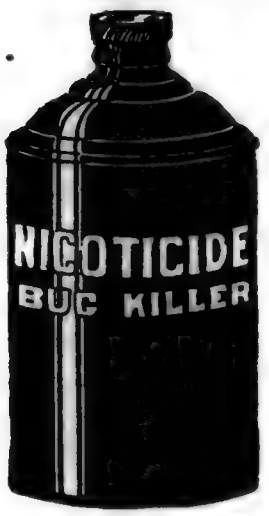
A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.



"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

ABOUT THE EXPANSION TANK.

I wish to thank you for the information you gave me about my boiler, but I am in trouble again. Will you kindly tell me whether, if I run two flow pipes from the boiler in different directions, it will be necessary to have two expansion tanks? I have a water tank which is twenty-eight feet higher than the top of the boiler, and the tank itself is twelve feet high; that is, counting from the bottom of the tank to the top of the boiler, there would be a fall of twenty-eight feet, in 1½-inch pipe. The boiler is fed by ¾-inch pipe from the 1½-inch pipe. Can I run the two flow pipes in different directions and use this tank? It holds 5,000 gallons. J. H. N.

While it will answer if an air-vent is placed in one of the flow pipes and the other is connected with the expansion tank, the best way will be to run a pipe from the highest point in each of the flow pipes and, after connecting them, run a 1½-inch pipe to the expansion tank. There will be no objection whatever to using the large water tank as the expansion tank for the system, but care must be taken, of course, that the expansion pipe does not freeze.

A HOUSE WITH TWO PARTITIONS.

I intend to build a greenhouse, 20x75 feet, running east and west, with three feet of concrete and two feet of side glass all around. The house will measure twelve feet to the ridge and will contain two partitions, which will divide it into three rooms, each 20x25 feet. The land where I intend to build has a fall of about eighteen inches from east to west, in the length of the house. I should like to know what size of workroom and boiler room to put up. There is only a 3-foot fall to the ditch which drains the land, so it will not be possible to have the boiler and coal underneath the house. I suppose the east and highest point would be the best place for the boiler, or on the north side, in the center. I shall be thankful for any advice as to how to run the pipes, so that I can keep the east section at 65 degrees, the central section about 60 degrees and the west one about 50 degrees in zero weather. My location is northeastern Illinois and there will be no protection for the house, as it stands in the open. R. P.

It is generally preferable to build the boiler house at the lower end of the greenhouse, in order to secure a proper return of the water. Whenever possible, it is at the east end rather than at the west end, and for houses less than 100 feet long there is little occasion for placing the boiler at the north side of houses running east and west. In the present case, if the house itself is built on a level, the boiler room can still be at the east end. The workroom and boiler room should not be less than twenty feet square, and it would need to be even larger if much coal is to be stored.

For the heating pipes, run three 2½-inch flows to the farther end. One of these can be on each wall plate and the other two feet below the ridge. Connect each of these with a coil of four 2-inch return pipes, which should be under the flow pipes and should have a slope of one inch in ten feet back toward the boiler. This will give about the right temperatures in the middle and west houses. To obtain a little more heat in the east house, drop down a 2-inch pipe from the overhead flow and with it feed a coil of three 2-inch pipes back to the boiler.

HEAT FROM EXHAUST STEAM.

I am trying to heat my greenhouse with exhaust steam from an electric plant, about 250 feet away. The steam is conveyed to my place through a 5-inch pipe, which is reduced to 3-inch at the greenhouse. Inside there is an elbow, from which the pipe has a direct rise of two feet. Then the pipe, still 3-inch, runs six feet horizontally and afterward at an angle of 45 degrees, up to the feed pipe in the center of the house, which distributes to bench coils on each side, through 2-inch pipes. The bench coils consist of 1½-inch pipe, four pipes under each bench. All the condensation is returned to a concrete pit in the center of the house, where a steam trap and a meter have been installed, in the order named; from the meter a pipe runs to the sewer.

Now, the condensation is so great that no steam gets to the trap or meter and the pipe is cold. The company charges by the thousand pounds, and I should like you to tell me whether they ought to charge me meter rate on exhaust steam, as one would on live steam. If there should be a difference, what should it be? If there is any mistake in the installation, I should like to know. There is less than 500 feet of radiation. The trap used is the Empire trap; the meter is the No. 2, Model C, of the American District Steam Co. L. M. F.

The data furnished are not sufficiently complete to indicate clearly the cause of the trouble. It is possible that the supply main is not properly insulated, so that most of the steam is condensed before it reaches the heating coils, and it is also evident that the amount of steam furnished is insufficient to heat the house. If the pipes are cold, it seems likely that the trap is not working properly and that the water backs up in the coils as a consequence. As nearly as can be ascertained from the description given, there are about 500 square feet of surface in the mains and the same amount in the coils, and even if the mains are carefully insulated, the proportion of surface in them is altogether too large. A 3-inch pipe would answer the purpose and, as it would contain only about one-third as much steam, the rate of condensation in the main would be materially reduced.

Of course the price paid and the method of measuring the amount of steam furnished will depend upon the bargain that has been made. Ordinarily, only the amount condensed in the coils is measured, and if any of the water condensed in the main passes over into the coils, a relief pipe should be put in where the main enters the house.

THREE CONNECTICUT HOUSES.

Kindly inform me what size of hot water boiler I shall require for a greenhouse 35 x 100 and seven feet high to the eaves, with 16 x 24 glass in the sides and ends. How much piping will be needed and how would you pipe the house to obtain a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees in zero weather? Would a horizontal boiler be more economical than an upright one? The house runs east and west, with the boiler house at the northwest corner. I have also two other houses, each 20 x 50 and eleven feet high to the ridge. These run north and south at the west end of the 100-foot house. Would it be advisable to heat all three houses from one boiler, providing the boiler is large enough? If so, how large a boiler would be required? J. H. S.

There will be no difficulty in heating the three houses with one boiler. For the larger house alone a boiler with a rating of 1,500 square feet of radiating surface will be required, or to heat the three houses from one boiler a heater with a rating of 2,400 square feet should be used.

To pipe the large house, use four 2½-inch flow pipes and fourteen 2-inch returns. Run one flow on each side wall and the others overhead, suspended from one of the purlins or supported upon a row of posts on each side of the ridge. Three of the return pipes should be on each wall and the others in four coils, distributed under the benches. Give the flow pipes a slight fall, so that the air can escape. Connect the expansion tank with the highest part of the main flow pipe or pipes. For the small houses the same arrangement could be used, except that three 2-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns will suffice. The odd flow pipe should be about two feet below the ridge.

A better circulation can be obtained with a low boiler; hence the horizontal form is preferable.

The Market.

It is too early at this writing to sum up exactly the results of the Christmas trade here, but the weather was far from being satisfactory for the last ten days. It rained steadily all day December 22. Saturday was cloudy and on Sunday it snowed and rained the whole day long. For nearly three weeks it has been cloudy, with heavy fogs and only an occasional glimpse of sunshine for an hour or two.

The volume of business was all that was desired and there were plenty of flowers; in fact, so many that nearly every order could be filled in full with just what the buyer wanted. Another thing which looks well for the business is that the stock brought satisfactory prices. Pot plants were in heavy demand, especially ferns, poinsettias and made-up pans.

A curious feature of the occasion was the revived trade in violets. For several years the demand has been normal, but this year, as by one consent, everybody wanted violets, and luckily good stock was plentiful. Some of the growers stocked up heavily with Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites last fall, expecting to reap a harvest at Christmas, but they proved to be disastrous from a financial standpoint, as nobody wanted them at any price. There has not been any market for them at Christmas for several years.

Various Notes.

The Baltimore Florists' Exchange did a business considerably in excess in volume of any preceding Christmas season. Manager J. J. Perry had an extra force of efficient helpers and the transactions of the day were smoothly and expeditiously forwarded, including considerable shipments to out-of-town customers. By the closing hour nearly everything was cleaned up. Q.

Nyack, N. Y.—R. C. Pye has a climbing sport of White Killarney that promises to be a fine thing. The plant is 2 years old and carried the bush form in the first year's growth. This season the plant threw a shoot which at this time is thirteen feet long, an extraordinarily strong cane, full of breaks and blooming freely. The blooms are even larger than usually seen on bush plants. My Maryland has also developed a climbing form, but is not considered nearly so valuable.

The Market.

Continuous rainy weather for the last two weeks handicapped flowering stock to a great extent, particularly azaleas, only about half of the usual output being in full bloom in time for Christmas. All of the retailers made elaborate preparations, but on account of the abominable weather little buying was done up to December 22.

Christmas eve and the day preceding were ideal and the stores were crowded with buyers till quite late in spite of the fact that it was Sunday. Every indication pointed to beautiful weather for the holiday and the usual clean-up of everything. Immense cut flower shipments arrived from Chicago and in most cases the stock was in good condition.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting December 21, but owing to the rainy weather there was only a small attendance. Owing to the president's absence, Otto Abele occupied the chair. All important matters were held over to the January session, which no doubt will be interesting, as the proposed state fair to be held next fall will be up for discussion.

Richard Eichling, foreman of U. J. Virgin's nursery, made the only display at the meeting, showing some well grown azaleas, poinsettias, Adiantum Croweanum, valley and coleus, for which he was highly commended.

AN APPEAL

My Dear Friend:

During the year now opening before us, it is my earnest desire to see our membership increased to its fullest extent, both as to life and annual members. This cannot be accomplished by myself, alone, therefore I seek your kindly assistance. There are hundreds, yes, probably thousands of men in the trade and allied industries, who, if they were personally approached, and the advantages of membership in the S. A. F. and O. H. demonstrated to them, would willingly join our ranks, and this is why I appeal to you to help along our great work. There must certainly be several men amongst your own personal acquaintances who would make good S. A. F. and O. H. members; therefore, I say to you, each individual member, secure new members by your direct personal appeal. (Application blanks will be sent upon request.)

The opportunities presenting themselves at the coming convention to be held in Chicago, August next, in all probability will be the largest in the history of our Society, and the results which we hope to see accomplished at that time will, we trust, make history.

With a large membership present, all striving for the common good, and with the many advantages of our business organization, such a meeting and such an attendance cannot fail to produce a general good feeling, and do much towards bringing a closer affiliation of the different interests and allied societies which have been drifting away rather than toward the parent society.

Much excellent work has been done in the past years by the faithful workers in our various legislative committees; we have already secured many concessions through their work, and we are in the position through our strength and numerical number, to exert a further strong influence for good for opposition to measures deemed prejudicial to the best interests of the trade.

May I ask the officers, vice-presidents and members to commence a little missionary work at once among your fellow florists? I would be glad to see you bring in as many new members as possible; even one new member secured by you will be to your honor and credit. All new members should be reported to John Young, Secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth St., New York City, who will see that you are credited for members secured.

Thanking you in advance, hoping to meet you in Chicago and wishing you all a Prosperous and Happy New Year, believe me,

Fraternally yours,

RICHARD VINCENT, JR.,
President S. A. F. and O. H.

RAMBLER ROSES FOR EASTER.

Pot roses wanted for Easter, 1912, should be started by the middle of January. Especially is this necessary where growers are unable to give them at any stage of their growth a higher temperature than 50 to 55 degrees at night. It is always best to start them cool, say 45 degrees as a minimum, raising the temperature gradually as the growth advances. Cut away any dead and weak wood and merely shorten back the long, strong canes a little. Bend and twist them around wires or stakes. If tied erect they will break strongly near the top and not at all below; the bending down causes an even break. Plants that were pot-grown through the summer will force the earliest and best; next to these, those potted early in the fall. If potting is delayed until now, it stands to reason that the plants, having few roots in the pots, will break irregularly and weakly.

Allow such pink varieties as Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins eight to ten days more time than the old Crimson Rambler, and the so-called baby ramblers will come into flower more quickly than any of the climbing section. Where hybrid perpetuals, such as Jacqueminot, Brunner, Frau Karl Druschki and others, are grown, potting up should be completed at once. Prune the strongest growths back to three eyes, weaker shoots to one or two eyes. The hard pruning results in strong breaks. This must never be done with the ramblers, or all the flowering wood will be cut away. Spray freely when first housed, discontinuing it when growths are nicely started.

FIRE AT ONARGA.

There was no happy New Year for the Mosbæk Greenhouse Co., Onarga, Ill., for at noon on the last day of 1911, Sunday, fire destroyed all the service buildings. The greenhouses were little damaged, but the stock was exposed to the storm that was raging and what was not ruined by smoke was destroyed by frost, only a little being saved. The office was destroyed, with all its records; the heating sheds, with contents; the storage rooms, with stock, material and utensils. It has not yet been decided to rebuild, how soon or if at all, although the houses themselves stand in pretty fair shape. The most urgent thing at the moment is to collect outstanding accounts.

CARNATIONS

BENCHES VS. SOLID BEDS.

I should like you to state what are the advantages of benches over solid beds. I notice that, throughout the west, benches are used exclusively for roses and carnations, and as benches cost more than beds, both in erection and for repairs, there must be some grounds for the preference. I should like to get information from some of the leading growers, who have had experience in that line. J. D.

While some growers of roses and carnations prefer solid beds and get good results, the majority favor raised benches. The benches, it is pretty generally conceded, have the advantage in the winter months, when flowers sell at their highest prices. The roots are under somewhat better control, as the soil dries out more quickly, this being an advantage in dull, dark and cold weather. It is possible, however, to grow roses for several years in solid beds, and probably the saving of labor in replanting, combined with the fact that the roses continue to give splendid flowers for a term of years, makes this plan fully as profitable as the raised benches in the long run. Still, we find the majority of growers preferring raised benches for roses.

In the case of carnations, there are some who grow in solid beds and get an excellent pick, even in winter. However, most of the large and successful specialists in this flower, both east and west, prefer the bench system. There is an increasing use of cement to take the place of wood in bench construction. For late spring and summer flowering, solid beds are much the best, but for winter blooming the benches have a decided advantage. The experience of other Review readers in this connection would be interesting and timely. C. W.

SINGLE BLOOMS ON MAY DAY.

Will you please state the reason for May Day carnations coming single and of no value? Last year they did finely, but this year, though the plants are healthy and are making a splendid growth, two-thirds of the buds are coming single. I should like to know whether May Day is liable to act in that way, as our other varieties are doing well and show no signs of anything being wrong with them.

G. R. B.

The variety under discussion has always been in the habit of producing a greater or less percentage of these single blooms. Those who have been careful to propagate only from plants which threw no single blooms have kept this percentage down to a nominal figure, but if you have paid no attention to this in your propagating, you no doubt have aggravated the matter in that way. I have always found that plants which are defective in the way of producing inferior or single blooms usually produce an abundance of growth and lots of cuttings. When taking cuttings, the inexperienced are apt to whack into these plants, thinking that they are getting a fine lot of stock, when really they are ruining their stock. A. F. J. B.

BUDS DO NOT OPEN.

Enclosed you will find a specimen of my carnations. The blooms do not unfold, or, if any do come out, they are sleepy and unsalable. Part of them are on benches and part of them on solid beds, but they all act the same way. What is the matter with them? Please advise me at once, as I fear I shall lose the whole crop. When they first began to bloom, in November, they were fine. J. M. B.

The specimens were quite badly frozen, but there were some thrips in the blooms, and no doubt they are the cause of your trouble. You will find this subject treated exhaustively in recent numbers of The Review.

CARNATION RAINBOW.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a recent photograph made at the Wa-no-ka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y. The variety is Rainbow, on the order of Prosperity.

A MIXTURE OF FERTILIZERS.

Would one part wood ashes, one part bone meal and two parts ground sheep manure be a good mixture to apply to carnations? Mine are doing well, but I wish to feed them a little next month. The soil is a clay loam and only a little manure was added to it when the beds were filled. I have never used wood ashes, but am told it will produce stiff stems. M. M.

Do not mix the bone, manure and wood ashes, but apply them separately and at different times. We use no bone on our carnations at all any more, as we were unable to see any benefit from the use of it. If your carnations need feeding, you will find the sheep manure an excellent article for that purpose. Sprinkle a good handful on the soil between each row of plants halfway across a 5-foot bench. Repeat this about once in three weeks if the weather conditions are favorable to a healthy, normal growth. If the stems are weak, about the same quantity of wood ashes, applied about once in six weeks, will help to strengthen them.

SOIL AND THE FLORIST.

[A paper by Harry F. Good, of Springfield, O., read before the Springfield Florists' Club, December 11, 1911, concluded from The Review for December 28.]

Soils Known by Their Fruits.

The fertility and chemical composition of a soil may usually be determined by inspection of its color and texture, but these qualities, as well as the dryness or moisture and the excess or deficiency of silica and alumina, may be more accurately determined by the prevalence of certain species of wild plants and weeds. You will see the thistle and mullein growing where the purslane could not exist. You will find the nettle and wild snapdragon growing in the alluvial soils along our streams, but not in the uplands. There is a reason. Nature has placed these species where they assimilate from the soil the requirements for their growth and support. We seldom see the giant sycamore on the mountain top or the chestnut in the valley.

THE DETROIT PROGRAM

The American Rose Society and the American Carnation Society will hold a joint exhibition and conventions at Wayne Pavilion, Detroit, Mich., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. The programs as supplied by the secretaries of the two societies are as follows:

ROSE SOCIETY

Wednesday, January 10, 7:30 P. M.

A general meeting attended by each society and the Detroit Florists' Club.

Thursday, January 11, 2:30 P. M.

Calling to Order of Thirteenth Annual Meeting by President Adolph Farenwald.
Address by the President.
Reading Minutes of Previous Session.
Secretary's Report.
Treasurer's Report.
Reports of Committees.
Selection of Place for Next Year's Meeting.
Election of Officers.
Appointment of Committees.
Paper by Mr. Otto Koenig, St. Louis, Mo., entitled "Roses in the Mississippi Valley."

A Question Box will be placed at the Secretary's desk for the purpose of receiving for discussion or answer pertinent questions; the same to be opened at the evening session.

Thursday, January 11, 7:45 P. M.

Illustrated lecture by Mr. Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., "The Rose as Noticed in Europe."
Paper by Mr. Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis, entitled, "Roses in the Middle West."

The Question Box will be opened after this paper.

Granite That Crumbles.

A word about alumina may be interesting. It forms the larger part of our earth and is the oxide of the metal, aluminum. It occurs in nature in combination with silica, in connection with other bases. The most common of these compounds is feldspar, a silicate of alumina and potash. This is one of the constituents of granite and several other igneous rocks. Some varieties of these, by exposure to the atmosphere, become completely disintegrated, passing from the hard granite we see in buildings into the soft, crumbling, earthy masses. It is the feldspar which undergoes the change, owing to the action of rain water charged with carbonic acid, which dissolves the potash and some of the silica in the feldspar, leaving the greater part of the silica and alumina still united. Pure clay is white, owing to the dissolution of white feldspar; if red, it contains iron; if dark, it contains vegetable matter. Science has never determined why some of the granites will thus crumble, while others have lasted for countless years.

Different Forms of Alkali.

The alkalis are also interesting in their relation to our soils. Alkalis proper are potash, soda, lithia, rubidium, cæsium, hydroxide and ammonia. Potash is called the vegetable alkali, soda the mineral alkali, and ammonia the volatile alkali. Lime, magnesia, baryta and strontia are called alkaline earth. Alkalis belong to a general class of substances called bases, which are oxides of metals usually combined with water, or compounds containing carbon and nitrogen, called organic bases, all of which unite with acids to form salts. The bitter of alkalis and the sour of acids neutralize each other and disappear when a salt is formed.

As to the alkaloids of plants, some of them are poisonous and others are valuable medicines. All of them are bases; that is, they unite with acids to form salts and in many cases they are used medicinally. All alkaloids contain carbon, nitrogen and hydrogen, and usually oxygen. Some of the most important are theine of coffee and tea, nicotine of tobacco, morphine from opium and quinine from Peruvian bark, as well as strychnine, atropine, cocaine and others.

POINSETTIAS IN KENTUCKY.

Poinsettias appear to have done extra well everywhere this season, but no one has had better success with them than came to reward the efforts of Miss Fannie D. White, whose house, at Lexington, Ky., is shown in the accompanying illustration. The photograph was made a week before Christmas. Within seven days the entire 1,500 plants were sold without satisfying the demand.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cannas and Dahlias.

Of course, it is much too early to start either cannas or dahlias, unless some of the latter are wanted for a spring crop. As to whether they are a paying crop, there seems to be some doubt. Their culture under glass is probably not yet properly understood, but those who have tried a house or two of them say that they do not make them any money. There are good reasons for hoping, however, that indoor dahlia culture may in the near future be carried out on a considerable scale. Look over the dahlia tubers wherever they are stored. This should be done every week or ten days. Remove any decaying tubers, as decay spreads rapidly. In mild weather give abundance of air. This, with a dry atmosphere without the necessity of applying fire heat, should keep the tubers in good condition. Look over the canna roots and cut away any decaying portions. Sometimes these are stored below greenhouse benches, but this is no fit place for them, as they are bound to get more or less drip, and this, added to the humid atmosphere, will start premature growth.

Greenhouse Tubers.

Gloxinias, tuberous begonias, achimenes, gesneras, tydæas and fancy caladiums will all now be at rest. During stormy weather, when other work is not pressing, is a suitable time to shake them out of the pots and pans and store them in boxes or flats until wanted for forcing. Keep the caladiums warm; 60 degrees at night is not too much. The other roots named will keep better in a temperature 10 degrees lower. To prevent shriveling or dry rot in the begonias and gloxinias, pack them in cocoanut fiber or dry sand. In order to secure an early batch of gloxinias, start some of the tubers now in flats of sand and leaf-mold in a warm, moist house. Do not water much until growth starts, and even then it is better to err on the dry side. Pot up before the growths are too strong.

Canterbury Bells.

To have Canterbury bells, as Campanula medium is commonly called, in flower at Easter, plants which were potted last fall should now be given a light, sunny bench in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. They dislike a close atmosphere and like lots of fresh air. If forced hard, their growth will be weak and attenuated. When well grown they are beautiful objects and sell on sight. The single pink and white are the best varieties for commercial purposes. The calycantheum or hose-in-hose variety is also popular, but the doubles are much too heavy.

Dimorphotheca Aurantiaca.

The South African plant, Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, flowers under glass in a shorter time than any other annual I know of. It is of a lovely deep orange color and is in demand at the best class of stores. This season a variety of hybrid forms are offered, including many new colors. These are said to be the finest novelties of the year, and are well worth giving a trial. Probably Arctotis grandis has been used for intercrossing them.

Candytuft.

No crop at Memorial day pays more per square foot of space than well-grown candytuft. To have it of first-class quality, the seed must be sown before February 1 in small pots. Sow several seeds in a 3-inch pot and thin out to three seedlings. Grow in a cold house; 40 degrees at night is sufficiently high; and plant out in beds or benches before the pots become matted with roots. The cooler the candytuft can be grown in the earlier stages, the better in quality will it be. Purchase the finest strains procurable, and the money will be well invested.

Shamrocks.

It is now too late to sow shamrock seed and have salable plants March 17 next. The seedlings should now be large enough to transplant into flats. Give them a cool house; 40 to 42 degrees at night is sufficiently high; and use a rather sandy loam for them. Avoid spraying overhead and cold drafts, as either of these would help to cause mildew, and when once the plants get badly attacked with this they are of little further value.

THE RIGHT DOSE OF CYANIDE.

Some weeks ago you were kind enough to send us a copy of a formula for fumigating with cyanide and sulphuric acid. We have made a number of tests according to the formula and prescription, but we find the result is not satisfactory. With one fumigation, it does not even kill the green aphis, and as for ants, wood lice and such other insects, they seem to grow fat on it. We have repeated the dose and made it a trifle stronger than the prescription, and it killed the aphis but did not touch the ants, mealy bug or wood lice. We tried it in the gardenia and orchid houses. Can you give us any information as to why it does not kill the other insects? We understood that it would kill everything that was breathing, or that was alive. S. & S.

of greenhouse space, should kill both green and black fly if given an all-night exposure. This is perfectly safe in the cool months, but more hazardous in summer. The chances of injury are always much increased in hot weather, not only in using gas but also in the use of other fumigants.

The formula tried by S. & S. was one that was printed in The Review some time ago and recommended by Prof. John J. Davis, of the Illinois Entomological Department. Nothing was stated in this particular article as to what insects the gas, at the strength named, would kill, but it may be assumed that green and black aphis were probably meant. It needs a considerably heavier dose to kill thrips, spider, mealy bug and scale than is advised for aphis. I know of only one nicotine fumigant which will kill spider or mealy bug and I know of none that will kill scale; all of them will kill aphis and several of them will kill thrips if the dose is repeated.

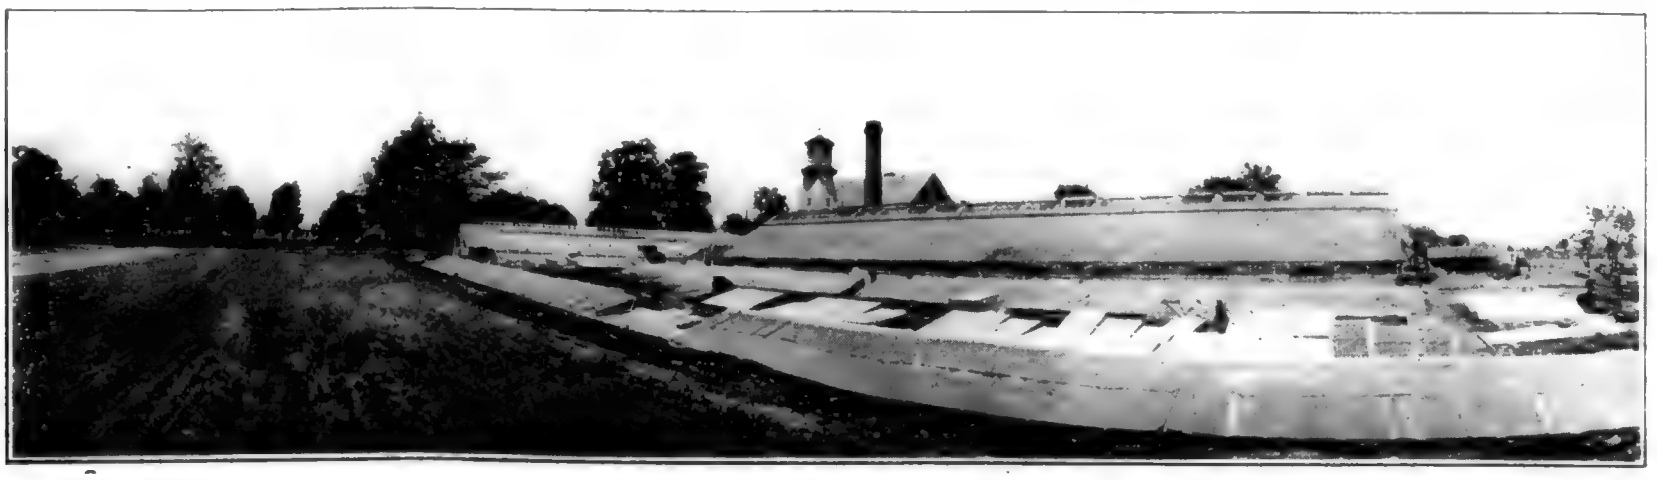
Quite tender plants will stand a heavy dose of gas in a low temperature, say 40 degrees at night, but the same plants would in most cases be ruined by it in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. Gardenias, while grown warm, will withstand a dose of gas powerful enough to destroy mealy bug, but the dose would have to be at the rate of one ounce per 1,000 cubic feet. Thus, a house 20x100, with an average height of ten feet, would require twenty ounces of cyanide to clean out mealy bug, and the probabilities are that all the eggs would not be destroyed even then. It would require a much heavier dose than even this to kill San Jose and other scales.

I have never fumigated for ants, wood lice, roaches, etc. It is probable that many of these might be killed by the gas if they remained in the house while it was being used, but they have the faculty of crawling out of the way when their presence is really desired. Yet it has been proved that the gas, if used sufficiently strong, will rid dwelling houses of their most undesirable insect tenants.

I would advise going slowly in the use of gas in orchid houses. One well known firm almost ruined a house of cattleyas by using it, and I have recollection of another grower who disfigured his fine odontoglossums and miltonias in the same way. It takes considerable time for some of the plants to show the ill effects of the gas, but when once they are severely injured the journey to recovery is tedious. C. W.

WINTERICH, OF DEFIANCE.

Christ. Winterich, of Defiance, O., is widely known in the trade as a cyclamen specialist—Defiance is a fine and prosperous city, but the retail trade isn't enough to occupy all Mr. Winterich's energies. But Defiance doesn't know that the name of Winterich is a household word wherever cyclamens are grown. Defiance knows him best as the man who gives the school children plants to be grown on all summer and then exhibited for prizes at the fall festival. Defiance has another institution of which it is proud. It is the Publicity Bureau. It is in charge of E. S. Bronson—Bronson the Booster. It was Bronson who made, with his little revolving camera, the pictures of Winterich's place reproduced on this page. The kind of stuff Bronson gets off when anyone will let him is this:



"Permit me to address you regarding what we consider one of, if not the finest of show places in this City of Rivers—Defiance—namely, the Winterich greenhouses, owned and operated under the personal direction of Mr. Christ Winterich, a man whose very nature means progressiveness, and which assertion is most happily and convincingly verified by a glance at the photos sent you by this mail under separate cover, wherein will be seen several hundred little folks standing among the hotbeds with arms full of plants, given absolutely free to them by this progressive florist—they to grow them to as large and fine specimens as possible and then display same for prizes, also donated by this same florist, at our annual fall festival. It goes without saying that such live, wideawake boosting makes a most decided hit with everybody, and it not only proves the biggest and strongest kind of advertising for Mr. Winterich, but also for the fall festival, which is a merchants' affair, and accordingly always provides a flower show as an added feature, which in itself never fails to command its share, and more, too, of the sightseeing crowds, because of its attractive individuality. No wonder the name of Winterich is known in every household in the city. No wonder the Winterich greenhouses prove to be the great show place where Defiance people delight to take friends and strangers for a feast for the eyes and where 'Welcome' seems to pervade the very atmosphere from every nook and corner. No wonder this progressive florist, Winterich, has made a success. Accordingly Defiance is justly proud of Winterich."

WHEN TO SOW SALVIA.

PROPAGATION OF MUMS.

I find it necessary to ask you again about chrysanthemums. Last year I had a little trouble in rooting the cuttings. Now I am about to put away my stock plants and I will ask you to give me a little idea about how to put them away. Should they be planted deep or shallow? Do they need plenty of water or do they want to be kept on the dry side? In your last reply you mentioned that I kept them too warm and that this might be the cause of their not rooting. I notice on my stock quite a number of sprouts that came out of the ground and these are well rooted. Would it be advisable either to pot these or plant them in beds? I should like to get enough so that I can offer some for sale. Will you also give me the names of some late sorts, either white, pink or yellow, that will come in with the Nonin mums, or even later? J. G. K.

In putting away stock chrysanthemum plants, they should be planted a little deeper than when in the beds, and so long as they are to be kept in a semi-dormant condition they should be kept cool and given but little water.

When the cuttings are to be rooted, use clean, sharp sand and avoid a high temperature and overwatering. A temperature of 60 degrees, with about 10 degrees of additional bottom heat, will generally give a perfect stand.

If there are varieties which you wish to multiply extensively, the rooted suckers can be taken off and placed either in beds or boxes of soil. They will give a good many cuttings during the season. Another way would be to divide each of the stock plants into four or more portions, according to its size, and place them in beds or boxes a little deeper than they have been planted. By dividing them in this way it is possible to increase the number of cuttings.

As late white sorts, Chas. Razer, Timothy Eaton and White Chadwick will be satisfactory. Bonnaffon, Golden Chadwick and Golden Eagle are among the best of the yellow sorts. As pink varieties, Maud Dean, A. J. Balfour and Wells' Late Pink might be used.

MUM MRS. DRABBLE.

In a recent issue The Review illustrated Chrysanthemum Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, with a note by C. H. Totty to the effect that it was the most conspicuous novelty at the eastern shows this year and sure to be widely grown as soon as it becomes known. In this connection a note in an English trade paper will be of interest. It is by C. Harmon Payne, who has an international reputation as a chrysanthemum expert. He says:

"No praise can be too extravagant for that wonderful variety, Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, which I regard as the finest of all the Japanese types. Its recent honors are a prize for being the best flower in the show at Paris, as well as being chosen premier at Bradford, the latter place, in the opinion of the growers present, having at its show the finest lot of Japanese blooms that have been seen at any exhibition this autumn. Apart from its size, there is a remarkable richness in the marble white florets, which is usually described as 'quality.' I have seen it growing in several instances, and it seems to matter little whether the plants are strongly grown in a small one—the blooms stand out larger and more massive looking than any other near them. This easy culture will commend itself to the amateur cultivator; and it is not a tall grower. If the variety has a fault it is that the large blossoms take a long time to develop, making it difficult to get them open by, say, November 1; and it would therefore be advisable to make an early start by putting the cuttings in as soon as possible. I may state that one of the blooms which gained the above named distinctions was quite ten inches in depth as it was growing on the plant and it was not fully out when exhibited."

SEED SOWING.

The present is a suitable time to sow a good-sized batch of sweet peas for spring flowering. The increase in the indoor culture of sweet peas is indeed astounding. A few years ago they were unprocurable or not even thought of at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Now they are purchasable in tens of thousands for these two holidays. In fact, there is no holiday in the year when they are not to be had, from either outdoors or under glass, and while we can not approach in quality the superb sweet peas grown, for instance, outside in Great Britain, we can grow extraordinarily fine flowers under glass.

The formation of a National Sweet Pea Society is doing a great deal toward still further popularizing this finest of all annuals for cutting. In Boston next July this society is offering nearly $2,500 in prizes for sweet peas, more than the rose and carnation societies have ever been able to offer, and the end is not yet. I note that even in mid-July prizes are offered for sweet peas to be produced under glass. Here is one way to overcome our hot, droughty summers, which have rendered outdoor sweet pea culture difficult and unprofitable. With big, roomy, well ventilated houses it should be possible to grow them well and profitably in our hottest weather.

For sowing now it is better not to use so many of the so-called forcing varieties, but rather select such sorts as are used outdoors. Of these the following are recommended: Countess Spencer, a splendid seller in the markets; Dorothy Eckford, John Ingman, Lady Grisel Hamilton, White Spencer, Helen Lewis and Miss Willmott. These are all good, reliable sorts. As a general rule, deep pink, white, orange pink and lavender are the best selling colors. The call for scarlet, crimson, maroon, blue and variegated forms is but slight; the pink and white of the Blanche Ferry type, however, are an exception.

Seed may be sown either in small pots, or in rows in the beds where they are to flower. Avoid thick sowing; it will only mean crowded, weakened haulm and poorer spikes than if the plants had more room. The plants should be three or four inches apart, and the spikes are always stronger when even this distance is exceeded. Last summer was hot and dry, which caused the seeds to become well ripened. This makes their outer covering hard, and moisture has so little impression on it that germination will be slower. With new, choice kinds a common plan to assist germination is to cut off a little of the outside shell. It is also a good plan to soak the seed twenty-four hours in warm water before sowing. This will insure quicker germination.

ELECTRIC AD IN PLANTS.

George T. Duey is manager of the Electric Park Greenhouses, at Fort Smith, Ark., and he it was who made the "electric" sign in plants at Electric park. The accompanying illustration shows the bed, which was fifty-two feet long and sixteen feet wide, raised five and one-half feet at the back. The bed contained ninety-two yards of soil and fifteen loads of rock. The border is planted with ageratum and Vinca variegata. The lettering is of alternanthera and Santolina incana, white churt being scattered between the letters to the thickness of a half inch to afford a background. Since the sign was inclined to make it more easily read from the front, the bank at the back had to be taken care of and this was done, as shown in one of the illustrations, by planting it with Asparagus Sprengeri, Vinca variegata, wandering jew, with Boston ferns at conspicuous points. Mr. Duey says the sign has been read by many thousands of people every week and that several business men have so approved this method of advertising that next season there will be a number of floral signs in conspicuous places, advertising the various enterprises of the city.

PURPOSE OF VENTILATION.

Will you kindly answer the following: As I understand the subject, the air in a house should always be in motion during the day, but so quietly that you cannot feel it. This is one of the most important things to consider in growing plants in a greenhouse, as the stoma of the plant has no other way of receiving fresh air. This, as well as keeping the soil cultivated and well drained, is an important aid in preventing the soil from becoming sour. I have seen soil in a violet house become sour after the house had been up only three weeks and the soil was on a level with that on the outside. During the day the sun shines on the south side and makes this glass warmer than on the north side; therefore the air which is nearest to the glass absorbs most of the heat from the sun's rays and, becoming warmer and lighter, must rise and go out at the ventilator; then the cold air that comes in must go down the north side. When there is a sash on the south that opens at the bottom and the sash on the north side is opened at the top and at intervals, this produces a more free motion of the air and it travels down the glass instead of going straight down.

However, the warm bench air comes up between the benches and goes up until it strikes the glass; here it is made cold and comes down. The only place for it to come is on the benches; therefore it has a tendency to cause mildew, or this makes the bottom of the soil warm and the top cooler, which I should think would not be good for plants. This may be one of the reasons why the plants have most of their roots at the bottom of the bench, instead of near the surface, where they would receive more nitrogen from the air. Could this be improved if there were a flow pipe over each bench and two returns? I have found out the way the air travels by hanging black cobwebs in different parts of the house night and day, with the wind in all directions, and they all seem to hang to one side from the moving air. This ought to be a sure sign that the air is constantly moving. H. K.

The principal object in ventilating greenhouses is to allow the hot air to pass out and thus keep the houses at the proper temperature. In midwinter weather there is little occasion for ventilating on cold, cloudy days, as much of the surplus heat passes off through the glass, between the panes, etc. A considerable portion of the air which finds its way into the houses does so through cracks and openings other than those intended for ventilating purposes. While, of course, it is necessary that fresh air enter the houses, bringing with it a supply of carbon dioxide for the plants, as a rule little or no attention need be paid to it.

So far as the ventilators and their arrangement are concerned, about all that need be thought of is to have them large enough and so arranged as to make it possible to regulate the temperature without exposing the plants to strong drafts. Of course ventilation is helpful, also, by allowing the moisture-laden air to pass out, thus drying out the houses.

The movement of the air in a greenhouse, when the ventilators are open, will depend upon several factors, such as the difference in the temperature of the air inside and outside the house, and the force and direction of the wind, as well as the size and arrangement of the ventilators. As a rule, there is an upward movement of the warm air toward the ventilators and a considerably smaller movement of the cold air from outside downward from the ventilators, but neither should be so great as to create a draft.

The admission of too much cold air into a rose house, thus dropping the temperature below 55 degrees, often causes mildew, and if there is a strong draft the mildew will be all the worse. This is partly because it gives a check to the growth of the plants and partly because it is favorable to the development of mildew.

About the only plants which are known to take in nitrogen through their roots (except, of course, as a nitrate in solution) are the leguminosæ, and the reason for the roots of plants seeking the bottom of the benches is that the soil there is less likely to be wet and soggy and, being better ventilated, the roots can more readily obtain a supply of oxygen.

Sufficient artificial heat should be supplied to permit drying out the soil and prevent its becoming sour, but if this has proper attention and the ventilation is attended to, there should be no trouble either from soggy soil or drafts of cold air on the plants. T.

Ferns

PROPAGATION OF FARLEYENSE.

I should like to get some information regarding the propagation of Adiantum Farleyense. I have a few plants of this fern on hand in 6-inch pots. Would it be best to divide these, or what would you suggest? What temperature suits them best? Could I grow them in the same soil with A. hybridum? H. B.

The best method of propagating Adiantum Farleyense is to divide the crowns into small pieces, cutting off the foliage at the same time, and then to plant out the divisions in sand on a warm propagating bench. The divisions will soon begin to grow, if the conditions of heat and moisture are right, and when they have made one or two small fronds they may be potted off the same as seedling ferns. It is too early to divide the plants now, as they are not ready to go ahead at this season, and it would be better to wait until about the beginning of April.

Adiantum Farleyense enjoys more heat than A. hybridum, for the first-named should not go below 60 degrees at night, while A. hybridum will do nicely at 55 degrees. W. H. T.

CATERPILLARS ON FERNS.

Will you please tell us what we can do to get rid of green worms in our greenhouse? They eat the young leaves on our Boston ferns and do a great deal of damage. M. B.

Hand-picking is the safest method to get rid of caterpillars on Boston ferns, as the dusting of insecticides on the foliage of the ferns will make them look dirty, and consequently they will be unsalable to a critical customer. Putting Paris green on lettuce or cabbage leaves and laying the leaves among the plants may get some of the pests, but it is not safe to use this poison on the fern fronds, from the fact that it is liable to damage the foliage.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For several days following Christmas cut flower supplies were light. Business also was quiet, but arrivals are now more plentiful and the new year opens with a quite active business. White roses, which were hard to move at Christmas, are selling better, there being many calls for funeral work. The yellow varieties, such as Hillingdon, Ward, Mrs. Waddell and others, continue to sell as well as anything in the market, and there were never so many yellow roses seen in Boston. Some fine Richmonds and Rhea Reids are coming in, and White Killarney are of splendid quality. It is noted that many buyers prefer the old pink Killarney to the newer deep colored sort. Carnations are in good supply and demand, prices being a little better than a year ago. There are still a few straggling mums coming in, but they do not sell well.

Violets are harder to sell, due to the colder weather, which always hurts their sale. Sweet peas are overabundant. Valley of the new crop is good and moves a little better. Yellow daffodils and tulips are not yet abundant and sell satisfactorily, but there is an oversupply of Paper Whites, Romans and campernelles. Of stevia there is far too much. Freesia is of fine quality, but prices have dwindled to half of Christmas prices. Liliums and callas are not selling well, but marguerites are always cleaned up quickly. There are too many calendulas, and of snapdragons and mignonette there are now some splendid bunches seen, as well as some of inferior quality. A few forget-me-nots, bachelor's buttons and English primroses have appeared, and there is an abundance of pansies. The demand for Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus is good. Plant business, as is usual after Christmas, is quiet. New Year's day saw a good call for violets, valley, gardenias and carnations.

The Detroit Convention.

If all Boston and New England growers who are planning to attend the Detroit rose and carnation convention will communicate with William Nicholson, of Framingham, he will secure berths for them on train 13, called the Wolverine express, which leaves Boston at 2 p. m. Tuesday, January 9, arriving in Detroit at 8:10 a. m. Wednesday. Fare $17.40, lower berths $4, upper berths $3.20. For parties of ten or more traveling together on one ticket, fare will be $14.55. Mr. Nicholson hopes to secure a good delegation from Boston and vicinity and quite a few have already expressed their intention of going.

Various Notes.

Johnston Knight, the courteous and obliging manager of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, was presented with a gold watch and chain December 23 by President John McFarland, in behalf of the growers and salesmen of the market. The present was well deserved and we hope Mr. Knight will be spared many years to enjoy it.

James Wheeler is cutting quantities of superb antirrhinums, the finest I have seen at this season in the Boston market. His big house of carnations is rendering an excellent account of itself, the old Enchantress being grand.

Mrs. W. H. Ward, of Montvale, is bringing in the first forget-me-nots of the season, also excellent freesia, in addition to her usual high grade carnations.

T. J. Benwell, of the A. H. Hews Co., reports business at their big factory as picking up nicely, everything pointing to a heavy spring trade.

Peter M. Miller is in Bar Harbor, Me., this week. The veteran Thomas J. Grey has retired from active service in the T. J. Grey Co. He has earned a rest, as for many years he has been a hard worker. No one locally is better known and respected than Tom Grey, and his acquaintances and friends cover a wide area.

William T. Walke, of Salem, and the Mishawum Greenhouses, of Mishawum, have a fine assortment of azaleas at the Boston Coöperative Market.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, cut 11,000 roses for the Christmas market. His specialties are Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Ward, and his flowers are noted for their high quality.

John Barr, of South Natick, had a tremendous Christmas pick of high grade carnations. His new variegated Mrs. B. P. Cheney continues to render a good account of itself, while Beacon, Pink Delight, White Perfection and others are grand.

A. W. Belcher, of Winthrop, is growin bulbs heavily again this season. He has Paper Whites and Romans in quantity and will soon have an abundance of Golden Spur and other narcissi.

Heliotrope as a cut flower was years ago a prime favorite in the big markets. It comes as a reminder of old times to see the splendid bunches on long stems brought in by F. L. Hardy, of Natick.

Calendulas are becoming more of a winter market flower each year. N. A. Hudson, of Natick, and D. J. Horrigan, of East Foxboro, are each large shippers of these to the Boston Coöperative Market.

William Sim had 50,000 of his high grade sweet peas for Christmas, 125,000 Princess of Wales violets and some thousands of pansies.

The West Street Greenhouse Co. (Keizer & Perkins, proprietors), of Reading, have extra fine carnations, such as White Wonder, Pink Delight, Rose-pink Enchantress and Enchantress, also sweet peas at the Boston Coöperative Market.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. has the large show window in its new store on Park street arranged with excellent flowering plants and everything is in excellent running order.

James Tulis, of South Sudbury, has large daily shipments of finely grown carnations at the Boston Flower Exchange. His leaders are Beacon, White Perfection, Gloriosa, White Wonder, Fenn, Enchantress and White Enchantress.

The schedule committee of the National Sweet Pea Society met at Horticultural hall December 28 and gave the schedule for the July show a final overhauling. Considerably over $2,000 will be offered in premiums.

Thomas Pegler is receiving from the Willow Hill Greenhouses Freesia Purity of fine quality, also marguerites and callas in quantity. R. D. Kimball, of Waban, is also sending him some fine freesia.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, cut seventy-five dozen of his long stemmed Freesia Purity for Christmas and has had daily shipments since, all of which are eagerly snapped up. Mr. Nicholson will go to the Detroit convention and will visit Joliet, where his younger son, Harry, is employed, also Dorner's, Hill's and other leading carnation places ere returning home.

William Caraher, the genial salesman for the Sutermeister estate, of Readville, has excellent pans of L'Innocence hyacinths and Montresor tulips at the Boston Flower Exchange.

January is late for mums, but James Philbrick, of Woburn, still has white and yellow varieties of good quality at the Boston Coöperative Market, also violets in quantity.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, has a fine house of bachelor's buttons, from which he has started to pick, also excellent marguerites. His carnations are superb, White Wonder, Gloriosa, Beacon and Scarlet Glow being noteworthy.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, have lately had heavy sales on their azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias, crotons and small ferns. They are growing marguerites heavily and had a big holiday pick of carnations. E. A. Peirce will go to Detroit.

F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, had a splendid plant sale for the holidays. Otaheite oranges, poinsettias and kentias were his specialties. He is cutting gardenias and cattleyas in quantity.

The year closed with a snow storm, followed by rain and a cool wave. December was an extraordinarily warm month, the maximum temperature being 68 degrees. In 1910 it was 53 degrees. In 1911 the minimum was 10 degrees and in 1910 it was 10 degrees below zero. The mean temperature was 24 degrees in 1910, but it was no less than 37½ degrees in 1911. Rainfall for the year was 40 inches, nearly a normal supply; and of this, over 25 inches has fallen since July 1.

Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., has rounded out 65 years in business. They are the pioneer florists of Boston and still at the top. Their two big stores at 124 Tremont street and 799 Boylston street did a tremendous Christmas business.

In a paragraph relating to Lady Hillingdon and Mrs. Ward roses in last week's Review, I was made to say that the former would produce ten flowers to one of the latter. This should have been two to one. W. N. C.

Ames, Ia.—F. J. Olsan, the florist and seedsman, has removed his downtown headquarters to a store in the new concrete Olsan block.

WATERLOO, IA.

The Market.

Christmas trade was all that could be wished for in this locality, although some of the florists claim that it will not surpass last year. The week previous some apprehension was felt regarding weather conditions, but these turned out ideal, which saved a great deal of time and expense in wrapping plants, etc. Advance orders were not quite so heavy as in previous years, the people waiting until the last four or five days to do their buying.

The call for pot plants was extremely heavy; nearly all the growers say they were "cleaned out." Poinsettias sold exceptionally well, considering the fact that this is the first year that they have been grown here to any extent. One firm disposed of several hundred in pots and pans, but the cut ones did not move well until the last minute, the price being put down to $2 and $2.50 per dozen. Holly sold well, but other greens did not move at all.

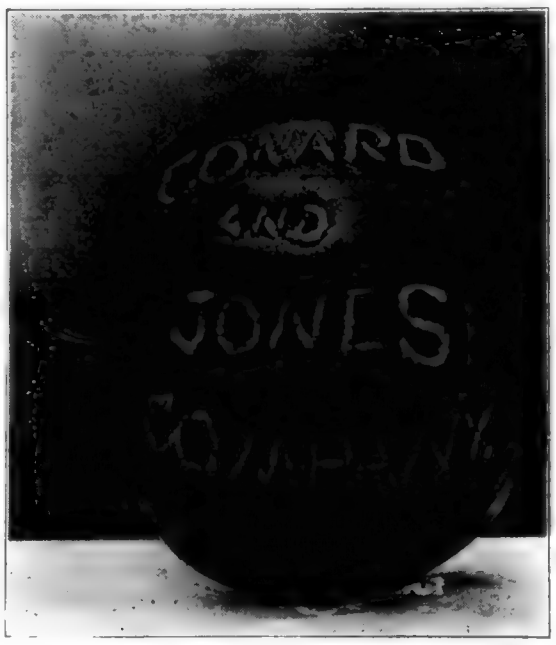
In cut flowers roses seemed to have the lead, with carnations next, Paper Whites also selling well. Violets, home-grown, as well as those shipped in, were fine and sold without any trouble. Roman hyacinths were not in demand at all. American Beauties that were shipped in from out of town were poor in the extreme, being bull-headed and blue, while Richmonds were extra fine. There were also some poor carnations shipped in. Azaleas and cyclamen were of poor quality, although a few good ones here and there were to be seen. The New Year's trade did not amount to much.

Various Notes.

Charles Sherwood filled every order he received for Christmas in full, not one being sent out short. Mr. Sherwood was more than satisfied with his Christmas trade and said it would easily surpass last year. All of the greenhouse force was shifted to the downtown store to help get out orders, while four delivery rigs were kept constantly on the go for two days. This is the only firm in this locality that enjoyed a good, all-round crop of everything. Roses, carnations, Paper Whites and violets were in abundance. Their carnations started flowering in October and have been in heavy crop ever since, and from present indications it looks as though they will never be off crop during the entire season. Two new rose houses, 28x100 each, erected by this firm last summer and planted to Richmond, Perle, Killarney and White Killarney, have done exceptionally well. For the month of December the 3,000 plants gave them 8,500 blooms of good quality, 2,700 being cut Christmas week. Mr. Sherwood also says that funeral work last week was heavy and that business for 1912 is starting out well.

Crittenden & Daniel report that they did a tremendous business and that they sold out everything. Their carnations were in full crop for Christmas. They have discontinued the growing of roses, on account of there being so much smoke in their district.

The New York Floral Co., a Greek concern, which opened up here some time ago, says that business has been good, and that they disposed of pretty nearly everything they had on hand.



Joseph Bancroft & Son, Cedar Falls, state that Christmas trade was good, but that it would not exceed that of last year. In addition to their heavy plant and cut flower trade, a tremendous business was done in holly and Christmas trees. Their roses and carnations were off crop for the holidays, but at this writing are coming along pretty well.

A CHRISTMAS PUMPKIN.

An enormous pumpkin attracted attention at the postoffice at West Grove, Pa., at Christmas, not only for its size but for the inscription it carried. The local paper gave it this notice:

"If Harvey M. Cook, Avondale, expert agriculturist, would collaborate with Wizard Burbank, of California, and Antoine Wintzer, rose propagandist of West Grove, the mind fails to conceive of the wonderful results of which the trio are capable. Mr. Cook, proprietor of Avon-Mohr farm, Avondale, has grown and now exhibits at the West Grove postoffice a marvelous Christmas pumpkin, across whose flaming, fat, yellow side are emblazoned the words 'Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.' The process of growing such letters as he desires on fruit and vegetables is a secret owned exclusively by Mr. Cook.

His compliment to the Conard & Jones Co. is in recognition of their world-wide fame as rose and flower specialists, and their unrivaled propagandist, Mr. Antoine Wintzer."

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The Christmas holidays are gone, but in their trail they have left a general satisfaction among the florists and a promising prospect for continued prosperity for the next few months to come. Never in the annals of floriculture in this vicinity has there been such a volume of business and good reports come from all sides. As at Thanksgiving, practically everything was sold to the limit, with prices slightly above normal. The growing tendency to buy potted plants at such times was again emphasized and the demand fully equaled the supply. Everything red sold out at sight and the demand was unsatiated.

The week succeeding Christmas has also been a busy one, because of several large funerals and the unusual number of coming-out functions, together with other festivities. For the New Year's celebration there has also been an unusual demand.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms of the association, December 25, but owing to the holiday the attendance was small. The newly elected officers were at their stations. Cornelius Hartstra read an interesting paper on flowers that could be used for general purposes but which are not generally grown by commercial florists. This provoked a long and instructive discussion. The committee on the annual banquet of the club reported that it would be held at the rooms of the association Monday evening, January 15, and that arrangements were progressing satisfactorily.

Various Notes.

William Jurgens, of Newport, was a visitor in this city last week, following a visit to New York city.

Dexter E. Newell, of Attleboro, Mass., who recently inherited considerable property from a brother, has leased his range of greenhouses to J. Ockert, his former foreman.

Joseph Kopelman is cutting some extra fine Killarney, White Killarney and My Maryland roses at his greenhouses at Oaklawn. He reports the biggest business in his experience during the Christmas holidays.

James Dillon, of Swan Point cemetery, who has been on the sick list for some time, is reported as improving.

William J. Stewart, of Boston, called upon a number of his friends in this vicinity recently.

During the gale which swept across this state last Thursday, a large plate glass window in the front of Macnair's store was blown in.

Thomas Curley supplied a choice lot of poinsettias in plants and cut blooms for the local market for Christmas and they found ready sale.

Oscar J. and Charles J. Schultz, florists of Newport, have the sympathy of the trade in the death of their father, Charles J. Schultz, in that city December 23.

Miss Florence Willard, of the Hope Greenhouses, recently purchased several hundred dollars' worth of orchids, principally cattleyas and oncidiums. Her cut of orchids during the holidays was good.

Thomas J. Johnston & Co. have been driven by special decorations and large funeral orders, in addition to transient and store business during the last few weeks.

N. D. Pierce, at Norwood, has a fine house of sweet peas which are just ready to cut.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, had the flowers and decorations for a large coming-out party last week and those for a number of smaller similar functions.

Mr. Scott, of the Westminster Greenhouses, reports the biggest Christmas since he has been in business.

The Maplehurst Greenhouses, William C. Pratt & Son proprietors, at Long Meadow, are rapidly getting into shape. One house, 23 x 120 feet, has been completed and planted with carnations and sweet peas. E. A. Mallette, formerly florist and greenhouse superintendent at the Rhode Island College at Kingston, is superintendent.

Nelson Taft recently completed the installation of a large sized Putnam boiler in his range on Hartford avenue, this city.

Johnston Bros. had the decorations for several society functions recently.

John Urquhart, of Newport, was a visitor in Boston recently.

Edgar Nock is just finishing a large orchid house and intends going into this line of propagation extensively.

H. C. Neubrand, with W. S. Pino, was on the sick list recently for several days.

F. Deitz has just received a large consignment of bulbs for Easter forcing. He took two large funeral designs to Worcester, Mass., last week.

John Allan, of Newport, paid a visit to friends in this city recently.

BERGER'S NEW STORE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken just before Thanksgiving in the new quarters of Berger Bros., in Philadelphia. The quickness of the photographer has caught the modest Harry Berger in the very center of the picture, while engrossed with business. John Berger is at the left, his smile showing that he has just completed one of those famous chrysanthemum deals. A survey of the scene will convince one that the atmosphere of business is here; the young man at the telephone who could not wait until the picture was completed, the earnestness on the faces of those who were interrupted for a moment in their conversations are clear proof. The scope of the firm's transactions is shown by a map on the office wall, whereon may be seen the great lakes clearly delineated. Paul R. Klingsporn was unfortunately called out on business just before the picture was taken, while William Stevens, who represents John Burton, is around the corner closing a Beauty deal. Phil.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Although the Christmas trade of 1911 was no record breaker, the sales altogether amounted to more than the florists anticipated, and in the line of flowering plants, with the exception of a few poinsettias and Lorraine begonias, a general clean-up was reported. Azaleas brought high prices, and a good many more in medium and large sizes could have been sold if on hand. Ferns, palms and made-up baskets found ready buyers. Home-grown roses and orchids, as well as the immense stock of seasonable cut flowers which were received from Chicago and other cities, and which were all of high quality, sold well at a reasonable profit. Several carloads of Christmas trees were handled by the local florists and only a few are left. On Christmas day it rained constantly, but nevertheless all the stores kept up a rushing business until evening. With more favorable weather, the business for that day would have been the best ever recorded.

Many sales were made during the last week and several big funerals helped to clean up incoming stock so as to make room for the big New Year's day trade, which consisted mainly of put up cut flower boxes and a few flowering plants. With all the storekeepers the New Year's business amounts to a great deal, especially in case of fair weather.

On account of the continued rainy season, all outdoor work is greatly handicapped, and the landscape gardeners, especially, are naturally disgusted. Some of the local florists are picking their first Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths, which are of good quality, and in a short time there will be enough on hand to fill all demands.

Various Notes.

U. J. Virgin had a large and elegant display of flowering and foliage plants, besides his usual immense stock of cut flowers and Christmas trees. He did a rushing business.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. had a most beautiful display in the large show window and store. They report that the sales eclipsed those of any other year. They disposed of a carload of Christmas trees.

C. W. Eichling's Avenue Store never looked more attractive for the holiday trade and hardly anything was left of the big and fine stock of plants and cut flowers.

Charles Eble reported a record sale for Christmas, both in plants and cut flowers.

J. A. Newsham had a gorgeous display of orchids and other seasonable flowering and foliage plants. His business for 1911 was far ahead of any other year, especially in the line of orchids.

Abele Bros. were well prepared to meet the demands and were well satisfied with the business done.

Peter Chopin did a rushing business and nearly cleaned out his big stock of plants and cut flowers.

Herman Doescher had a fine lot of poinsettias and other seasonable plants, of which he readily disposed at a good figure.

A. Alost carried the largest stock of Christmas plants in years and reported a splendid business.

Henry Rehfeld, the cemetery florist, was well satisfied with the Yuletide trade, considering the rainy weather.

Mrs. Carrie Rehm's show houses made a striking appearance in their holiday attire. The business was the best in years.

The Frank Floral Co. had a fine assortment of plants and cut flowers, besides a big stock of artificial baskets. Their business exceeded all expectations.

Mrs. Charles Eble, wife of the well known florist of this city, died last week, at the age of 51 years. Further particulars will be found in this week's obituary column. R. E.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

We enjoyed the grandest Christmas trade we have had in twenty years. The weather was most delightful, and on Saturday afternoon palms and ferns for decorating were delivered in the open air without any protection. This weather brought out everybody, and the florists had all they could do to wait on their customers. As usual, potted plants and fancy baskets took the lead. Poinsettias sold best, followed by cyclamens, which were in great demand. This market was well supplied with home-grown plants, although some of the stores shipped in quite a lot. Azaleas sold fairly well at good prices. Lorraine begonias sold well at a medium price, but the $10 customers were scarce. Cinerarias were not in good demand, but good plants sold at $1 each. There was a good demand for well grown Boston ferns ranging in price from $1.50 to $5, but there were only a few palms sold. There was little call for araucarias. "Too much like a Christmas tree," was the remark. There was a big demand for fern dish ferns and the supply of them ran out before Monday.

In cut flowers there was a big call for Richmond roses and the supply soon ran short. By Monday there were but few to be had, and prices ran up to $10 per dozen. The calls for Beauties were few, as the price was too high. Killarneys sold well at $2.50 to $5 per dozen. The white also sold well.

Carnations were in good supply and prices ranged from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Red brought the best price, as the call was heavy for them. Narcissi were in oversupply and were sold as low as 50 cents per dozen, but Romans were scarce. Valley sold well and was fine. Violets were plentiful at $1 per bunch or $3 per hundred and stevia sold well. Cut poinsettias went rapidly at $5 and $6 per dozen.

Greens were plentiful, but the demand was slow. Holly, holly wreaths and wild smilax were plentiful, and the demand for them was good. There was an oversupply of trees, but the call for short, bushy trees could not be filled. The sales on Christmas day were the best in twenty years for some of the flower shops.

Various Notes.

A visit to R. S. Brown & Son found everything in good growing condition. They have been quite successful with Lorraine begonias this season and will devote a new house to the growing of them next summer. Mr. Brown is much interested in producing new varieties of coleus. He already has some good varieties. Their begonias are the largest collection in this state and every new variety is tested at once. They will replace two of their old houses this summer by more up-to-date structures.

Nelson Jarrett is quite busy propagating for spring trade.

Miss Jennie Murray is well pleased with her Christmas trade. She had a good supply of everything.

The Peterson Floral Co. reports an extra good trade, with cut flowers as the best sellers. As much as $2.50 per dozen was obtained for good red carnations.

Joseph Austin reports a splendid trade, better than last year. His trade was about evenly divided between cut flowers and plants.

Arthur Newell claims his trade was extra good. Plants sold best, as the price on American Beauties was too high and his customers would not stand for it.

Mr. Freudenthal reports a splendid trade. Saturday was his best day.

One of our growers forced too many narcissi for Christmas and was forced to dump them into a large grocery, where they were sold at 50 cents per dozen.

Samuel Murray had a fine showing in his window, which was made by well grown poinsettias. His Lorraines were extra large and fine. W. H. H.

OBITUARY.

Thaddeus Clarke.

Thaddeus Clarke, a resident of Woonsocket, R. I., died at the Rhode Island hospital, Providence, December 29, from a complication of diseases. He was 76 years of age and was noted as a landscape gardener. He was born in County Cavan, Ireland, and came to this country when a young man. He was married fifty-five years ago, his wife dying forty-one years later. Six children resulted from the union, five of whom are living.

Francis H. Manchester.

Francis H. Manchester died suddenly of apoplexy December 23 at his home, 65 Constitution street, Bristol, R. I., while sitting in a chair and apparently in his usual health. Mr. Manchester was one of the best known private gardeners of that town. He was conversing with members of his family when he was stricken. He is survived by a widow and four children, a son and three daughters. He was born in Bristol, December 20, 1833. When a young man he went to Long Island, N. Y., where he remained for many years engaged as a private gardener.

Mrs. Charles Eble.

Mrs. Catharine Wagner Eble, wife of Charles Eble, one of the best-known florists in New Orleans, La., died recently at her home, 1503 Upperline street. Her death was a great shock to her family and friends, as she had been ill only a few days. She was a popular lady in her circle of friends, and was devoted to her family. A few days before her death she visited Canal street with her daughter, Miss Corinne, and on returning home complained of not feeling well. She grew worse and physicians and a nurse were summoned, but despite the efforts made it was impossible to save her life. Two years ago she suffered from a stroke of paralysis and she had never fully recovered from its effects.

Mrs. Eble leaves to mourn her death, besides her husband, three children, Corinne, Charles and Bernard. She was a member of St. Stephen's Catholic church. Besides her relatives in New Orleans, she has others in Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and other cities. She was a native of New Orleans, and was 51 years old. She was interested in charitable work and was a woman of cheerful and pleasant manners, and her loss will be felt by a large circle of friends. The funeral was attended by many members of the Horticultural Society, and a large number of beautiful floral offerings were sent by sorrowing friends.

C. L. Cross.

C. L. Cross, prominent in lumber circles, died December 31, at his residence in Riverside, Ill. Mr. Cross was 56 years of age, born in Binghamton, N. Y. He came to Chicago in 1857, and was educated in the public schools and the old Chicago university. He was formerly president and trustee of the village of Riverside, a member of the Chicago Association of Commerce, director of the Lumbermen's Association of Chicago and a member of the Union League club. A few years ago he became known to florists through his work to demonstrate the usefulness of pecky cypress. It is largely the result of Mr. Cross' exploitation that this grade of cypress now is so widely used in the trade.

J. F. Stockdorf.

Julius F. Stockdorf, for many years a florist at Leadville, Colo., but afterward a resident of Denver, died December 19 at his home, 1415 Corona street, Denver, at the age of 86 years. He made his home in Denver in 1866 and became noted as the builder and owner of hotels. In 1879 he removed to Leadville, where he was in business as a florist for twenty-two years. In 1901 he retired from business and returned to Denver. He is survived by a son, Emil Stockdorf, and by two daughters, Mrs. Effie McLister and Miss Bertha Stockdorf.

Gervase Pfordt.

Gervase Pfordt, a well-known florist of the north end, in Albany, N. Y., died recently. Funeral services were held at the family residence, 897 Broadway, and at the Sacred Heart church. The interment was at St. Agnes' cemetery. There were many beautiful offerings of flowers.

HUMFELD AMONG THE RABBITS.

Simon Humfeld, of Muncie, Ind., who recently sold his interest in the Muncie Floral Co., is enjoying a hunt at Clay Center, Kan., where he has a brother. Jackrabbits are plentiful, as the accompanying illustration will show. In one day's hunt thirty-five rabbits were bagged. Chases with greyhounds have made exciting sport.

Humfeld and the Rabbits.

Salem, O.—V. A. Cowgill, the Garfield avenue florist, recently showed his enterprise as an advertiser by announcing prominently in a local newspaper that he had leased the Garfield avenue street car for the following Saturday, and that those who so desired could obtain free transportation to his greenhouses during that day by simply stepping into the street car and informing the conductor as to their destination.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Rutland, Vt.—A new store, to be known as The Flower Shop, has been opened in the building at the head of Cottage street on West street.

Glen St. Mary, Fla.—The Glen St. Mary Nurseries have purchased an additional tract of land, comprising about 1,000 acres, and will greatly extend their nursery business.

Lowell, Mich.—The greenhouses of E. L. Kinyon, formerly located three miles out in the country, were removed to town before the beginning of the winter season, and an excellent business is being done at the new site.

Virginia, Minn.—Alfred Johnson, who began business here in a modest way about six years ago, now has a modern, substantial range of greenhouses, containing about 14,000 square feet of glass. He grows both flowers and vegetables.

Spokane, Wash.—An order has been placed by the park board for material for a large new greenhouse at Manito park. The work of construction will begin about March 1, under the direction of Superintendent of Parks John W. Duncan.

Middletown, Conn.—Henry Koehler, who now has charge of the establishment on Ferry street that was conducted for many years by the late Henry Beebe, is a florist of wide experience and is pushing the business with energy and success.

Reading, Pa.—E. H. Beears, of the Rosedale Greenhouses, estimates that the demand for flowers at Christmas and New Year's was heavier than it has been for many years. Harry J. Huesman and other local florists were also unusually well pleased with the holiday trade.

Des Moines, Ia.—It is said that Lozier The Florist recently gave rather unusual proof of his dependability in the delivery of flowers. Finding that a bunch of flowers which had been ordered for a funeral at Leon, Ia., would not be likely to arrive in time if sent by railroad, he engaged a man to make the trip, a distance of more than 100 miles, on a motorcycle. The flowers were ordered by O. E. Hull, Mr. Lozier's agent at Leon.

Fort Smith, Ark.—Geo. T. Duey, of the Electric Park Greenhouses, has opened a downtown store, which he is conducting under the name of Quality Flowers. The store is in charge of Geo. W. Rye, formerly with A. A. Pantet & Co., who have retired and passed their trade over to the Electric Park Greenhouses. Christmas business was more than could well be handled and scarcely a bloom was left unsold. Mr. Duey was so busy that, as he says, he "did not even have time to think."

Jamaica Plain, Mass.—John J. Fee, the Forest Hills street florist, has received 400,000 bulbs of various sorts from France, Germany and Japan.

Wheeling, W. Va.—A Langhans has converted his E-M-F touring car into a light delivery auto, which is doing good service and makes quite an attractive vehicle.

Hyannis, Mass.—Samuel W. Hallett has opened a new flower store on Main street, where he will handle plants, flowers, fertilizers, garden tools and nursery stock.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Hernando Floral Co. reports a fairly good Christmas business, with all salable stock pretty well cleaned out, in spite of the somewhat unfavorable weather.

Virden, Ill.—Anton Cioban, of the Virden Greenhouses, says that his Christmas and New Year's business was unquestionably better this season than in the previous two years.

Fort Madison, Ia.—Christmas trade at J. M. Auge's showed an increase of ten per cent over that of any preceding year. Plants and wreaths were the best sellers. The fineness of the weather was a great advantage.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—H. F. F. Thorup, on East Eighth South street, does not report any extraordinary amount of Christmas sales, but says that the florists' business compared favorably with other lines of trade.

Sedalia, Mo.—The Archias Floral Co. was highly pleased with the Christmas business, pronouncing it the best in the firm's experience. All cut flowers and all salable azaleas and other blooming plants were disposed of at fair prices.

Parkersburg, W. Va.—J. W. Dudley & Sons say that Christmas trade was about fifteen per cent better than the previous year. Medium priced baskets were leaders, with azaleas, begonias and cyclamens as the best plant sellers. Cut flowers of all kinds were plentiful, but violets held the lead. Holly was scarce and poor in quality, but ground pine roping and boxwood wreaths were in great demand.

Port Huron, Mich.—Matt. Ullenbruch, the well known florist of this city, was handsomely remembered on Christmas day by the members of the Grand Trunk Shops Horticultural Society, at Battle Creek. John C. Garden, who is president of the shops horticultural society, presented to Mr. Ullenbruch, in behalf of the members of the society, a solid mahogany rocker. Mr. Ullenbruch has always taken a great interest in the shop men, has given them much practical assistance and is highly esteemed by them.

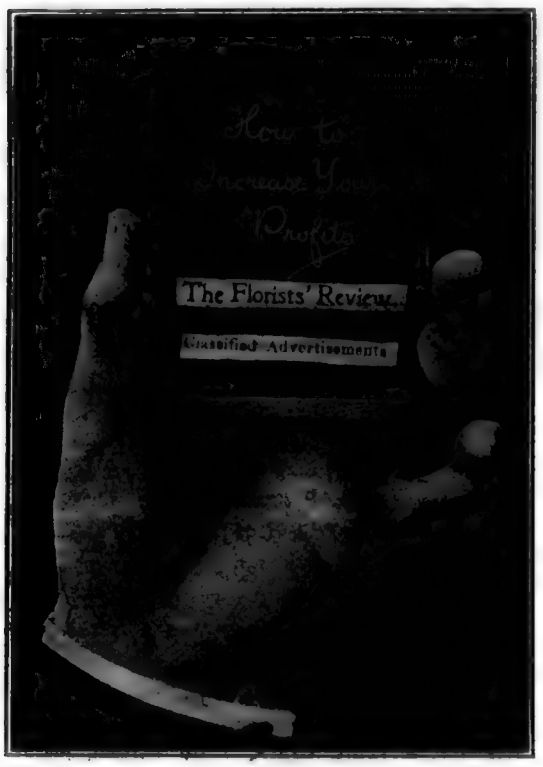
Nappanee, Ind.—"This was our third Christmas here," says C. A. Doswell, "and business was exceptionally good."

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Peter Kunst, Jr., of the Crescent Avenue Floral Co., went to Salt Lake City on business January 2.

Ottawa, Kan.—The Lester Greenhouse reports Christmas trade better than ever this year, the plant sales being particularly good.

Rapid City, S. D.—Reimers Bros. have recently completed a new Moninger greenhouse, 20 x 80, and say that Christmas business was fine.

Oshkosh, Wis.—Fugleberg & Flister say that trade has been good all fall and that Christmas business was particularly fine.



Great Barrington, Mass.—Frank Elsner, who completed his work as a florist at Brookside the first of the year, will move with his family to Pittsfield, where he will follow the same line of work.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Rudolph Mauersberger, proprietor of the Holmes Road Greenhouses, leased a vacant downtown store for use during the Christmas holidays. Mr. Mauersberger was landscape gardener on the Parsons estate at Lenox for many years.

Germantown, Pa.—R. Jamison & Son say that, though Christmas and New Year's trade was excellent last season, it was still better this year. Their poinsettias and azaleas, of which they had a large supply, were all sold at good prices and the demand was still unsatisfied.

McMinnville, Ore.—S. H. Maris, of the Pioneer Greenhouses, says that Christmas trade was good in all departments—flowers, plants and vegetables. Carnations were in heavy crop and were sold out clean. Plants and made-up work showed a gain of 100 per cent over last year. Trade, he says, was heavier than usual throughout the fall, and at the date of his report there had been no winter, aside from a few light frosts. Consequently the florists and gardeners were in good spirits.

Pierre, S. D.—The dwelling and contents owned by Herbert D. Enoe, proprietor of the Capitol Greenhouse, was destroyed by fire December 7. The house also contained florists' supplies valued at $1,000, practically all of which were ruined. Fortunately the boiler, which also supplied heat for the greenhouses and which is located in the basement, was uninjured. Following closely on the withdrawal of Boyd M. Barney, a former partner and coworker, this disaster has been a serious blow to Mr. Enoe.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

IN the year just closed The Review carried a total of 5,338 pages. The white paper consumed in the printing weighed slightly more than 185 tons.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THERE is a growing sentiment in favor of a law prohibiting railroads to own stock in express companies, or one express company to own the stock of another—but the recent convention of the National Association of Railway Commissioners brought out another idea. It was proposed that the railroads be compelled to take over the express business and carry it on at reasonable rates. It was shown, in the case of two railway companies now receiving under their contracts with the express companies fifty-five per cent of the gross revenue, that the cost of conducting the business in the case of one of these roads is 37.45 per cent of the gross amount received, and in the case of the second road the cost is 41.8 per cent of the gross amount received. In other words, the railroads pocket as profit more than half but not quite two-thirds of their income from the express business.

NAME OF PLANT.

Can The Review give me the name of a shrub of which I am forwarding a sample in this letter? The shrub is about three feet tall and hardy in New York state. J. L.

Euonymus radicans variegata.

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

At the meetings of the schedule committee of the National Sweet Pea Society, Saturday, December 9, and Thursday, December 28, 1911, President Sim presiding, the preliminary schedule for the annual exhibition and convention to be held in Boston, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, July 13 and 14, 1912, was arranged and ordered printed. The total amount of this schedule is nearly $2,500 and much enthusiasm was shown at the meetings, the prospects being that it would be the largest exhibition of sweet peas held anywhere, providing the weather conditions are favorable.

The list, which is an exceedingly comprehensive one, covering eight closely typewritten pages, will be ready for distribution in a few days and copies may be had by addressing Harry A. Bunyard, secretary, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There was no shortage of stock between Christmas and New Year's, but demand was fairly active, so that there was no surplus. Shipping trade was excellent for New Year's and the market was well cleaned up. The local demand was not so good as it would have been if the weather had been more favorable. December 30 there was rain and snow. Sunday the old year went out to the accompaniment of a genuine blizzard. New Year's day was cold but bright and enough business was done so that many of the retailers kept open all day. Nearly all the wholesalers kept open all day Sunday, as they had the Sunday before Christmas.

The special Christmas demand for red also was apparent at New Year's, the only shortages being Richmond roses and red carnations. Beauty crops, which with some growers were just a little late for Christmas, were coming on strong enough so that there was no trouble in filling New Year's orders. The prospect is that Beauties will be plentiful and cheap for the next couple of weeks. Killarneys were plentiful all last week. The long-stemmed White Killarney made more or less trouble, just as they did at Christmas. The principal demand for white is for work and the greater part of the supply for some weeks has been of a grade too long for work.

Between Christmas and New Year's carnations held up rather better than roses. During the first half of this season carnations have not come in so strongly as usual. Nor have they been in special request, the result being that the carnation has been a rather less important factor than usually has been the case. The new year starts with quality excellent.

After Christmas the violet growers ship lightly, for they need to save up for New Year's. The wholesalers who had carried violets over from Christmas, instead of slaughtering prices, were able to clean up at fair money. The violet is in special request at New Year's, but the bulk of those that came in New Year's eve were on advance orders. The prices were nearly the same as at Christmas. There was a New Year's flurry in valley. Cattleya Trianæ is coming in much stronger. Percivaliana is on the wane. The glut of Paper Whites is said to be over. Lilies are not abundant, but the buyers have become so accustomed to low prices that it is difficult to make an

ANY LENGTH OF STEM. ANY QUANTITY.

Were you disappointed on Beauties for Christmas? If you were, you didn't order of us—We filled all our Beauty orders in full. We get our supply from several large and skillful growers. They never are all off crop at once. Think a minute what that means to you? You always can depend on us.

The present crop is exceptionally large, quality the best, and includes all lengths of stem.

VIOLETS

Supply and Demand Both Center Here

Those who know this market recognize our house as Violet headquarters. Single or double, you will get the cream of the crops if you order of us. It is none too soon to begin thinking of St. Valentine's Day—the Violet's the flower.

KILLARNEYS

White and Pink

These are in good crop and we can supply as fine stock as this market ever saw, in quantity, for weeks to come. In fact, we never have been so well fixed to fill all orders as we are this January.

Cattleya Trianae

Our Cattleyas are of the very choicest quality. If YOUR trade knows Orchids, you should show these. A fine, large crop is just coming on.

CARNATIONS

We have a heavy cut of Carnations, and the quality is right up to top notch—no danger of not getting your order filled if you send it to us.

advance. A great many greenhouses are planted with sweet peas, but the pick thus far has been light. Romans are overplentiful.

Greens sold well after Christmas—boxwood, Mexican ivy and plumosus bunches. There is little call for smilax or asparagus strings.

Chicago to Detroit.

P. J. Foley, chairman of the Florists' Club's transportation committee, states that arrangements have been made to go to Detroit via the Wabash, leaving at 11 p. m. January 9 and arriving at Detroit at 7:30 a. m. on the day of the opening of the rose and carnation shows. It is expected that a special car will be filled.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will elect officers at the Bismarck hotel tonight, January 4.

Albert Fuchs, owner of the Chateau apartments, Sheridan road and Clarendon avenue, has purchased from the Lehmann estate the vacant forty-five feet in Grace street opposite the Bismarck, with a depth of 486 feet, running through to Sheridan road, for $40,000. Mr. Fuchs is said to have acquired the property for the purpose of furnishing his tenants with garage accommodations, children's playgrounds, lawn tennis court and laundry. On the Sheridan road frontage he will erect six twelve-room apartments.

George Wienhoeber says that in the three days before Christmas the Fleischman Floral Co. used 110,000 violets. When they make up corsages for a holiday the entire force works at it, each person performing a single operation. In one hour Christmas morning they used up 55,000 violets. It paid so well to keep open all day Sunday before Christmas that the same course was followed the last day of the year.

Fred Fischer, 2737 North Clark street, who is the champion bowler, is doing a fine business. Between pick-ups and deliveries his automobile is kept on the go.

Wietor Bros. have just signed a new lease on their store in the Atlas block. They have occupied the same room fifteen years, E. F. Winterson being the only other wholesaler who has stayed a longer time in one place. Winterson has been paying rent to the McCormicks for close to a quarter of a century.

The Chicago Carnation Co. has entered in nearly all the carnation classes at Detroit next week.

At E. H. Hunt's stock-taking was begun December 29. Inventorying a stock of florists' supplies is a big job, but they put it through in short order.

Miss A. L. Tonner is proud of the long-handled, gold-headed umbrella that came as a New Year's gift from the employees in the supply department of the A. L. Randall Co.

Probably the youngest old florist in Chicago is Harry Manheim, of Hoerber Bros. He started in the business when 7 years old, as delivery boy for Jegen, then located on Washington street. That, Mr. Manheim says, was twenty-eight years ago.

A. Henderson & Co. say it is surprisingly easy to take orders—no trouble at all. A. Miller is at Detroit and G. Reburn at Denver.

Henry Wittbold is planning to build greenhouses at Evanston in the spring.

January 1 Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, celebrated the twelfth anniversary of his start in the trade. He began with George Reinberg, who

WHITE LILAC

We shall have our annual crop of Fancy White Lilac ready by the end of the present week. The grower says it will be fully as good as in other years—and it always has made a hit—the fanciest flower in the market. $1.50 per bunch.

Killarneys

Buyers agree that OUR Killarneys are the finest in Chicago. A big cut is on and we can supply all lengths at moderate prices.

Violets

This is the time of year when those who try can do a big business in Corsage Bouquets of Violets. We can supply fine Double or Single in quantity.

Beauties

Our stock is fine and we have a large cut. Can take good care of all orders, no matter what length of stem is called for.

then was in the store now occupied by John Kruchten, next door to Kyle & Foerster's.

Tim Matchen reports that Peter Reinberg's longest shipment for Christmas was to Calgary, Alberta. The box left Chicago December 19 and was five days on the road. A letter has been received stating that the stock had traveled well.

John Zech says he never is disappointed in New Year's—because he doesn't expect much. This year the shipping surprised him.

Max Ringier, who is buyer for Vaughan & Sperry, says he can not recall a Christmas when it was so easy for the wholesalers to pick up the items needed to complete orders.

There are an unusual number of vacant stores available for wholesaling cut flowers. In addition to several spaces on Michigan avenue, which were brought into consideration by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association opening there, there is a vacant store in the Atlas block, on the second floor, next to Peter Reinberg. Poehlmann Bros. Co. will vacate the store in the basement within a few days. A part of the fine, light Percy Jones floor still is vacant. The basement so long the home of the E. C. Bassett & Washburn have begun to cut from Formosa lily bulbs of the 1911 crop and say they are the cleanest lot of bulbs they ever have seen, possibly two per cent diseased.

E. E. Pieser and wife leave January 7 for a trip to Philadelphia and New York. Mr. Pieser was 49 years of age New Year's day.

The Market.

A cold snap with ice and snow made last week most seasonable and much more like holiday time. The spirit of Christmas and the holidays, which seemed lacking ten days ago, is surely here now, and social functions are numerous indeed. There were several large receptions booked for New Year's day and there were a number of smaller affairs, several weddings and dinners for January 1. Business in general kept right up even after Christmas. A great many funerals have kept downtown florists busy during the week. The rush preceding Christmas was somewhat broken because Christmas came on Monday; however, it was the same trying circumstance of overworked clerks and employees. One enterprising florist in Buffalo had a day and a night shift, thus making it easier all around, and he got much more work out of his men and much better service, to say nothing about the good cheer and friendly feeling between employer and employees.

Flowering plants and fancy baskets are still selling well. Poinsettias were in great demand this year, the demand in some cases being greater than the supply. Lorraine begonias did not have the run this year that they usually do. Araucarias, ardisias and cyclamens were in great favor and brought big prices.

Boxwood balls were popular during the holidays, brightened with winter berries and red ribbon, ruscus and red immortelles. Artificial poinsettias seemed to be a thing of the past, as few were sold. They have been cheapened in the eye of the more artistic public.

Various Notes.

R. A. Fry has entered the employ of E. C. Campbell.

Clarence Razor put in Christmas week with the Rochester Floral Co., and so did Mr. Lester.

Salter Bros. say that they cannot complain about the holiday trade—it was up to par, but somehow lacked the spirit of Christmas. Their poinsettias were better than for several years.

The carnations at the conservatory of Mrs. Thompson, Canandaigua, N. Y., are at their best.

Geo. Kramer is again in Buffalo with S. A. Anderson.

Geo. B. Hart is rejoicing over the fact that he found a fifty dollar check in his Christmas stocking.

Geo. J. Keller is growing mignonette this winter, which is about ready to cut.

John Vollmer spent Wednesday, December 27, in Buffalo doing a table decoration for J. B. Keller Sons.

E. C. Campbell reports that Christmas business was good this year.

Geo. T. Boucher says that his Christmas trade was just a little below the average and that individuals did not make as large purchases as usual.

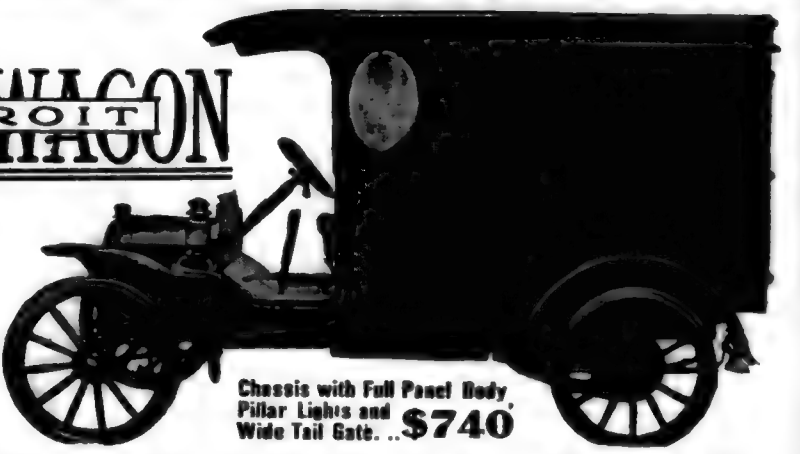
Billy Dunbar and Duckie Holmes helped out at J. B. Keller's last week.

The Rochester Floral Co. did a fine business during the holidays, and R. Wilson says he believes the receipts will exceed those of last year.

J. Muller, of Rutherford, N. J., has started out on his trip for the new year and made Rochester one of his first stops. He expects to have a good year, he says.

J. B. Keller Sons did a good business during the holidays and had a big wedding decoration December 26.

Alex. Keller was home from Cornell for the holidays.



Geo. Bennett's Christmas carnations were fine, but he had only a few red ones.

At Hart's commission house, they were quite well cleaned out of flowers and plants at Christmas time. Mr. Hart handled a great deal of wreathing and holly.

The Wilsons are showing some first-class red, yellow and white tulips.

Maurer-Haap Co. did a big business for Christmas in Boston ferns, cyclamens and begonias. Their business in greens and wreathing was not as large this year as last. Their new concrete block shed was completed just before Christmas. It is well ventilated and lighted by electricity, having double doors and windows. They do a big

Top-Notch Growers Wanted at Once

¶ We are in the market for the services of two growers who are experts in their line—one for our Carnation section and one for our Rose section. We want a man for each of these departments who is capable of taking entire charge of same. Men must thoroughly know their business and have best of references and be strictly sober. business in evergreens for spring planting and in February they expect to receive a carload of rhododendrons, azaleas, Colorado blue spruce and boxwood trees. A large number of small fruit trees and shrubs are heeled in, in this new storage shed.

H. E. Wilson did a greater amount of business this year than last, it is reported.

James Vick's Sons are wholesaling and retailing Boston ferns at present, but they had no special run on anything for the holidays.

H. B. Stringer is busy getting out announcements for the next meeting of the Florists' Association, to take place early in January. E. C. A.

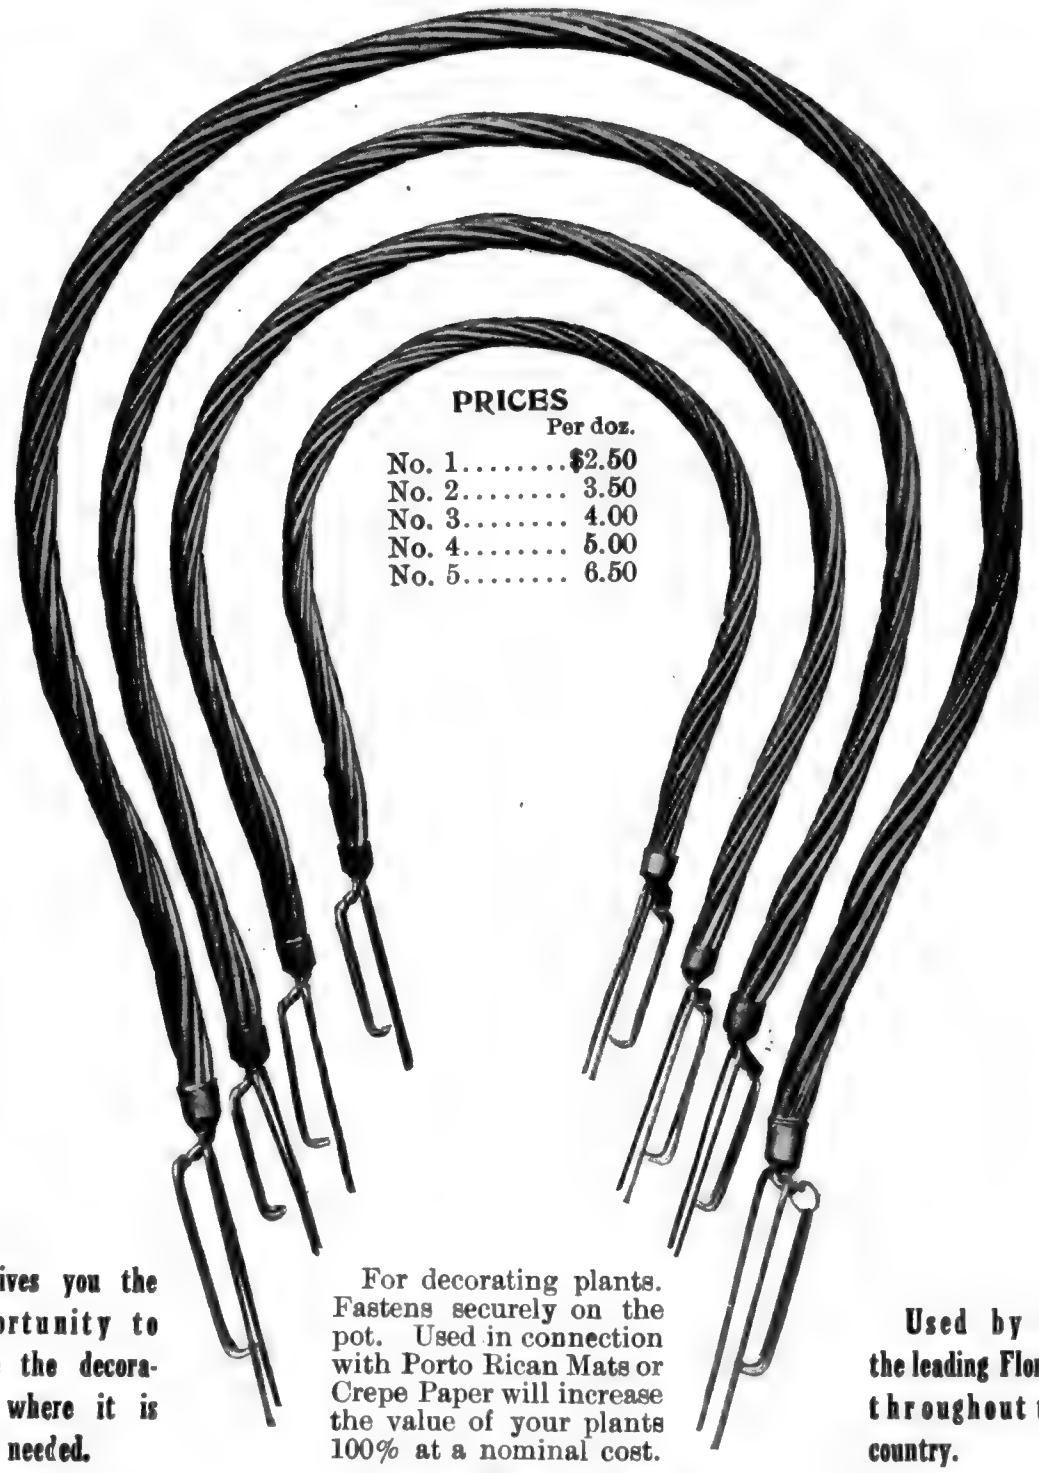
CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Holiday week business was good as a whole, the demand for pink and red being much heavier than for white flowers. Warm weather throughout the week, even though rainy and inclement generally, made deliveries easy for the florists, for the plants and boxes required only ordinary wrapping. The beginning of this week brought bright, sunny, cold weather.

In roses Killarney was easily the most popular. The long ones of this variety were used to a large extent in place of American Beauties. This latter flower was short of the call and brought top prices. The supply of red was fair and included Richmond and Rhea Reid. The supply of white was large and managed to clean up fairly well.

Practically all carnations sold up nicely. Red, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress, Lawson-colored varieties and white cleaned up in the order named. Some of the culls and poorer stock were left, but the good blooms sold in a hurry.



The supply of choice poinsettias for New Year's was rather short. The growers cut practically all their really good stock to meet the Christmas and early holiday demand and as a result the offerings were not nearly as heavy as usual. Bulbous stock added another to its list last week, namely, jonquils. The supply, however, is as yet limited. Narcissi and Romans drag continually and have not effected an entire clean-up for some time. Both Easter lilies and callas are proving good property, at only fair prices.

Other flowers offered include double and single violets, valley, orchids and

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business in the cut flower market during the holidays was gratifying. There was a steady demand from Christmas until the end of the year at prices that showed little falling off from those quoted a week ago. This was in direct contrast to last year's conditions, when an overstocked Christmas market remained depressed for more than a fortnight afterward. New Year's proved decidedly more than an ordinary good Saturday, as some had predicted; there was plenty of business December 30 at excellent prices, with the supply of red roses and red carnations short of the demand. New Year's day itself was a busy one, while the two days following have shown no signs of the dullness anticipated. This may be due to the shortness of the season; just seven weeks from today will bring Lent.

The Beauty crops are going off. Prices continue excellent, although there is no large demand. Richmond also is going off crop, but the Killarneys are in full swing, the medium grades selling best. Carnations advanced a little in price at New Year's, receding the day after. The wholesalers differ in their views of the crop; some say it is coming on heavily, while others see no indications of an increase at present. Violets have been in fair demand, especially so when the colder weather, at times stormy, is considered. Valley is in brisk demand. Gardenias are selling, but the supply appears to be in excess of the requirements. This is true to a lesser degree of cattleyas. There still are poinsettias about. Bouvardia is over, or practically so. There is some fine snapdragon in the market, which commands excellent prices. Daffodils are selling well, but Paper Whites and Romans are unsatisfactory. The demand for fine greens is better than at Christmas; even smilax is feeling the improvement.

The shipping orders are going out briskly. Much of the fine stock is sent out daily through a large area of territory. The ball season is in active progress, four large balls during the last week consuming much choice material.

Violets, single and double, are very fine.
Easter Lilies are one of our specialties.

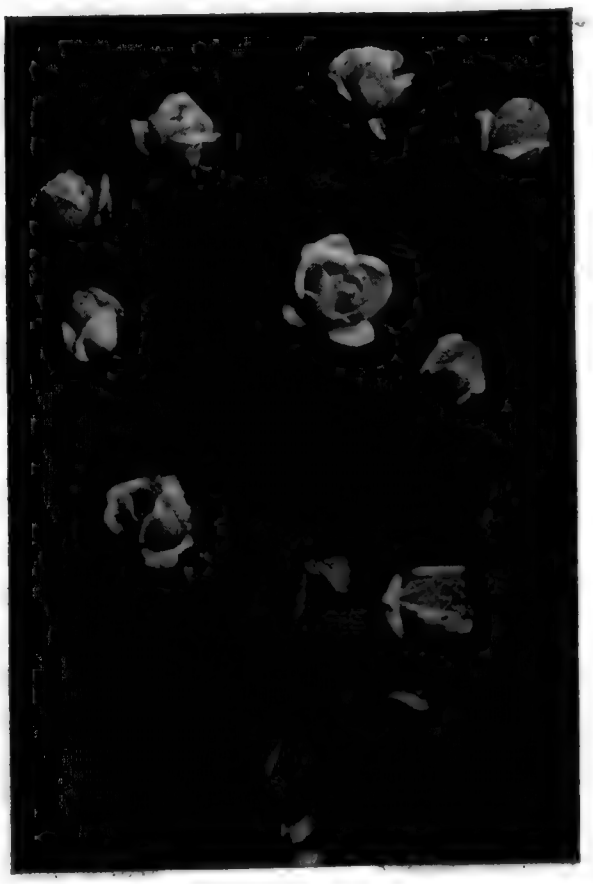
Edward A. Stroud, of Overbrook and of Strafford, will attend the Detroit meeting of the American Carnation Society January 10.

Charles H. Grakelow gave a talk on floral conditions abroad before the Florists' Club January 2. Mr. Grakelow is one of the brightest of the younger members.

Leo Niessen will act as one of the judges of roses at the exhibition of the American Rose Society in Detroit next week.

The death of Mrs. Henry I. Faust, of Marion, which occurred New Year's day, has cast a shadow over the floral world.



It is stated on excellent authority that a new flower booth will be erected on the north side of Market street, east of City hall, between the Childs restaurant and the cigar store. This is evidently a move of one of our enterprising street merchants to secure himself against move-on orders from the police.

G. C. Watson asserts that increased Christmas business can only be gauged by increased cash receipts.

William Foster, of Westerly, R. I., was here looking over the Christmas output of the leading growers. Mr. Foster, who is brother-in-law to Samuel S. Pennock, was accompanied by his foreman.

Alfred M. Campbell has moved from Swarthmore to Collingdale; his new home is close to the Collingdale Greenhouses.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The Christmas week maintained an encouragingly steady market, with values naturally on a considerably lower level than the holiday itself provided, but satisfactory, nevertheless, to the majority of the growers and causing no serious complaint from the retailers, who had an excellent business throughout the week. The universal verdict seems to be: "The best Christmas the retailers of the big city have had in a generation." The finest of weather continued until the middle of the week, and good, seasonable temperature is here for the New Year's greeting. The greatest break of the Christmas holidays was in the price of valley and orchids. Valley accumulated all the week and orchids were for sale by the street merchants on Christmas day.

The shipments of stock during the last week have been comparatively light, and this has held prices at their present level. The usual January decline is anticipated, now that New Year's is over. Beauties are not overabundant, but Christmas levels could not be maintained. The best fell to 50 cents and under. All varieties of roses are arriving in sufficient volume for the demand, with a probable surplus of Brides, Maids and Killarneys. Good Richmonds bring record prices, and there are not enough of them. Carnations are selling well and the market could use more of the higher grades. The prices are well maintained and the new kinds meet with popular favor.

Lilies have held well at Christmas prices. Valley moves slowly, as do all white flowers, and no advance is probable. There are a lot of mediocre gardenias offered, only the long-stemmed and perfect stock going above $3 a dozen. Lilac is becoming abundant, and there are plenty of sweet peas of splendid quality and length of stem. The top price all the week for violets has been 75 cents, and that only for specials. Many thousands sold at 50 cents and under per hundred. The mild weather spoiled the stock for Christmas. of taking the Wolverine special on the New York Central on the evening of January 9.

The first meeting of the New York Florists' Club for 1912 will be held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, on Monday evening, January 8. There will be exhibits, refreshments, the inauguration of the new officers and the announcements of the new committees. The annual dinner this year will be in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the club's existence and will be the most elaborate in the club's history. The new president is already hustling for new members and deserves the send-off of a large attendance on Monday evening.

The bowlers of the club will meet at Thum's alleys at 3 p. m. on Monday, as usual.

Congratulations are extended to Herman Berkowitz, one of Young & Nugent's staff, on his approaching marriage, January 14, to Miss Beatrice Wagner, at Herrington hall, 214 Second street, New York.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to the Gunther brothers in the loss of their sister, Mrs. Arneth, wife of Lieutenant Arneth, of New York.

Matthews' fine Freesia Purity is now in the market, handled by Phil Kessler.

Fancy and Dagger Ferns Green and Bronze Leucothoe

Just before Christmas we got started in our fifth year of handling Decorative Evergreens, but this year we have left off Galax entirely, which enables us to give more special attention to Ferns and Leucothoe.

We have secured a tremendous stock of absolutely fresh "A-1" stock of both Fancy and Dagger Ferns, extra length, extra quality; Green and Bronze Leucothoe, the best and largest the country produces.

We pack all goods in neat, dry boxes, made from thin poplar, which adds but little weight to the goods. If quality is the first thing you want, then you cannot afford to fail to give us a trial order.

	Per 1000
Fancy Ferns	$1.00
Dagger Ferns	1.00
Green Leucothoe, long size	2.50
Green Leucothoe, short but large	1.25
Bronze Leucothoe, assorted lengths	3.00

We allow discounts to suit the size of your order, and always guarantee every shipment. Give us a trial, your credit is good with us (unless you have beat us in the past).

STEM-ROT OF RADISHES.

Will you please give me some advice as to what to do with the radishes in my greenhouse? The plants rot off just above the ground. The stems seem to get black and fall right over.

W. K.

Your radishes are attacked by the common stem-rot or damping-off fungus, which spreads rapidly over the surface of the soil. Pull up the diseased plants; scrape off the top of the soil where they grew and throw it out. Then scatter some air-slaked lime dust over the surface of the soil, to prevent the spreading of the disease.

If the soil is pretty wet when the seed comes up or soon afterward, this disease is likely to appear, especially if there is manure or rotted matter showing on the top of the soil. Do not water until really necessary. Keep the ventilators open a little. H. G.

These Three Booklets and Catalogue are mailed free on request to particular planters. May we send you one or all?

Tomato Facts tells why Livingston's Famous Tomatoes are ahead of all others. Relates how we grow tons of tomato seeds every year. Splendidly illustrated from photographs.

Profitable Onions is a sure guide to big onion profits. Describes the finest strains and sorts of American onions and tells how we produce them on our farms.

Seed Specialties reviews all important vegetables originally introduced by us, except tomatoes. This booklet proves that "true blue" seeds have helped to make gardening pay better.

Retail and Wholesale Catalogues for 1912 are now in the mails. Our regular customers receive them unsolicited. To others they are mailed free on request, and they are well worth the one-cent stamp it takes to get them. Livingston's Seed Annual is a fine book of 130 pages, illustrated throughout from photographs. Dependable descriptions and illustrations make the book a safe guide to varieties, types and strains. Wholesale Price List supplies fair prices for quality seeds. Write for both catalogues and choice of booklets today.

CLEVELAND.

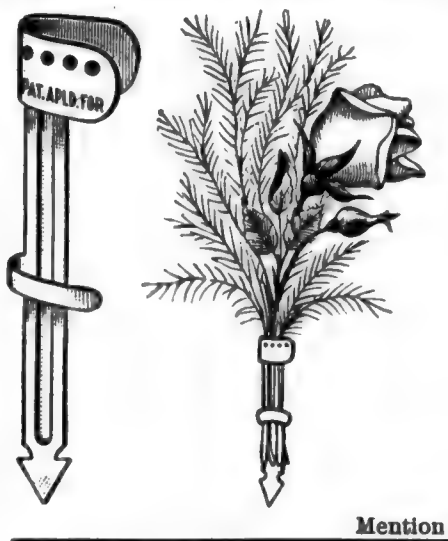
The Market.

The holiday season just past has been the best for all-around business that the local florists have enjoyed for several years; stock of all kinds cleaned up every day.

Killarney roses, while lacking in color just before Christmas, came in fine at the last minute and for the last ten days have been all that could be desired. Richmond was in good crop, but the call for red roses was heavy and nearly all of the retailers oversold and had a hard time to fill all orders for this color. Carnations were about equal to demand and the quality was good. Violets were plentiful, but the surprise of the week was that, although the warm, open weather was just suited to the wearing of corsages, the demand was not what was expected.

Pot plants of all kinds sold well; some of the stores resembled Easter in this respect, as the quality and quantity of azaleas, begonias, etc., were away above the standard usually seen at this season of the year. Poinsettias grown in pans were scarce and not as good as usual, but there were plenty of the cut ones in all grades up to $8 retail and they sold well; never before have we had such a good year for this grand flower.

A few French Trumpets are on the market and sell on sight, and some early tulips in red, yellow and white are noted, but the stems are short. White roses, white carnations and Paper White narcissi, which usually go slowly at this season, were all sold out at good prices. Valley was scarce and the quality not what it should have been.



Various Notes.

Cleveland expects to have a special car to Detroit for the rose and carnation meetings, leaving the night of January 9. About twenty florists have signified their intention of going, and any downstate florists who wish to meet the boys here and go on this car will please notify Frank Friedley, Rocky River, O., secretary of the Florists' Club, and space will be reserved for them.

Don't forget the next bowling night of the club league, Monday, January 8, at 2610 Detroit street. "The Christmas Bells," with Charles Graham, captain, meet "The Corsage Bouquets," Herbert Bate, captain.

S. S. Skidelsky was a recent visitor.

SEFTON FLORISTS' BOXES

CORRUGATED DESIGN STYLE AND FOLDING CUT FLOWER BOXES

Florists' success in shipping flowers depends to the greatest extent upon the point where their interest ceases in the sale of flowers. The progressive, prosperous florist retains his interest in a customer's order until it reaches destination, and for that reason he is careful to select the proper style and grade of box to insure safe delivery of his flowers.

Particular Florists are users of Sefton Corrugated Fibreboard Boxes for the shipment of Floral Designs as well as our superior line of Folding Cut Flower Boxes. They know from experience that Sefton Boxes combine high quality with low price and make neat, attractive packages which carry the flowers safely to destination. Write for our Flower Box Price List.

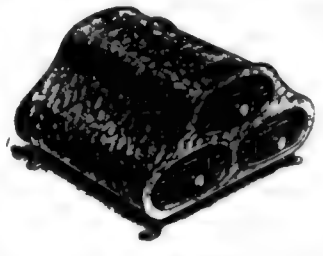
LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business for the holidays has been away ahead of previous years and the local craft is wearing "the smile that won't come off." The weather man was fairly good to us, giving us a bunch of mild weather December 23, 24 and Christmas day, and little wrapping was needed, which no doubt was a big lift to the store people. Although plants are becoming more popular for Christmas each year, cut flowers are still the leading factor, and top prices were realized on everything, with all lines a little short of demand.

Violets, valley, orchids and gardenias were the one best bet for corsage work, and Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward came in for a good call in the same line, but the supply of them was rather short. Poinsettias were in good shape, but demand for them was not as good as in previous years, although made up in pans and baskets they had a good season; in fact, the nice, short plants were a little scarce. Other plants, such as azaleas, begonias, rhododendrons and pans of valley, were cleaned out, as well as the various berried plants.



Holly and other Christmas greens were a little short of demand, holly especially, as there was none to be had after Friday. On the whole, it was of better quality than in former years. Quantities of winter berries were disposed of.

Funeral work since Christmas has kept all lines of stock cleaned up and prices have not changed much during the week. Several social functions for New Years's eve and day kept local decorators on the jump and some nice jobs were sent out. K. R.

Coldwater, Mich.—Van Aken Bros. say holiday trade was a little ahead of last year, with plants leading.

INSURANCE OF YOUR PLANTS FROM FREEZING in cold weather may be obtained at trifling cost if you will use a

Lehman Wagon Heater

There is no danger of fire; no smoke, dirt or gases to injure the plants. They burn Lehman Coal, which costs less than half a cent per hour. 400,000 Lehman Heaters are in use, which clearly shows they have merit. Florists everywhere use and recommend them Have you one? Beware of imitations! Write for circular telling more about them.

Seven Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?
